Have you heard the Buzz?

THE BAITING HOLLOW CLUB

We've just added 52 acres of rolling terrain to the Robert Trent Jones, Sr. designed Fox Hill Golf Course. Hart/Howerton Architects, known locally for the Clubhouse design of the Atlantic Golf Club and the new Sebonack Golf Club, are designing our new clubhouse. The new clubhouse, practice facility, carts, and parking will all be accessible from a new private entrance off Warner Drive. Renowned golf course architects Hurdzan-Fry are helping with redesigning and improving our golf course to accommodate the new clubhouse and other facilities.

It's going to be the Baiting Hollow Club and it will be the

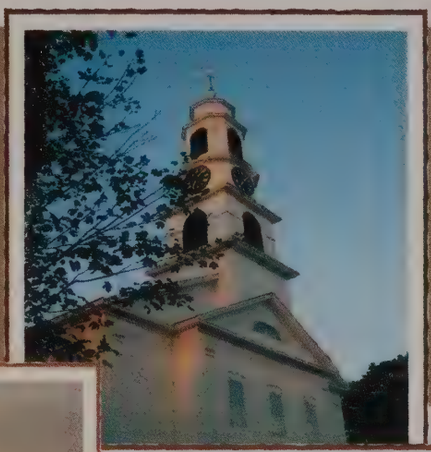
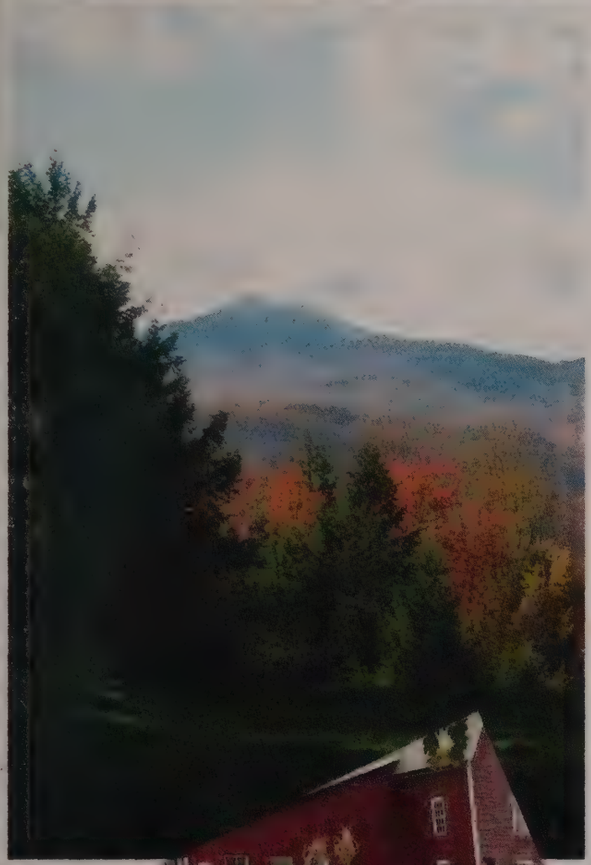
Vermont Connection





We love Vermont as much as you do: from the first snowfall of winter, through the myriad reds and golds of autumn, and every day that goes between. Vermont's serenity and the beauty of its mountains, lakes, and rolling visages, make it an ideal place to live, play, or simply while away the hours.

Imagine finding that special place in Vermont to call your very own without having to leave New York; without having to spend months, or even years searching to no avail.

Vermont Connections, together with its Vermont affiliates Vermont Built and Vermont Built Realty, offers a broad range of real estate and construction services.

That one of a kind house, trail side retreat or picturesque lake cottage is waiting for you.

John Edward Gill

SACRED HEARTS

Set in Paris, SACRED HEARTS concerns a young college professor with a congential heart problem which he doesn't want to pass on to a child. Yet his fiancee wants his child anyway.

"The Papa Joe look-alike contests in Key West come to mind when reading Sacred Hearts. It is not that Gill looks much like Ernest Hemingway on the book-jacket picture, but that his writing style resembles Hemingway's so much.

Bill Townsend and Nicole Berman, the two main characters in the book, are lovers. Bill has a congenital heart condition, while Nicole has a nearly fatalautomobile accident during the course of the story.

The action alternates between Paris and Long Island … the physical settings are described in exquisite detail.

Gill, who is an English professor on Long Island and previously worked as a journalist and editor, has a great ability to write dialogue; he succeeds in telling nearly the entire story in this fashion.

In this novel no detail about physical locales is omitted."

--ForeWordreviews.com.

"The lean, bravery-in-the-face-of-doom dialogue is reminiscent of Hemingway and reinforces the gulf between dreams and reality."

--Literary Magazine Review

"Not to miss! John Gill's book exemplifies a strong talent for characterization and narrative. Timely for its social issues and at the same time fast, enjoyable reading. Gill follows a strongtradition. If Hemingway was not a mentor, he was clearly an inspiration."

--Kimberly Goff

"A beautifully told tale, Sacred Hearts captures exquisite details of setting -- the tourist's Paris has never looked more beautiful to a reader's eye -- and suggests the extreme strain a man dying too young has to deal with through parsimonious dialogue and plainspoken butpowerful descriptive scraps."

Summer Loire Valley Favorites On Sale

"Jean Sauvion produces some attractive examples [of Loire Wines] at remarkably low prices," comments Frank Prial, wine editor of The New York Times.

The wines we list below are from the much heralded firm of Sauvion et Fils, headed by our dear friend Jean Sauvion, who is affectionately known as the "Wine Wizard of the Loire."

LOIRE WHITE WINE	SALE BOTTLE	SALE CASE
ANJOU BLANC 2003	7.29	87.48

Sauvion Produced from Chenin Blanc grown on limestone-rich soil, this delightful white is crisp and dry with very pleasing, soft fruit. It is the perfect introduction to Loire Valley wines. (4469)

CHARDONNAY "JARDIN DE LA FRANCE" 2003 6.95 83.40

Sauvion Chardonnay, one of the world's most popular varietals, has a different twist in the Loire. Crisp, floral and light, this Loire-styled Chardonnay is a delightful surprise to the more traditional, fruity wines produced elsewhere. (4460)

LOIRE SUMMER SAMPLER $117.95
Twelve Bottles - Consists of one of each of the nine whites and three reds shown here bearing an asterisk (*)

CLER' BLANC 5.69 68.28

Sauvion "This crisp, sprightly white is a crowd-pleaser...It's dry but very fruity, quite light, with a slight tingle on the palate. Sauvion manages to capture this clean, lilting freshness year after year - I guess that's why he's known as 'the wine wizard of Loire.'" -Barbara Ensrud (484)

GROS PLANT "CHATEAU DU CLERAY" 2003 7.95 95.40

Sauvion Crisp and bone dry, this refreshing and aromatic white displays pleasing lemon flavors. (4521)

Call, write, visit, fax or e-Mail our store for a FREE COPY of our 84-page Summer Catalogue featuring The Museum of Wine in Art at Chateau Mouton Rothschild

MUSCADET "LA NOBLERAIE" 2003 7.95 95.40

Sauvion This dry and easily quaffable white from the western Loire makes a great partner to seafood. (4466)

POUILLY-FUME "LES OMBELLES" 2004 15.79 189.48

QUINCY "LES GLANEUSES" 2003 9.95 119.40

Sauvion Made from the distinguished Sauvignon Blanc and similar in style to Sancerre, Quincy is very dry with refreshing acidity. (4471)

SANCERRE "LES BRULIS" 2004 15.79 189.48

Sauvion An aromatic and elegant wine, this full-bodied Sancerre displays an uncommon finesse. Exotic bouquet of jasmine mingles with herbaceous fruit and lively flavors. (4463)

TOURAINE "LES GENETS" 2003 7.49 89.88

Sauvion Created from Sauvignon Blanc, it is similar in taste to a Pouilly-Fume or Sancerre. An herbal, lean-styled wine, this has a clean, mouthwatering finish. (4468)

VOUVRAY "VALLEE DE LOIRE" 2003 7.79 93.48

Sauvion Here is an easy to drink, fresh, soft and smoothly textured wine made from the Chenin Blanc. Honeyed fruit and flora aromas make this very refreshing. (4467)

LOIRE ROSE & RED WINE
BOURGUEIL "VALLEE DE LA LOIRE" 2003	9.95	119.40

Sauvion A juicy Cabernet Franc that is perfect when lightly chilled. Try this with roast chicken or even broiled salmon. (4428)

CHINON "LES ROCHES CACHEES" 2003 10.95 131.40

Sauvion This fresh, fruity and delicious red comes from the picturesque, medieval fortress town that rises above the river Vienne. (4473)

ROSE DE LOIRE "CHEMIN DE SAULES" 2003 8.49 101.88

SAUMUR-CHAMPIGNY "GRAVIERES DU ROY" 2003 10.95 131.40

Sauvion An intensely fruity and herbaceous red that is made from Cabernet Franc, the Saumur Champigny was the preferred red wine of Edward VII. (4424)

■ "A wine aficionado's paradise," this legendary Madison Avenue purveyor, once again the Survey's No.1 store in its category, is lauded for its "deep, deep selection" that while "strongest in high-end Bordeaux" (find "that double magnum of '82 Lafite-Rothschild") is "comprehensive" in all regions and price points, including nearly 400 options under $10; rest assured, "even if you don't look rich and want an inexpensive bottle of Beaujolais," the staff will be "helpful," but if you can't stop by, or are frustrated that only a "fraction of the bottles are on display," they "have a great Web site" and catalog, both of which include lots of accessories.

Steel Tank and Four Stores in Sag Harbor to be Taken Down

By Dan Rattiner

If plans go ahead as put forth by our local power company, a bulldozer will be coming to Sag Harbor to flatten four stores in the downtown section of the community. The four stores are Sag Harbor Video, Harbor Pets, New Creations and Sag Harbor Parties, all located on Bay Street across from the 7-Eleven and next to the Post Office. (The Post Office will be spared.)

The reason these four stores will be knocked down, according to the KeySpan subsidiary of the Long Island Power Authority which made the announcement, was SuperFund Planning. Although none of these stores sits atop a SuperFund site, they sit adjacent to a recently found SuperFund site that, underground, is slowly seeping chemicals through the groundwater and, in twenty years or a hundred years, could find its way under these stores.

That there was a SuperFund problem in Sag Harbor on the lot adjacent to these stores was not known until 1999. At that time, scientists for the Federal Government, sniffing around, sent test borings down into the earth below the big thirty foot tall blue ball that, although no longer used, was for many years the storage facility for natural gas supplies for the Sag Harbor Community. The unused ball remains today a navigation point for passing ships. Also in a famous incident in 1949, it was covered with a drip painting by none other than Jackson Pollock. It was the pride of the town until the power company sent a crew in to paint it over with the blue paint that remains on it today.

It was never revealed exactly what they found under the blue ball — the gas itself does not pollute the ground — but for the fifty years that the ball was being used, big delivery trucks with FLAMMABLE written on the side used to back up to it and get their tanks refilled so they could drive around town and supply the different businesses and residences that used natural gas. Local science officials say that materials such as benzene, toluene, ethylbenzene, xylenes, pyrene and naphthalene from the trucks may have gotten into the ground during the refilling process.

SuperFund sites are earmarked for cleanup by the Federal Government, as you know. But with the modest funding provided over the years, particularly since the cutbacks of the Bush Administration, it was clear that as a Johnny-Come-Lately SuperFund site, this site would very likely get nothing for many years in the future, and so the best thing would be to buy the nearby commercial building toward which the underground pollution was headed and tear them down, so that, in twenty or fifty or a hundred years, whenever they got around to processing the dirt and removing the contaminants, there wouldn't be a further problem.

The announcement of the decision to bulldoze down the four stores came just one week ago in an announcement from Keyspan. Also announced was the long delayed plan to remove the old blue gas ball. The whole place would be made into a worksite for the extrac-

South O' the Highway (and the North too)

Brad Pitt has rented a house in Southampton for September and October. Brad's lady friend of late, Angelina Jolie, has been in Nassau County for the past couple of weeks filming The Good Shepherd with Robert DeNiro and Matt Damon.

Congratulations to East Hampton's Jerry and Jessica Seinfeld of East Hampton. Last week they welcomed their third child, Shepherd Kellen Seinfeld, into their family.

Last weekend, Robert Downey Jr. had to move his wedding to Susan Levin from "The Creeks" in East Hampton to a rented house in Amagansett. The notoriously private Ron Perelman, who owns "The Creeks," balked when he learned that photographs from the ceremony were to be released to the press. But the last minute change didn't seem to bother the 110 guests, including Keanu Reeves, who arrived on a motorcycle, and Lorraine Bracco, who enjoyed a post-wedding brunch at JL East in East Hampton.

tion of the contaminants, whenever that might be. But for now, the initial funds were going to be earmarked for the purchase of the buildings and the removal of the ball. Where would the money come from? Perhaps from increased costs in your LIPA bill. Perhaps from a grant from the Federal Government – see your tax bill. The owners of the buildings would be compensated for their loss, though the tenants within, who are there on leases, will not. They will have to relocate or go out of business when their leases terminate.

None of the four business owners were happy about the announcement. We also spoke to numerous customers and passersby about the development as well and none of them were happy with this either.

"This is not a good thing for this town," one customer said. "It's stores like these that contribute to the vibrancy and diversity of the community."

"What will they tear down next?" said a man on a bicycle. "Why don't they clear the site and remove the contaminants NOW so these stores wouldn't be involved later?"

An older man wondered if the 7Eleven were safe. Or if the contaminants would creep into the harbor someday. "You won't be able to swim in the harbor water," he said.

"I think this is all about the Pollock," said a woman walking a dog. "It's still there, under the blue paint. They'll remove it, clean it up and sell it. It will be worth millions. Tens of millions."

A spokesman for Keyspan said that the company was totally unaware of the Jackson Pollock and had plans in place four years ago to remove the gas ball since it was a safety hazard and an unnecessary insurance burden on the company, but until now they had been at a standstill until the Federal Government could complete the paperwork to instruct them what they should do about the SuperFunding. And now that had come through.

When told that the predecessor to KeySpan and the Long Island Power Authority, LILCO, had known about the Jackson Pollock painting under there and had sent a crew to investigate, he said "I know nothing about that."

The drip painting of the gas ball was the largest painting ever made by Jackson Pollock and was the pride of the town from 1949 until 1951 when LILCO sent a crew out to paint it over blue. Many old timers remember it. LILCO, however, called it "graffiti" and said it had to be removed to show young people what you do not do. They also tried to prosecute Pollock, although a local judge threw out the case.

Pollock reportedly went up there late on the night of July 5, 1949, climbing the ladder to the top and then, using a rope, hauling up his paints and brushes in a canvas bag that he had left on the ground.

He was drunk at the time. People later said he had been drinking with John Steinbeck at the Sandbar Tavern on Main Street earlier in the evening, but after Steinbeck went home, at 1 a.m., Pollock tried to wreck the place and they threw him and his paints out onto the sidewalk.

Pollock was the greatest living American painter back then. Although none of his paintings had yet sold for more than a few hundred dollars — he often traded paintings for groceries at the Miller Store in Springs — he had founded the technique of drip painting, and was living with his long suffering wife Lee in a house on Springs-Fireplace Road, paying their bills with money sent to them by Peggy Guggenheim, the great New York art collector. Within a month of his painting of the gas ball he was famously featured in LIFE Magazine, although it was said later that the magazine article had already been completed before the incident with the gas ball. The rest is history. He was worth a lot of money after that, though he died in a terrible car crash five years later.

No one knows how long Pollock was up on top of the gas ball that night, but from the look of it, the drip painting he did, which covered the top three quarters of the ball, looked almost as if he had done it all at once in a single wild burst of creativity. In the morning, a large ring of paint, in more than half a dozen colors, was found in the grass below and surrounding the big ball. Pollock, of course, was long gone. Although it was said he spent the rest of the night sleeping in the back seat of his car out front of the Sandbar.

This newspaper wonders if it could be that that ring of paint, having seeped into the ground, was the pollutant discovered by the SuperFund people in 1999.

If it is, it is probably worth a lot of money. •

Five Acres

Damned if You Do and Damned If You Don't in East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

A very interesting situation has developed in East Hampton involving a five acre parcel of open land in that town. Located on Town Lane just to the east of Abraham's Path, it is owned by Sasson Soffer, a prominent sculptor with international credentials who lives and works in Amagansett and Manhattan. He bought the land almost twenty years ago as a space where he could display his sculptures. Now, at eighty, he has offered to sell the land to the Town at whatever its appraised value is, but with the understanding that the land should never be built upon, that it should be used as a park and that it should forevermore display six of Mr. Soffer's sculptures on the property. The care and maintenance of the sculptures would be paid for by Mr. Soffer's arts foundation.

On the surface of it, it does not seem to have been an offer that would become controversial. Six sculptures on five acres does not take up a lot of room. Soffer's work has been exhibited at the Whitney, at Lincoln Center, and in many plazas around the world. He is currently at work on a sculpture which will be displayed at the United Nations.

As a result of this offer, and because the five acres could make up a lovely little park between some affordable housing apartments and the East Hampton Youth Park, enabling people to walk back and forth between the two without crossing the street, the Town tentatively accepted the offer. It was also noted that the property is zoned residential. Five homes could be built there.

In announcing the plan, one Town Councilman noted that East Hampton has long been a place where artists and sculptors have worked. Painter Lee Krasner, the widow of Jackson Pollock, actually gave her waterfront estate on Accabonac Harbor where she and Jackson lived and worked, to Stony Brook University after considering an offer from the Town of East Hampton. She only asked that whoever took it have the endowment in place to take care of it in perpetuity, and that scholars and the public have some access to it for study purposes. More recently, arrangements were made to preserve the farm and studio of artist John Little.

> "You can't make a museum out of Jackson Pollock's house. He was a drunk. You have to make a museum out of de Kooning's."

But the plan for the town to buy the five acres owned by Sasson Soffer has run afoul of numerous other working artists in the community. As the plan unfolded and the town got an appraised value for the property of $1.05 million, the public hearings began. And numerous other artists have come out of the woodwork to vehemently object to the Soffer offer.

"If you do this, you will have made a memorial to Mr. Soffer," said Phyllis Hammond, a sculptor.

"This means his name will be there forever," said Aldo Perotto. "He gets this very cheap."

"It gives him an in," said Ruth Nasca, another artist. "He gets to say his work is on permanent display in East Hampton. It makes everything he sculpts more valuable. He becomes another Jackson Pollock. Another Willem de Kooning."

What Ms. Nasca said and wrote in a letter to the editor of this newspaper we publish this week, reminded me suddenly of a very similar objection I once heard regarding the offer by Lee Krasner. Though the bid to run the Pollock-Krasner House was eventually won by Stony Brook University, the Town of East Hampton, during the three months prior, held a series of weekly meetings about the offer, hosted by a town committee created for that purpose, which the Town Supervisor had asked me to chair. We held those meetings in the house itself. And during those twelve meetings, we heard from fishermen, millionaires, farmers, merchants and anyone else in town who wanted to speak. Besides hearing from those who felt it would be good for business, that it should be maintained as one might keep George Washington's Headquarters restored, that it should be a full blown museum open 24-7, we heard from some, but not all, of the local artists. A very similar cry of objection rose from some of them.

"You can't make a museum out of Jackson Pollock's house," one of them said. "He was a drunk. You have to make a museum out of Willem de Kooning's house."

"There are many other artists who are as important as Jackson Pollock," another artist told us.

We were told the artists would boycott the Pollock- Krasner House if it were taken on. Of course they never did. But we were just as amazed at those objections then as the Town Board of East Hampton is amazed today.

So it was, to these artists, about ego and money. Well, it's tough being an artist. Even in East Hampton.

If you don't believe me about ego, just go down to the Green River Cemetery on Springs-Fireplace Road and look around. Here you will see the gravestones of many artists, including Jackson Pollock and Lee Krasner. Also Ad Reinhart, Stuart Davis, Elaine de Kooning and Jimmy Ernst. Each one is a work of art, each one is unique and different from the other, and each one is a statement by that particular artist or his followers — many were actually sculpted by the artists themselves before they died.

Here I was. Look at me. Forever.

So maybe it's just a matter of scale. One artist has arranged a display of his work six feet by ten. Another artist has arranged for the display of his work on five acres.

Which leads immediately to the question of — what if another artist were to want to sell to the Town ten acres, but they were a terrible sculptor? Rejected at the Modern, rejected at the Whitney, shunned at Guild Hall, turned away at the Parrish. Put something up at the U.N. but vandals tore it down. Perhaps the Town needs to have a resident Art curator. I might remind the Town that for a while they were curating works of art for the front lawn of Town Hall. I would also remind the Town that they held a competition for the mural on the wall at the Town-owned Airport terminal.

The only thing that bothers me about this transaction with Soffer is that he is not offering it as a donation, or at a discount. Twenty years ago, you could buy five acres for $100,000. In today's money that would be worth $200,000 if you allowed for inflation. Yet the appraised value of the property is $1,050,000 and that's what the Town agreed to. Saffer has to deal with his Capital Gains Tax. Wow.

The Town says the appraisal did not include the sculptures. I suppose six sculptures by Sasson Soffer might have brought the cost up to $1,200,000 or something. So that's his gift. On the other hand, Lee Krasner offered to GIVE her house and studio to a responsible party under the conditions I mentioned earlier. But then, the receiver of the gift had to keep it up. Here, Soffer has offered to keep it up in perpetuity.

And of course, artists are not alone in the pursuit of ego. I refer you to William Shea Stadium (where the Mets play), to the Thomas E. Dewey Thruway, to Kirk Park in Montauk named after Dr. Thomas Kirk of that town, to the Harkness Pavillion at the Columbia University Hospital in Manhattan. Of course there is the airport named after General Douglas MacArthur and the other one named after Fiorello LaGuardia. Lucky they all got those names in before the current craze of selling the names of buildings to airlines, scotch tape and clothing companies.

I think the Town ought to go ahead with this. And they should hire a curator, look at the reputations and values of all the artists and sculptors in town and decide which ones they want to call up and say, "Can we make your house a shrine? Sort of like 'George Washington slept here'? We'd do it if you would put us in your will."

And wouldn't it be great if the whole town offered to just donate all the open land left everywhere in exchange for putting the works of art of prominent local artists on it? The whole community would be a work of art.

But then we'd keep bumping into things.

Goddamn sculpture.

Who Am I?

One Keystroke Goes Wrong and My Identity is Changed Forever

By Dan Rahiner

People who have seen the movie BRAZIL often rank it as one of the greatest movies of all time. They say once you have seen it you cannot forget it. And it's true. For me, anyway. I saw it ten years ago when it came out and it certainly took me by surprise. In fact, there is one scene, involving the death of a house fly, that I have recently begun thinking about on an almost daily basis. It's been, if you will forgive the pun, dogging me.

In this scene, a government bureaucrat in a tiny office is typing up a form that will give a worker at an insurance company a day off. He puts the form in the typewriter—the movie pretends to have been made in the 1930s, so he uses a typewriter — and he begins clacking away on the keys. While he types, a fly bothers him. So he stops. He grabs a swatter and chases it around for a while but he does not get it. Finally, he gives up and finishes typing the form. Unbeknownst to him, just as he is about to type this person's middle initial, the housefly lands on the paper. Splat. The typewriter kills it. But in dying, the housefly has formed another middle initial. And as a result, this form shortly authorizes a day off for another man: a known terrorist who the police are trying to hunt down. The worker spends the rest of the movie trying to enjoy his day off while evading the attacks of the police trying to kill him. He has no idea why they would want to do that.

Anyway, about a month ago, something happened in some bureaucrat's office somewhere that has changed my life. And it is getting worse.

For many years now, I have been getting junk mail in my mailbox addressed to DANIEL S. RATTINER. I am sure you know this drill. You get it out of your mailbox, something from the Philadelphia Mint offering you some valuable new coin, or something from the Sierra Club, or something from a charity requesting

TWO SOLUTIONS FOR AMERICA'S OIL PROBLEMS

By Dan Rattiner

Oil went over $65 a barrel last week. I have two ideas.

One is — make the barrels smaller. This is not a new concept. Campbell Soup did this five years ago. Then two years ago, Dannon Yogurt made all their containers smaller. Both companies have smaller containers today. Making the barrels of oil smaller will surely bring the price of a barrel down. Then everybody will say — look, the price is coming down. Things are looking up. Hooray for America. Let's go out and buy something.

The other idea I have is to make the gas tanks in cars smaller. Just make it the law. Gas tanks can't hold more than ten gallons. Tell the public it's a safety measure. You get rear ended, what would you rather have in your tank? Ten gallons or twenty gallons? Also, having a smaller gas tank means it can be roomier inside. It's two bonuses in one.

Now what happens is people have to go to gas stations more often. Also, because there are just the same number of gas stations, there are lines. It's a bother. A big bother.

So what happens is that people have these kinds of conversations on the telephone.

"You're absolutely right. We need to get together. Why don't you come over here, say, tomorrow noon, okay? No? You want me to come over there? No, I can't. Sorry, got an appointment right after. Look. We're talking on the phone. That's good. Uh, I have another call. I'll call you tomorrow."

The result of this, of course, is that people use less gas. End of $60 a barrel oil.

Anybody have any other problems, just contact me at askdan@danspapers.com and ask away. I've got lots of very, very good answers and that's because I am smarter than anybody else.

Global warming? Easy. There's no way we're going to solve this by throwing less crap up into the atmosphere because that's what the that you send a donation. DANIEL S. RATTINER, mine reads, please accept the National Wildlife Federation's commemorative 2005-2006 Treasures of Wildlife calendar and wildlife address labels with my personal thanks for taking just a few moments now to consider why we need your support in our mission to protect America's wildlife and wild places. I hope you agree it's important we do everything we can to protect them for the benefit of our children and grandchildren.

Of course I do. But there's so much of this that comes my way and there is just a limit to how much involvement I can get myself into. I almost always, feeling very guilty, throw all this stuff out, while thinking whether or not I should separate the glossy stuff from the newspaper stuff for recycling and what a waste this all is.

In any case, about four months ago, something happened at some bureaucracy and I began to receive junk mail with a misspelling in my name. DANIEL S. RAHINER, please accept the National Wildlife Federation's commemorative 2005-2006 Treasures of Wildlife calendar and wildlife address labels with my personal thanks...

This was the first time I went to the trouble of looking at these free address labels. They're the kind you peel off to put on envelopes or cell phones or power drills. What a quadruple waste. Something I certainly could use but did not order and on principle do not want, with my name misspelled.

Protecting Wildlife...For Our Children's Future

It is always so interesting to see your name misspelled like this. Congratulations MR. RAHINER, you have won the $10 million jackpot. All you have to do...

Is that me?

The thing is, instead of fading away, as junk mail errors in my name have done in the past, this error has mushroomed outward to now encompass ALL of my junk mail. I have never seen anything like it.

MR. RAHINER, due to your excellent credit rating, we are at this time pleased to offer you...

The Chairman of the Board of our company has selected YOU, MR. RAHINER, to take advantage of...

In other words, when someone was typing in my name somewhere in the great junk mail skyscraper headquarters, the housefly lit on the third and fourth letters of my name, the smash changing TT to H, and it has begun to change my life forever.

There have begun to be serious ramifications. For example, I have been doing battle with one of the major cell phone companies — not Verizon — for about a year because they charged me twice for something they were not supposed to have charged me for at all. In trying to correct it with a representative from that company, I only made the matter worse. A third charge for the amount appeared on my bill. And with this outrageousness, and with subsequent letters and phone calls getting me nowhere, I finally decided I would never, never, never do business with them again. And to get the whole thing behind me, I would ignore their bill collecting efforts. It is a matter of $700.

What this has created is a dent in my credit rating. I don't want a dent in my credit rating. I called one of the three credit companies to fix this, but they wouldn't speak to me. They said I am not Mr. Rahiner. And until I could prove that I was, they would exert every effort to protect Mr. Rahiner's identity from thieves such as, well, me.

Whoever I am.

I might note, at this point, that when I was ten months old, my parents decided they did not like the name they gave me when I was born. I was born as Dennis S. Rattiner. It is on my birth certificate, with Dennis crossed out and Daniel written above it. Oddly, in spite of this glitch, nobody has ever turned me down for anything I needed when what I needed

Hurricane Season, Plans, Warnings and Evacuation Routes

By Dan Rattiner

The eastern end of Long Island now has entered the heart of the Hurricane season. It will last until the end of September, with a continued alert until the end of October. Be warned.

In fact, you should be strongly warned. For the quarter of a century before 1995, the average water temperature in the Atlantic Ocean was a low 82.7 degrees. So far since 1995, the average water temperature in the Atlantic has been 83.3 degrees. It is a natural event, not related to global warming the scientists say, but when the water temperature is high, the number of hurricanes increases. It has been proven true over the last one hundred years, as the water temperature has fluctuated higher and lower at quarter century intervals. It is also true that hurricanes cannot form when water temperatures are under 80 degrees.

Hurricanes are still coming through and up the coast as they always did. It has just been chance we have not been hit.

Early on this spring, scientists were predicting a total of seven to nine major hurricanes along the east coast. But as they analyzed the data at the beginning of August, they increased their prediction to between nine and eleven, the most they have ever predicted. If this pans out, this will be the worst hurricane season ever.

Hurricanes form over eastern Africa when warm, humid air at the earth's surface rises up into cooler air above and condenses into rain clouds. If the warm air has to rise quickly enough, it sucks in behind it more warm air, which creates wind and begins spinning everything around counter clockwise. Following the natural drifts of the jet streams, it drifts out into the Atlantic Ocean and if it encounters seawater over 80 degrees it can grow into a full-fledged hurricane. The hotter the sea water, the stronger it will be. It then drifts westward through the Caribbean and then up north either into the Gulf of Mexico and the gulf coast, or up north along the Atlantic Coast to hit anywhere from Florida to the Carolinas to New England. There is only one place along the Atlantic Coast where a land mass sticks out into the ocean directly in the path of a hurricane and that is Long Island. We get hit with a big one, on the average, every ten years. In recent years this has been in 1938, 1954, 1960, 1976 and 1985. In 1991, Hurricane Bob swept by, just to the east of Montauk before making landfall at Newport, Rhode Island. In other words, this is the twentieth consecutive year without a major hurricane hitting us. We have been very lucky. And we are overdue.

It has not been as if the hurricanes have not tried. Since 1995, there has indeed been a considerable increase in hurricane activity in the Atlantic, but just by chance, almost all of them failed to make landfall, and petered out in the North Atlantic. On the other hand, scientists have noted that the average strength of the hurricanes during these last ten years has increased fifty percent over that of the hurricanes during the quarter century before. This, they say, is due to the higher temperature of the sea water during this period, exacerbated by a higher average global temperature of almost three quarters of one degree, which indeed IS due to Global Warming. The higher the temperature of the earth, the wilder are the swings of whatever weather we are having. Global Warming has increased average temperatures on the planet by over one degree in the past one hundred years.

In 2004, our luck seemed to run out, with the extraordinary appearance of four major hurricanes hitting the coast of Florida in just 43 days. They were: Charley on August 13; Frances on September 4; Ivan on September 16 and Jeanne on September 26. At one time or another last year, every place in Florida either experienced or was in danger of experiencing, hurricane force winds.

This past Monday, August 29, the east coast ran out of luck bigtime. Hurricane Katrina swiped past Florida leaving one million people without power for a few days, and then went off into the Gulf where it slammed into the low lying areas of New Orleans, Biloxi, Mobile and Pensacola. As I am sure you have seen if you have been following the news, the destruction and loss of life has been staggering, first by the force of the 145 mile an hour winds of the hurricane to the east of the eye — the winds circle counterclockwise around the eye — then the storm surge, and then the flooding, which came not only from the surge inundating the low lying areas, but from the huge deluge of water coming down the Mississippi as the rain storm moved north. It all had to drain down into the Louisiana Delta to get out to the Gulf. And the levees broke, flooding everything, particularly downtown New Orleans, which sits mostly below sea level. It may turn out to be the biggest natural disaster in this country's history. And there has been terrible loss of life.

It may seem to some people here on the East End that the recent change in weather conditions has largely resulted in hurricanes largely getting caught up in the Gulf. But if you look at the lines of the hurricane tracks during the last twenty years, you will see this is not the case. Hurricanes are still coming through and up the coast as they always did. It has just been chance we have not been hit.

What would happen if a major hurricane were to hit the East End? Well, for one thing, there is the evacuation plan, which seems largely to consist of thousands of EVACUATION ROUTE signs that have been placed along the Montauk Highway pointing west. But it's the only way out. And if you think the traffic is bad now, wait till you see what it looks like when we are told to evacuate. Be sure to have a full tank of gas. You might be on the road for an almost indefinite period.

It's also very likely that storm damage along the beaches of the Hamptons will be far greater than ever before. Nobody likes to admit this, but living along the ocean is a risky business. Always has been. The Indians did not live there because of that risk. But more and more, people of means have built oceanfront at their peril. The value of the homes that have been built in harms way is now staggering, probably one hundred times as much as it was in the 1950s. So there can be 100 times the damage. In 1938, the eye of the great hurricane went over Patchogue, but the real devastation occurred when that great right cross thrown counterclockwise around it hit the land at Westhampton Beach twenty miles to the east. Of 320 grand mansions sitting on Dune Road, 311 were swept across the bay into downtown. And downtown was flooded by the storm surge. Fortunately, the storm hit after Labor Day and during the week, so there weren't too many people around. Only 30 people died. More oceanfront damage, and inland damage occurred from Quogue to Montauk, with lesser damage as far away as Providence, Rhode Island, which was also flooded downtown.

There are things you should do to prepare for a hurricane. They include having bottles of fresh water on hand (one gallon per person per day — plan on three days) and lots of canned food. Also a manual can opener. You should have flashlights and extra batteries, a radio or TV that works on batteries, tape or plywood for your windows, a full tank of gas in your car and candles, or, better yet, LED lanterns, which operate on batteries, and are less a danger of fire. Stock up on fire extinguishers, matches, plastic bags, plates, cups and utensils, also have extra cash, extra sets of car and house keys, blankets and personal hygiene supplies on hand.

If the news comes that a hurricane is coming up the coast our way, fill bathtubs with water (for toilet flushing), fill a plastic bag with important documents and take it out to your car, wash all clothes you plan to wear, shop for bags of ice and make plans for pets. Shelters will not take pets.

Eight hours before a hurricane is scheduled to hit, close all windows and doors, and listen for any instructions about evacuation.

The names of this year's upcoming hurricanes are Lee, Maria, Nate, Ophelia, Philippe, Rita, Stan, Tammy, Vince and Wilma.

After that, if there's anybody left, they'll come up with a few more names.

Some people say that September is the most beautiful month in the Hamptons and surely it is. The crowds are gone, the ocean temperature is at its highest, everything is in full bloom and the temperatures are warm but not hot. Just look out for hurricanes. •

Can Swimming at an Unprotected Beach Get You Arrested?

By David Stoll

One of the wonderful things about Hamptons beaches is their relative emptiness compared to major beaches such as Jones Beach. This is partly due to lack of parking, and probably also due to the fact that the beaches are not convenient to day-trippers from other locales. Another nice thing about Hamptons beaches is that there are so many different choices. Some beaches attract families, some don't; some attract 20-somethings, some don't; and on and on. Personally, I prefer those beaches without lifeguards and bathroom facilities, because they tend to be less crowded and have fewer families with children, and I am not a big fan of crowds or other people's children. But it turns out that, according to the laws of the State of New York, I am not allowed to enjoy such a beach if I and my fellow beachgoers wish to swim. Indeed, the Village of East Hampton now finds itself in trouble because Two Mile Hollow Beach lacks lifeguards and bathroom facilities.

We will discuss Two Mile Hollow Beach shortly. First, though, here are the basics on beaches. The New York State Sanitary Code regulates "bathing beaches," which are any beaches used for swimming or wading with the consent of the owner. Beaches used for picnicking, fishing, scuba diving or surfing are not bathing beaches and, thus, not subject to the regulations. Bathing beaches must have a permit, although variances and waivers are possible. The most important, and sensible, rules governing these bathing beaches is that the operator must test samples of the water from time to time for truly revolting matter relating to sewage.

But there are many other requirements, too.

> The Department will visit a beach several times during the summer and assess whether the beach is "primarily" used for bathing

Bathing beaches must have adequate lifeguards. They must have those ropes in the water identifying the swimming areas — although this rule does not apply to beaches on the Atlantic Ocean or Long Island Sound. They must have adequate toilet facilities. During bathing hours, there may be no boating, water skiing, fishing or surfing. There may be only one bather in the water per 25 square feet of shallow water and per 75 square feet of deep water. Daily reports are required to be kept by the operator of the beaches about usage, weather, water conditions and clarity, injuries and illnesses, and water tests. Suffolk County is responsible to enforce these rules.

Is your head spinning yet? Are you putting your wallet under lock and key, thinking about how much all of this will cost in the Hamptons? There are so many beaches between Montauk and Westhampton, and while some are organized to comply with these State rules, most are not. Are all those beaches being operated illegally? Can it really be true that I cannot accept the risk of swimming at a beach without a lifeguard if I so chose? And why are many of us learning about these rules only today?

I called the Suffolk County Department of Health to find out how one tells the difference between beaches that are and are not "bathing beaches." After speaking with the Department's Media Division, as is required before one of our public servants is permitted to speak with a member of the press, I was called by Martin Trent, the Department's chief ecology officer. He acknowledged that, in practice, the standard for determining whether a

By Roy Bradbrook

In the frenetic world that is the Hamptons in summer there were so many functions on offer last weekend, from innumerable charity and political fundraisers to great opera and music, that it is easy to be spoiled for choice. So, why would a crowd of over two hundred come to the Greek Orthodox Church of the Hamptons on one of the last Saturday evenings of summer to hear someone talk on 'Reflections on the Greek Heritage'? The reason was very simple — Associate Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, one of the nine judges of the United States Supreme Court and arguably one of the most powerful and influential people, not only in this country but in the world, was the speaker.

Supreme Court Justices, by the very nature of their responsibilities, are not too often seen giving public talks. We usually see them only as black robed men and women of serious demeanor on major occasions such as Inaugurations and State of the Union addresses. We hear of their decisions that can and do affect the lives of all of us and just look at the feeding frenzy that is going on in the media now that a successor to the retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor has to be found.

So, for Southampton businessman Nicholas Zoullas to persuade Justice Kennedy to give up part of his summer vacation to come and give the annual Zoullas Memorial Hellenic Lecture, founded in the memory of his parents, Sophocles and Louisa, was a major coup.

The attraction of this evening was enhanced even more when it was learned that Archbishop Demetrios, the spiritual head of the Greek Orthodox Church in America, would also be present. Any one who has ever had the privilege of meeting him knows that not only is he an intensely spiritual man but he is also filled with wit, wisdom and humility, and is a great speaker in his own right.

Justice Kennedy drew comparisons between the way that life was organized back some 2500 years ago when Socrates and Pericles were at the height of their careers and Athens was the cultural and philosophical center of the world. Athenian law and customs, Justice Kennedy explained, were factors that weighed heavily with those men who framed the American Constitution, a document he described as one of the most brilliant documents ever written. He urged his audience to read or reread the Federalist papers, which are studded with references to the practices of Ancient Greece establishing an unbroken timeline of political development.

Justice Kennedy went on to talk about the threats we are under from those who continue to attack the West and our way of life and how he wishes that they could really understand what we are about. 'It is not about consumerism and movie stars but is based on fundamental uplifting ideals based in many instances on the world of Ancient Greece.' He went on to give a warning that, drawing another comparison from the past, when the citizens of Athens began to be more concerned with what they could get from the State than with what they could do for it, that was the beginning of the end of Ancient Greek civilization. An uncanny echo of another famous quote from an inaugural speech from another even more famous Kennedy!

Justice Kennedy concluded with the observation that you can talk and write about 'what was' and also 'what is' and of course, 'what ought to be. For him by far the most important is what ought to be. It is this sense of wanting to make things right that should be the essence of those who are selected to be politicians or judges in our society.

After he finished, Archbishop Demetrios presented him with a sterling silver plate bearing the image of the Virgin Mary and the Archbishop went on in his own inimitable style to add his thoughts to what he described as a charming and mind opening speech. He agreed about the importance of the Constitution and how special it is and how other countries have tried and failed to emulate or improve upon it. He concluded by reminding the audience that the Justices of the Supreme Court enjoy immense power and he asked for prayers for them in their deliberations.

This was a fascinating evening and Justice Kennedy showed the human face of the Court with an intellect that one would hope for, and above all, humanity and compassion. We were reminded that we are privileged to live in a land that is free, where freedom of speech is defended, even when we detest what is being said and where the Constitution of our country was written by the people and where it still remains the property of the people and not of the politicians or the judiciary.

Didn't Cry

Benny Got Bitten By a Bee But He Didn't Cry, Family Says

By Emily J Weitz

It was a lazy Thursday afternoon at Dan's Papers, and I was flipping through the local papers to see if there was anything newsworthy that I might cover over the weekend. The air conditioner whirred behind me and the sound of the fax machine screeched as I sipped my iced coffee. That's when CJ, our receptionist, hurried into the Editorial Department.

"Emily?" she whispered, cautious not to disrupt the creative flow that at that moment was pushing against a dam. I looked up from reading an article about dogs dressing as humans, delighted at the distraction.

"Yes?"

"There's a family out front who wants to talk to you."

I looked quizzically at the messenger. Was it my family, I wondered? Why would my family be here? What other family needed to talk to me? Had I offended an entire family? How many generations were involved? I must have been staring at her for a while, because she decided to expound.

"The little boy was just stung by a bee, and they wrote a story about it, and they want to show it to you."

When I walked through the office, past the screeching fax and through the front office, buzzing with sales people, I encountered what can best be described as a team. They stood like a united front, all eyes fixed on me. There was the father, smiling proudly as he introduced himself and his family. There was the mother, her hand on her daughter's shoulder. The grandfather leaned against the front counter with a weathered grin crinkled across his face.

> "The little boy was just stung by a bee, and they wrote a story about it, and they want to show it to you."

"Hi, Emily," Len Scheer said to me, reaching his arm over the heads of the three children. "I just wanted you to know that our little Ben got stung by a bee and he didn't scream."

Of all the things that people have felt they needed to report to me, all the things that just had to be in print, this may, at first glance, seem trivial. But it reminds me of The Little Prince by Antoine de Sainte Exupéry, when the angelic little protagonist throws a fit that the world in which we live places more emphasis on numbers and statistics than on the flap of a butterfly's wing or the death of a flower. Of all the galas, all the restaurants, all the boat trips that I've been blessed enough to enjoy, I think, now that this visit is over, this may have been the most significant story I ever covered. I looked at Ben, 5 years old, as he leaned against the wall, his head reaching about my waist. He rubbed his eyes.

"Hey, Ben, I hear you got stung by a bee?" I asked.

He looked at me and sniffled. Then he nodded.

"Yeah, but I didn't cry," he said.

"Wow," I said. "You must be pretty tough that you got stung by a big fat bee and didn't even cry."

His sister nodded proudly, confirming his story.

"I told him it would be okay if he had to cry," his mother said, "but he said he'd be embarrassed." She shrugged.

It took me a moment to realize that I had just conducted an interview. It wasn't right away that I realized this was a story – with real characters conquering an obstacle together.

review: james stewart

By Joan Zandell

This past Friday on August 26th the Hamptons Library series Friday's at Five concluded its successful summer run with James Stewart, the author of The Disney Wars.

James Stewart is attractive in a crisp almost preppie sort of way, and he is quite tall. As he stepped up to the sunny podium surrounded by lush maple trees and hydrangeas, a faint breeze blew his hair across his forehead and he adjusted his glasses. The garden was filled with his waiting fans.

"The story of the Disney Wars – how the story came about – is an interesting story," he began, "I originally contacted Roy Disney and the heirs. Michael Eisner was something I didn't know would happen. And until I see Eisner leave Disney, I won't believe that he'll ever give up the keys to that kingdom."

For many years, James Stewart rented the same summer cottage in The Hamptons. As he would pass the large house on the corner on his way to the beach, there was a sign that read, "Keewaydin." Mr. Stewart filed the name away, and even though he might have wondered what it meant, he did not pursue its meaning until he read Michael Eisner's autobiography. What the name referred to was Camp Keewaydin, a place that had particular significance for Michael Eisner. He went there as a boy, and as an adult, wrote a book about it.

"One of the reasons that Disney Wars is a great story is because Mr. Eisner is a great vehicle," said Mr. Stewart. "Our first meeting took place at Mr. Eisner's invitation, at Nobu." Nobu is a well-known, upscale Japanese five-star restaurant turned media mogul's paradise in the heart of Tribeca. Over dinner Mr. Stewart mentioned Camp Keewaydin. Mr. Eisner was impressed that James Stewart knew what Keewaydin was. The author believes that that seemingly insignificant fact led to their doing the book together.

For their first official meeting Eisner picked Mr. Stewart up in a chauffered SUV. Said Eisner, "Let's have fun. You can ask me anything. I have nothing to hide." Turning to the audience Mr. Stewart said, "People who say they have nothing to hide, have something to hide."

As part of his research, Mr. Stewart went to a theme park. He decided to participate in the training process and become a character – he chose Goofy. On the day that he was scheduled to appear, the temperature was ninety-six degrees and very humid. He was not prepared for the intensity of the response the children would have when they saw Goofy. He described one little girl who at first was afraid of him. She circled him several times, until she finally walked over to him and let him hug her. She then kissed him on the nose.

For Mr. Stewart, that kiss was a moment of Disney magic.

In September 2004, Mr. Stewart experienced what he described as the antithesis of that moment. A full page ad had appeared in the New York Times congratulating ABC-TV for the success of the series "Lost." After years of struggle for ABC programming, they finally had a hit. Mr. Stewart offered Eisner his congratulations. Mr. Eisner's response took him by surprise. "Oh, that ad," he said, "was a waste of $100,000. Once that plane crash sequence is over people will lose interest and the show will be over." Eisner had always hated "Lost." He had tried to kill the project at every opportunity. Given Eisner's oversized ego, it was more important to him that "Lost" fail and vindicate his decision, rather than succeed and make ABC a lot of money. His ego had become more important than the shareholders legacy and the well-being of the company. This was after all the same man who had also turned down "CSI" and The Lord of the Rings.

Part of what came to be known as Eisner's flawed management style was saying something, and then denying that he had ever said it. One of the most famous incidences was Katzenberg having been fired, and Eisner refusing to acknowledge that he had to pay him his bonus. They eventually went to court where every piece of correspondence and every conversation was examined. Eisner had made the infamous remark, "I think I hate the little midget," referring to Katzenberg, which he then denied having said. He even went so far as to attribute the remark to someone else.

"As a character," said Mr. Stewart, "I love Eisner. Eisner would often say, 'I'm caught up in a Shakespearean drama.' The character traits of Richard III were amazingly similar.

Hike in the Desert

A Guided Walk Through the Remains of the Hampton Wildfire

By Emily J Weitz

The morning sun warmed the bench where I sat, waiting for the hike to begin. I looked beyond the Westhampton train station and towards the Pine Barrens, where our morning would unfold. Charred tree trunks, bleached white from ten years of uninhibited sun, reached up towards the blue sky like the gnarled fingers of an old woman. Countless Jitney rides had carried me past these Barrens, and every time I caught a glimpse of the stagnant remains of those frightful wildfires, I was stricken by the dramatic landscape.

Never, though, had it been more than that: a memory of a night when black smoke swallowed up the western sky, a powerful change in the scenery marking the shift from Middle Island to The Hamptons. Never, until that bright Saturday morning, a decade after the fires blazed.

Our hike consisted of about a dozen people, including our guide, Marisa, a volunteer for the Quogue Wildlife Refuge. We started off down the railroad tracks and then plunged into the Pine Barrens. The sandy trail cut through vegetation as durable as cacti, and I was shocked at how much this area resembled a desert. Just a few miles from the Atlantic Ocean, and the dryness of the air made my lips crack.

The Pine Barrens was named by English settlers who deemed the land completely infertile. Marisa explained that it is not actually barren land, but that the sandy soil is very nutrient poor. I noticed that the consistency of the soil was such that if a good rainfall came, much of the water would probably pool up and run off the earth, instead of seeping in and feeding the roots of plants. Thus, the plants that do conquer these conditions to thrive in the Pine Barrens are tough.

> The pinecones actually remain closed unless exposed to extreme heat. They live for these wildfires!

And they would have to be, considering what the area went through ten years ago. A fire, allegedly begun by the spark of a cigarette butt, spread rampant across the Pine Barrens, swallowing up 3200 acres in its reckless path. More than 2000 volunteer firefighters from all over Long Island joined in the effort to quell the flames. For over a week the fire persisted, walls of flames reaching the terrifying height of 100 feet. People were evacuated from their homes, though miraculously, only two homes were actually lost and no one was killed.

I remember being shocked that something so dramatic, such a powerful force of nature, was happening literally in my neighborhood. But as I stepped lightly on the parched soil, I saw that this wildfire could not have come as a shock to anyone who knew the ecology of the Pine Barrens. Pine needles dust the earth and ten years of dried leaves already carpet the forest floor. Apparently, when the fire erupted ten years ago, it had been 60 to 70 years since the previous blaze. About two inches of dried leaves have accumulated in the last decade, so multiply that time seven and you have a lot of kindling for one massive marshmallow roast. Now, there is discussion about starting controlled fires, perhaps this fall, to prevent such a dangerous accumulation of fuel for wildfires.

Bayberries grow abundantly in these badlands, and I don't think it's a coincidence that these harmless-looking berries possess a particular oil that actually fuels fires. Pitch pine trees are the primary tree species in the Pine

Barrens, and their bark is so thick that it prevents the tree from going up in flames. As a result, the tree trunks look charred and bleached, but they are still standing. This also spurred the fires to spread from treetop to treetop, instead of devouring the forest trunk by trunk. Two different kinds of pinecones also abound on pitch pine trees. One of the species of pinecones is called Serotinous. The pinecones actually remain closed unless exposed to extreme heat. They live for these wildfires!

I paused for a sip of water as the group meandered forward through the scorching morning. As I let the cool liquid run down my throat, I looked out at the world from the inside of the Pine Barrens. A small propeller plane seemed to skim the horizon as it made its descent into the nearby Gabreski airport. A butterfly zigzagged in and out of my vision. Cicadas whirred their stream of consciousness conversations from the trees.

Low pines sprouted up like a healthy army, nipping at the ankles of old, parched warriors that weathered the blazes a decade ago.

The animals who frequent the Pine Barrens seem to know, too, what they are signing up for. The endangered buckmoth survives on the scrub oak in the forest, but they build their cocoons underground specifically to be safe from forest fires. Even the box turtles have learned to bury themselves underground in the case of a fire, and if they are deep enough, they can weather the storm. Deer have their agile legs to carry them swiftly from the flames, and the snakes slither deep underground for shelter. So even though the fire in 1995 came as a complete shock to me, the animals with their burying, the trees with their thick bark, and even the natural litter that helped the fire spread so quickly, all probably could have tipped me off, if only I had ever plunged into the beautiful, poetic Pine Barrens before. I suppose it's true that most things multiply in value when they are almost stolen away.

What makes a great story are great characters and their human flaws. After sixteen months of work, Mike Ovitz got $140 million to go away. In quotes from the Judge's opinion he said, 'Eisner is Machiavellian in nature, he enthroned himself as the omnipotent monarch of an Imperial Kingdom'. Eisner purged the board of anyone who disagreed with him. He is characterized by his acquisition of power, his reluctance to relinquish it and his unwillingness to choose a successor."

Things started to take a turn for the worse for Eisner when the Disney family was forced to organize the shareholder campaign. The shareholders revolted in March 2004. One half of all the shareholders and 80% of the employees withheld their support, forcing Mr. Eisner to "leave Disney under a cloud; his legacy tarnished. On September 30th Michael Eisner is scheduled to leave Disney." The story of Michael Eisner's rise to power and his subsequent demise is truly Shakespearean in nature and makes for hearty reading, in James Stewart's book, The Disney Wars.

Aye or Nay?

Residents of the Unincorporated Hamlet of Sagaponack Vote

By David Stoll

Although this newspaper usually arrives sometime Thursday afternoon, you are probably reading this late Friday or during the weekend. In that case, the registered voters of Sagaponack have already voted on whether to incorporate their hamlet into a village, and the results are probably known. The vote took place Friday, September 1, from noon until 3 p.m. at the Little Red Schoolhouse. The Sagaponack voters' decision is important to all people who live in — or even visit — Sagaponack, Bridgehampton or Water Mill. Let us hope that we all know by now that the voters said "yes" to incorporation.

As the reader may know, the State is divided into counties, including Suffolk, which themselves are divided into towns and villages. The Hamptons contain two large townships and several villages within the townships. The Southampton Township runs from Westhampton to Town Line Road (which divides Sagaponack and Wainscott). The East Hampton Township runs from Town Line Road to the Montauk Point. Within these two townships are incorporated villages, such as Westhampton Beach, Quogue, Southampton, Sag Harbor and East Hampton. Many named areas are simply hamlets within the general townships, including Water Mill, Bridgehampton and Sagaponack (in Southampton) and Wainscott, Springs and Amagansett in East Hampton, among several others.

If you live in an incorporated village, you are represented by village trustees, who pass zoning laws, traffic laws and the like, and are responsible for police and other safety matters. If you do not live in a village, you are represented by the East Hampton or Southampton town board, which has all those responsibilities. It is possible, however, for a village to make an agreement with the town in which it sits that the town will provide services to the village at the per capita cost of delivering those

by Christian McLean

The other day someone came into the office with the most startling and gut-wrenching news: Sagg General Store is closing. They said there was a sign in the window that said their lease was up, that it wouldn't be renewed.

There was a moment of silence as we sat and took in what we heard. In my head I thought, I was just there the other day. I just ate a Number 5, hold the honey mustard. How could this be happening? We were quick to investigate what was going on, who was behind this horrible prank? Was it the same person who put the fake parking signs on the cars at the Ellen's Run concert? Could it possibly be true?

I hopped in my car and dashed down the back streets, weaving about in the August heat, passing Land Rovers and Beamers, avoiding joggers and the occasional rabbit. I made it to Sagg School in nanoseconds, made a right, and found a place to park. The store was packed, as it is every day around noon. I ordered seaweed salad and a half-pound of garden tuna salad and convinced myself to steer clear of the uber-rich chocolate brownies, which would have counteracted all the healthy food I had just ordered. I was tempted, but the desire to find out what was happening to the Sagaponack institution kept me from devouring the brownie which loomed only inches away.

I was able to speak to Beth Ann Terando, the daughter of Bob Baugh, the store's founder. She was busy ringing up customers, deciphering who ordered the pesto pasta salad from who ordered the brie and turkey, but was willing to talk during the momentary pauses of her hectic day. Beth Ann set my mind at ease, sort of. Yes, their lease has run out. A few years ago the building had been sold and the new owner has other plans for the building (which services. For example, the Town of Southampton provides police services to the Village of North Haven, while the Village of Southampton has its own police force.

Why become a village? In most cases, it is because a particular hamlet has such a sense of community and identity that it makes more sense to have its own special rules and laws that make sense for that community, rather than trying to explain to the town board what its individual needs are. On the other hand, many hamlets are perfectly happy working with the town board, and they see no reason to take on a new layer of government which usually means higher property taxes.

For a time, Sagaponack was in the latter category. Although the hamlet has its own post office and general store (but see Christian McLean's article today concerning the store) and even though many of the 6.22 square miles of Sagaponack have a very distinct look and feel, its residents had not felt the need to form their own government, but rather liked being part of the larger whole of Southampton town. Nevertheless, given Sagaponack's long history of community and identity, it has now become essential for the hamlet to become a village, lest part of Sagaponack be ripped away from the hamlet.

This refers, of course, to Dunehampton, now called Southampton Beach. A group of wealthy beachfront owners decided that they would try to form their own village, which would look like a snake, slithering from the western edge of Water Mill along to Town Line Road, a mere house or two wide from the ocean. The first version, Dunehampton, was rejected by the courts on procedural grounds. The second version, Southampton Beach, could very well succeed, but not if Sagaponack Village is first formed, as Southampton Beach would include what is now town property, but will become village property, along the ocean in Sagaponack.

The oceanfront owners claim that they needed to form Dunehampton because of beach erosion. Beach erosion is, indeed, a serious problem, and the towns are trying to find a solution, given the virtual uselessness of the United States Army Corps of Engineers, which has jurisdiction. Creating a beach-front village won't solve the problem anymore than today's government entities have been able to do so. Anyway, the Dunehampton effort began not because of inadequate attention to beach erosion but after a Southampton town board member proposed a Draconian zoning rule that would have substantially hampered the beachfront owners' use of their properties. The plan was rightfully scuttled, rendering Dunehampton unnecessary, other than for ego and cachet.

So, to allow the continued integrity of Water Mill, Bridgehampton and Sagaponack, one of those hamlets must become a Village, and Sagaponack has stood up to the plate. According to the website of the Sagaponack Association (www.sagassoc.com), the village is intended to be a "bare bones village," meaning that the Town of Southampton will continue to handle planning, zoning and basic services such as police and roads. This is the overwhelming desire of the pro-incorporation residents of Sagaponack, as "the overriding issue" is "the protection of the territorial integrity of Sagaponack, the connection of the hamlet to the ocean as it has been for over 300 years." The bare bones village is not expected to result in higher property taxes for Sagaponack homeowners. But you never know.

Thus, the fate of Water Mill, Bridgehampton and Sagaponack now lies with 478 people, the registered voters of Sagaponack. Let us all hope they have voted yes.

Classic Weekend

A Guide to Activities of the Final Weekend of the Horse Show

By Ali Spencer

Over the past 30 years, the Hampton Classic has grown to be more than just a horse show. It is a Hampton's tradition that marks the end of the summer season and draws thousands of exhibitors and spectators each year. And perhaps what makes the Classic so enjoyable to all those who visit the show grounds this weekend is that one does not have to be a horse person to appreciate all that the Classic has to offer. If you are planning on making the Hampton Classic part of your Labor Day weekend, especially if you are not familiar with the equestrian world, it may all seem a bit overwhelming. But there are definitely competitions to watch and scenes to check out which will make your trip to the horse show as enjoyable as possible.

$100,000 Prudential Douglas Elliman Grand Prix, Sunday at 2 p.m.

Without a doubt, the Grand Prix on Sunday is the highlight of the horse show, with the top horses and riders in the country, many of them Olympic, World Cup and World Championship veterans, all vying for the blue ribbon. Darragh Kerrins of Ireland, the winner of last year's Grand Prix, will return to defend his title. Grand Prix is the most challenging competition in show jumping, given the size of the jumps and the difficulty of the course. This year a new element, the Southampton Hospital Jump, will be added to the course. Spectators will be given the opportunity to pledge any amount of money they wish, which will be donated to Southampton Hospital each time a horse clears the designated fence. If you are going to watch only one event, watch the Grand Prix. Reserved grandstand seating is $15 per person, or $25 per person in the Premium Seating center sections, plus regular horse show admission.

$30,000 Grand Prix World Cup Qualifier, Friday afternoon

If you can't make it to the Grand Prix on Sunday, opt instead to watch the Grand Prix Qualifier Class on Friday. The top 30 riders in the Qualifying class will compete in Sunday's Grand Prix, which makes the competition fierce. The winner of the qualifying class will compete last in Sunday's Grand Prix. Going last is an advantage, since the last rider gets to watch how the competition rode the course, where the difficult spots are and what strategies worked (and didn't work).

Kid's Day, Saturday, September 3rd.

As if seeing horses everywhere wasn't enough excitement for kids, the activities scheduled for Saturday are sure to have them grinning from ear to ear. Kids under 12 are admitted free, and with that admission comes a free pony ride. Kids can also have the chance to learn how to groom a pony and gaze at llamas and miniature horses in the World of the Horse Tent. The National Circus Project will be on site spinning plates, juggling, walking on stilts and performing magic tricks. Most of the Kid's Day events take place at the World of the Horse tent and pony ride area, located at the main entrance of the Boutique Garden.

The National Circus Project will be on site spinning plates, juggling, walking on stilts and performing magic tricks.

Go Shopping!

It is rare to find such a variety of stores in such a small amount of space as you will in the Boutique Garden of the Hampton Classic. Among the newcomers this year are Peter

Elliot, Espo's Surf Shop and M. Hound for the pet in your life. The Loaves & Fishes Cookshop offers daily cooking demonstrations. There is also clothing, jewelry, art, toys and home furnishings. When you're through browsing the boutique garden, head over to Stable Row where more shops can be found. With almost 50 vendors setting up shop at the Hampton Classic, you may have to remind yourself that there are horses to watch.

Get the Brochure

The best resource for planning your day at the Hampton Classic is the horse show brochure. The back section of this large guide is an extensive day-by-day listing of all the classes taking place at the horse show, and the brochure also contains a condensed two-page schedule. There is also a ten-page equestrian glossary, a spectators guide and a map of the show grounds. The Hampton Classic brochure really has everything a spectator needs to feel at home at the horse show.

In general, the Grand Prix ring offers the most exciting competition – the highest fences, the fastest speeds, the top horses and riders. But really, every inch of the show grounds offers something to catch the eye. The elegant and tidy horses loping around the hunter rings. The determined and focused junior riders guiding their horses around the equitation courses. Even watching the riders in the warm up ring prepare for their classes gives spectators a glimpse of what happens outside of the show ring. Visitors to the horse show will never be without something to do. Admission is $10 a person or $20 per carload. Children under 6 are admitted free. Parking is free throughout the week.

is half-occupied by the Sagaponack post office). He was not willing to renew the 10-year lease that was signed on August 4, 1995, when the store originally opened.

The good new is, they are not closing. They are just moving. I tried, with all my journalistic skill and pretty-please smiles, to find out where the new store would be, but Beth Ann would not disclose any information about the new location until everything is finalized (which should be within the next several days). But she was willing to say she is "excited about where we are going. Everyone is going to be pleasantly surprised."

The store's current location on Sagg Main Street has always been ideal for the sun worshipers heading south to Sagg Main Beach and although it is slightly off the beaten path from Main St. in Bridgehampton, the store is well worth the trip. The effects of the store's moving will be felt throughout Sagaponack, where the Sagg General Store is more than just a place for sandwiches and seaweed salad (which rivals the best sushi places in town). Since 1872 it has provided a great service in the area. It is a place to go when you need laundry detergent, or when unexpected guests pop in and you have nothing to offer them. It is a meeting place, where friends gather on the wooden benches outside for a chat and a bit of nosh.

It will be difficult to fill the void that the Sagg General Store is leaving. But in their new location, they will fill a void there, supplying everything that they have provided to the people of Sagaponack for the past 10 years. As for their loyal customers, I'm sure they'll gladly make the pilgrimage and make it often.

The beautiful part of this story, though, is that when Benny got stung by a bee, his whole family supported him so much that they not only wrote a newspaper article about it, but they drew cartoons to illustrate it and then they brought it to the front desk of Dan's Papers to present this important issue to the editors. They were right. After all, isn't that really what summer is all about? Running around barefoot and risking the wrath of insects, picnic blankets spread out on the warm sand, barbecues, family? And when it happens that disaster strikes and the bee bites, there is nothing better than being able to count on your family to help you ice the sting. It was a refreshing reminder to see this family standing in a line before me, every one of them to proudly reiterate that when little Benny got stung by a bee, he didn't cry.

They joined together, and in the classic Dan's style, persuaded us to turn it into an article.

American Way of Life is all about. Shopping, consuming, eating Big Macs, going to clubs and getting drunk, then getting into car accidents.

I remember about ten years ago, some company came up with a car that ate emissions. You drove it down the expressway and the wind blew the polluted air from the car in front of you through air scoops in the front of your car and it ate it —just sucked it up like a vacuum cleaner — and then, I don't know, stored it inside a bag or something and turned it into fertilizer bricks. The more you drove, the more pollution it ate. What a great idea. You could drive around, your heart pounding, the radio blaring, and you could know that you were a force for good. The more you drove and the faster you drove, the sooner you'd defeat global warming. But I don't know, somehow, someway, mismanagement or something, maybe the oil lobby getting the government to pass laws against it, maybe the gas to drive the vehicle around was more than the suck you got to clean it up, you never heard any more about it. The thing apparently fell through, with the inventor going belly up. So that didn't work.

So we have to think bigger. Outside not only the envelope and the box, but the whole Kahuna. What we have to do to end global warming is build big rockets, plant them in the ground on one side of the planet, fire them off very carefully and send Earth into an orbit just a little farther out from the sun than it is now. Bingo. It's colder. No more global warming.

Here on Earth, the mean temperature is 56 degrees Fahrenheit (and climbing, dammit) and we are 92,000,000 miles from the sun. Further out from us, the next planet out is Mars, where the mean temperature is -361 degrees Fahrenheit. Mars is 214,000,000 miles from the sun. Do the math. I don't think we have to move us very far.

And I know it can be done. Movie after movie is made about doing exactly this, usually to get out of the way of an approaching comet. Sometimes they fail and everybody dies in the end, which is very sad, but that's not too often. Most of the time we succeed and the comet flies by and everybody cheers.

I just did the math. We have to move the Earth out just 3,415 miles to lower the temperature one degree. Heck, that's nothing. Like a flight from JFK to LA. The airlines do this fifty times a day. Keep on spewing crap into the atmosphere and every few years, whenever you need it, just give a little toot with the rockets.

You don't think the Martians might think this is some sort of aggressive act, do you? Nah. Just that little bit. Probably wouldn't even notice.

Any more problems, you've got the email address. Fire away. •

Amanda Hearst
Model

By Christian McLean

If she was just a nice girl, that would be one thing. If she was just another cute girl in the Hamptons, that would be another. But she's not just another sweet beauty, she's a Hearst. Yeah, those Hearsts - the publishing empire, the castle –an American lineage that traces itself back over 150 years.

Hearst first became an international household name after William Randolph Hearst convinced his father, George, to give him control of the family newspaper, the San Francisco Examiner. He soon after conquered New York City and, through penny journalism, expanded his empire to what was, at one time, more than thirty daily newspapers. Now it consists of twelve daily newspapers and nineteen magazines which includes glossies like Cosmopolitan, Harper's Bazaar and Esquire.

The thing is, although I just said Amanda Hearst isn't just another charming, gorgeous Hamptons girl, she is. She's low key, unpretentious and, from all accounts, approachable. If she wasn't a model and a member of "Society" you'd think she's just another twenty-one year-old that's looking to relax and enjoy her last days of summer without causing too much of a stir. You won't find her on top of bars, swinging from chandeliers, making "home videos," or any such nonsense. You've got a better chance of spotting her playing with the family dog than on the cover of a tabloid.

She does do her share in making the rounds at fundraisers, parties and the like, however. In fact, this year she even hosted one. Taking on the role of Junior Committee Chair of Riverkeeper, Amanda, and her mother Anne (not Patty – Patty is her aunt), hosted The Riverkeeper and Peconic Baykeeper's BLUE Benefit in mid-August at the family's Water Mill estate, Ash Grove Farm.

Riverkeeper is an organization designed to "defend the waters of the Hudson River," which Amanda has been involved in for some time.

As much as she may be an activist for environmental conservation, these days she is getting more recognition for her work as a model. Although only 5' 5" the waifish belle has been making great strides in the fashion world. From early on, Amanda was constantly being told she should model, so eventually she decided to give it a shot. At seventeen she was featured on the runway of the Anand Jon Spring 2K2 Aoracle Show at the Armani Collezioni Showroom. Not only was she featured, she closed the show wearing a stunning white wedding ensemble that brought the audience to its feet. The next week she was signing with a modeling agency and has since worked for some of the biggest names in the business.

Her studies have taken her to London for several weeks to further the art history education travel – just your average college student heading to Europe

Being the face of Tommy Hilfiger (named as one of his fashion ambassadors) and Polo is a lot of responsibility for a college girl to carry, but when she is perceived to be the essence of American Aristocracy with the looks, the pedigree, and everything else we think about when we envision the untouchable upper-crust of our social world, you would expect Amanda to pull it off with a flitting shrug as if to say, "Of course they want me to wear their clothes, I'm perfect." But that is the farthest thing from the truth. Instead the Elite model says, "I don't consider myself an ugly person, but nor do I think of myself as amazingly attractive. In fact, I'm pretty insecure."

For Amanda, the modeling isn't exactly a career. She's not about to shuck everything else in her life for the cover of a few glossies. In fact, she mentions that one day she'd like to be featured in magazines not for her looks, but for her words. Although she hasn't inherited the family fortune just yet, it seems that she has inherited the family genes and confesses she is considering a career in journalism (there is always room at Dan's – plus it's only a five-minute commute from Ash Grove).

Her other passion lies in art history, her major at Boston College. Growing up with a family art collection too large to fit in the confines of her Great-grandfather's estates (San Simeon and Wyntoon), must have had some influence on her interest in brilliant relics of the past. Her studies have even taken her to London for several weeks to further the art history education and to travel – just your average college student heading to Europe for a term abroad to gather a little culture.

As grounded as Amanda may be, much of the credit has to go to her mother, Anne Hearst, for raising her with values far beyond the norm. She taught her the importance of family and priorities. She stressed the need for humility and to avoid excessive spending because no one knows what tomorrow will bring.

Now a breadwinner herself, (having cosmetics deals, fashion spreads, and "ambassadorships" thrown her way) she isn't about to cut loose and blow all her money on a wild weekend in Vegas. There's a better shot you'll find her at Ash Grove Farms or the family's Upper East Side apartment relaxing with her brother or her mom. When she's not with the immediate family, it is likely she'll be with one of her two cousins, Gillian and Lydia Hearst-Shaw (Patty's daughters).

If you're wondering why there isn't hyphenation in Amanda's last name, it is because her parents were separated before she was born and she was raised by her mother, therefore taking her mother's maiden name as her surname. When Anne remarried, Amanda kept the Hearst name. Her brother Randy, who is seven years her junior, goes by the surname Harris, the beach is or is not a bathing beach is somewhat subjective. While in theory, if any bathing occurs at all, a beach is a bathing beach, but the County does not have the resources or inclination to police every bit of beach throughout the County. Thus, "common sense" must be used. The Department will visit a beach several times during the summer and try to make an assessment whether the beach is "primarily" used for bathing or for other activities, such as picnicking, surfing or fishing.

Even if a beach is used primarily for bathing, a judgment still must be made. A small road ending at the beach where four or five cars might park is not likely to be designated a bathing beach, even though some people are swimming. Beaches with many parking spaces are. I asked Mr. Trent about beaches, such as the one I frequent (I did not and will not identify it), that have smaller parking lots that can accommodate, say, about 50 cars. He said that those are the beaches that provide the most difficult challenge in enforcing the law, and the department would have to take the matter on a case by case basis.

Once it is determined that a beach is a bathing beach, an owner/operator — which in most cases in the Hamptons will mean a town or village — that is not complying with all the regulations may be subject to a fine of up to $2,000 per violation per day, set at the hearing officer's discretion. Thus, a beach that has neither adequate lifeguards nor bathroom facilities is committing two violations. Users of the beaches are not subject to such fines.

Mr. Trent explained that the definitions were changed somewhat in 2004, which caused the Health Department to begin a new review of beaches during the last two years. This brings us to Two Mile Hollow Beach. On July 14, the Village of East Hampton received a notice of violation from Suffolk County concerning Two Mile Hollow Beach. The notice asserted that Two Mile Hollow was a "bathing beach," but lacked bathroom facilities and lifeguards. While I find it disturbing that the government has so much discretion in deciding whether to enforce the "bathing beaches" regulations, it does appear that Two Mile Hollow Beach, where so many people can and do swim, is an easy call.

Moreover, there apparently had been complaints that people were relieving themselves in the dunes at Two Mile Hollow Beach. If this is true, those selfish people were creating a health hazard for other people and (I hate to say it) piping plovers. People who behave irresponsibly are, indeed, the rotten apples who spoil the barrel, and it was only a matter of time before the County had to crack down. Mind you, however, that Mr. Trent says that the review of Two Mile Hollow Beach was simply part of a broad-based and ongoing review of Suffolk County beaches.

There have been claims of bias against the gay community; Two Mile Hollow Beach is frequented by many gay men and was once in the news following several arrests for public sex on the beach. While throwing accusations of bias is de rigueur, it does not seem reasonable to assume that the Suffolk County government would elect to go after those among the region's most wealthy and powerful gay people — those who can afford to live on or near Further Lane — just because they are gay.

But I almost wish that the County were so motivated, as such abuse could be redressed and it would mean that other beaches will not come to the government's attention. While I fully appreciate the importance of monitoring the waters for harmful residues, it seems to me that in a free society people ought to be able to choose the type of beach they want to frequent. If I had children I would not consider going to a beach without a lifeguard, but I am confident in my swimming abilities and my judgment about water conditions, and I would like to be able to go those less-frequented beaches without lifeguards, at my own risk. It is disappointing to me that the character of the beaches that I most enjoy may have to change.

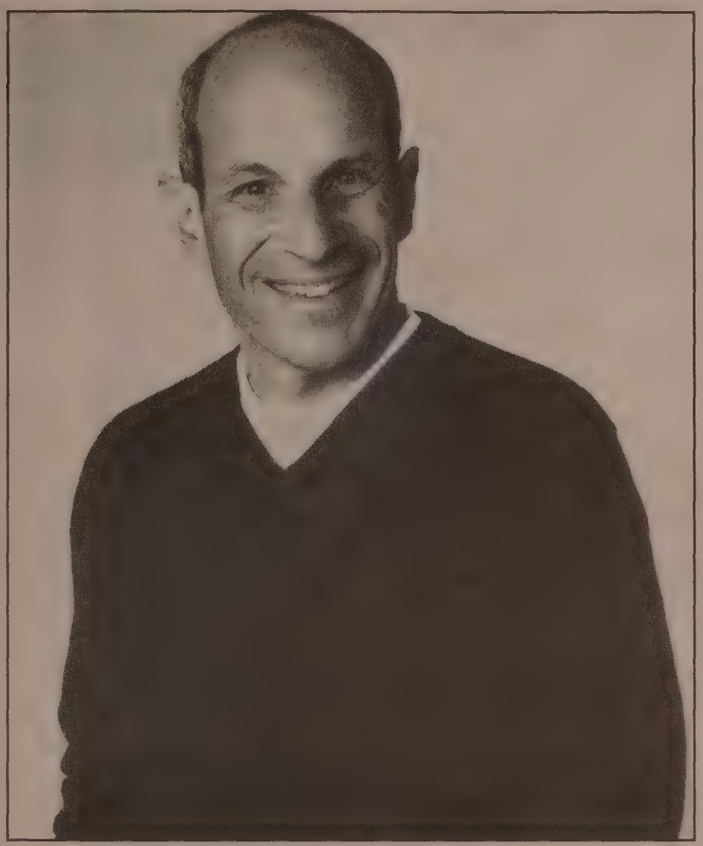
Who's Here



Jonathan Tisch
Loews CEO

By Dan Rattiner

I had breakfast the other day with Jonathan Tisch at the Poxabogue Cafe, which is a favorite of his. (And mine.)

We sat outside on the deck, ordered scrambled eggs and bagels and watched the golfers.

Jonathan is a focused, intelligent and courteous man in his early fifties, one of the sons of one of two brothers who nearly sixty years ago came to create an empire of Loews hotels and theatres in New York City, Florida and elsewhere. His father is Bob Tisch, and his uncle is the late Larry Tisch. And how they engineered what has come to be a business with $80 billion in assets is an interesting story.

"My dad and my uncle were born in Brooklyn. They built four hotels in Atlantic City, including one called the Traymore, which, when I was ten years old, was torn down to make way for some of the newer resorts. I kind of wish it got saved. It really was a classic and they did have a buyer. But it was not to be. It came down in 1963, the year before gambling came to Atlantic City and is now a parking lot."

"I saw the movie Atlantic City with Burt Lancaster, about that era," I said.

"So you know. In any case, the year before, my dad and uncle bought a controlling interest in the Loews Theatre chain. And they built the Americana in Bal Harbour, Florida, designed by Morris Lapidus, which is also now coming down (although it has not been owned by Loews for years.). Another classic. Morris Lapidus also designed the Summit here in Manhattan in 1963, which lives on, though we sold it some years ago."

The partnership of the two brothers thrived for more than fifty years, soon becoming a giant corporation including an insurance division, a watch division (Bulova), the oil business (Diamond Offshore), a tobacco division (Lorrilard), and Boardwalk Oil Pipelines. Jonathan's uncle Larry passed away in 2003. His dad continues on.

Bob Tisch has three children, including, besides Jonathan, a sister who is the founder and an active supporter of the Children's Museum of Manhattan and a brother who is a Hollywood film producer (Forrest Gump, Risky Business etc.) Jon and two if his first cousins, James and Andrew, have gone into the family business.

"The Loews Corporation has revenues of $19 billion," Jonathan Tisch told me. "I am chairman and CEO of Loews Hotels. My cousin Andrew is Chairman of the executive committee of the parent company, Loews Corporation, and my other cousin, James, is CEO of the parent company."

"At the present time," Jonathan told me, "the Loews Hotel division consists of eighteen hotels, sixteen in the United States and two in Canada. They are all unique. Among them are the Regency in Manhattan, the Loew's Miami Beach in South Beach and the Loews Lake Las Vegas Resort, which is now under construction. We have three hotels on the grounds of Universal Studios in Orlando."

In the 1970's, Jonathan's father started what has become a grand tradition in Manhattan, the power breakfast at the Regency. One or another member of the Tisch family is usually to be found working the room in the mornings.

I had been working in hotels since the age of 6. When the other kids were in the pool swimming, I was behind the counter or in the kitchen.

Jonathan is a great believer in running his division with the power of "we." He's written a book about it. When everyone works together, it helps the employees, the customers and the bottom line. To this end, he has on occasion rolled up his sleeves and worked the front desks at some of the hotels. He has inaugurated a campaign of 'Loews Loves Pets' and 'Loews Loves Kids.' His focus is on interactivity with the guests and the promotion of the architecture and uniqueness of each of the properties. He also incorporates entertainment ideas into his hotels. His book, "The Power of We: Succeeding Through Partnerships," came out in September 2004 and is now coming out in paperback. It is a best seller.

"I remember seeing my book featured in the window at BookHampton last fall," he said. "It's really nice when it all comes to your home town."

Tisch was born in 1953 and grew up in Scarsdale in good circumstances. He went away to boarding school at "The Gunnery" in Washington, Connecticut near Litchfield, then went to Tufts.

It was while at Tufts, studying political science, that he got a job that might have taken him on a whole career other than the family business.

"I got into TV production while in school, and after I graduated I took a job at WBZ, the Boston affiliate of NBC doing production and cinematography. In 1977, my first year out of Tufts, I was nominated for a local Emmy for my pre-game work involving videotape editing for a New England Patriot football game hosted by Len Berman.

"After three years, I was running a show on jogging hosted by Michael Douglas when my dad called to speak to me. My brother was going to Los Angeles to work in Hollywood and he would really like me to come into the business here in New York. I thought about it. I had been working in hotels since the age of 6. When the other kids were in the pool swimming, I was behind the counter or in the kitchen. It was in my blood. I agreed to join my dad."

But he thinks that his years in TV have served him well. For one thing, it has given him a sense of the importance of entertainment in the hotel business. For another, it gave him a sense of 'soundbites.'

"I was on a 14-city book tour this past fall for my book, also "Charlie Rose," "Larry King" and CBS."

Tisch's office is in Manhattan where he is based. He has an apartment on the Upper East Side and a home in Bridgehampton.

"I have been coming out east on my own for 25 years," he said. "Before that, 30 years ago, my dad and a partner bought the Bell Estate property in Amagansett. So the main house there is my first memory of the East End. Since then I've rented in Southampton, Wainscott and East Hampton and I bought my house in Bridgehampton six years ago. I come out all year around from the city — I love the change of the seasons — and hang out here with family name. When Anne remarried, Amanda kept the Hearst name. Her brother Randy, who is seven years her junior, goes by the surname Harris, the same as his father's.

Last year, Amanda was awarded the title of VIP for the Mercedes Benz Polo Challenge at the Bridgehampton Polo Club, which puts her in the same group of honorees as Russell Simmons and the Hiltons – probably the most famous heiresses in the world. It seems that the two families, although friends, couldn't be more different. Anne and Amanda cherish their privacy which I guess means no reality shows are in the near future for them.

While on the East End, Amanda is said to enjoy restaurants such as the Water Mill institution Suki Zuki and Bridgehampton's World Pie. But if you're looking for a chance to catch a glimpse of this classic beauty, your best bet is to buy a ticket and wait until next year's Riverkeeper's BLUE Benefit. If you can't wait, pick up one of the many magazines she graces and let's hope one day you'll eventually get a chance to read her words in one as well.

and friends." Currently single, Tisch has two children from a former marriage.

Tisch is a great believer in Manhattan.

"It's the most diverse city in the world. I have been helping to promote it as a destination, particularly after 9/11. I've worked with every Mayor since Lindsay. After 9/11 I was asked to be chairman of a task force called 'New York Rising,' and I did. I am Chairman of NYC & Company, the city's tourism marketing agency and convention and visitors bureau. I am a believer in job creation, economic development and international business."

I asked him where on the fence he stood when it came to the proposed West Side Stadium, subsequently defeated.

"I supported it. I saw it as a much needed southern expansion of the Javits. Now I think the Javits will double in size to the north."

I asked what he thought of the Dolans, the father and son who run Cablevision, who led the fight to defeat the West Side Stadium.

"The Dolans believed in protecting what they established with the Garden and Radio City Music Hall. But we would have created a great convention corridor."

I asked who was his favorite New York City Mayor.

"I think Mayor Bloomberg is doing a wonderful job. He has very valuable skills, political savvy and good business sense."

Jonathan Tisch wears many other hats, both in New York City and beyond. He is treasurer of the New York Giants football team. He served a five-year term as an officer of the American Hotel and Lodging Association, including that of Chairman during 1997. Perhaps his greatest national accomplishment is his ten years as chairman of the Travel Business Roundtable, a coalition of prominent chief executives representing various sections of the travel and tourism industry. He was named "Hotel Person of the Year" by Travel Agent Magazine and one of the Top Ten Most Influential Business Leaders by Crain's New York Business. He is on the Board of the World Trade Center Memorial Foundation, and the boards of the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation and the Tribeca Film Institute.

And still he is involved with television. He starred in the premiere episode of "Now Who's Boss?" a television series by TLC and the New York Times Television that explored what happens when a CEO is put back in frontline positions at his own company. And he now is hosting a TV show of his own on Plum TV here in the Hamptons. It is called Open Exchange — Beyond the Boardroom, and on this weekly show he interviews a prominent CEO about their business affairs. He's had on Ace Greenberg, Ian Schrager, Steve Ross, Clive Davis, Bob Wright, Dick Parksons and Mort Zuckerman. See Jonathan Tisch and his guest every Sunday at 10:30 a.m. •

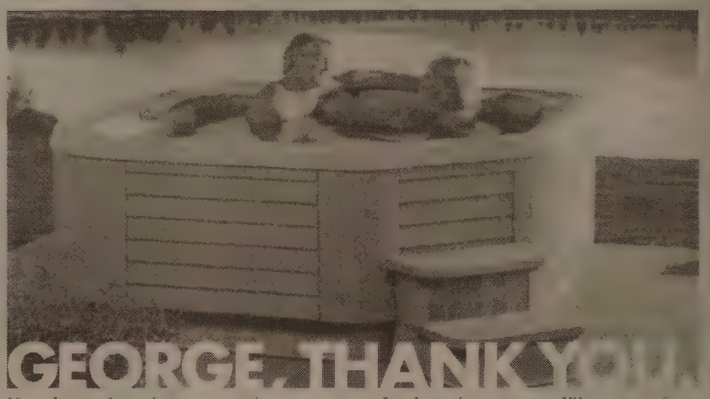
SECURITY THAT WORKS.



GEORGE, THANK YOU!

You changed our lives.

Before we bought the Marquis Spa from you, our lives were completely boring. My husband was never home, he worked 18 hours a day at his law firm.

To keep busy, I jogged, joined volunteer groups, shopped 'til I dropped.

We never saw each other. It was terrible.

Since you installed the spa, our lives have really changed.

The warm water bubbling from those therapeutic heads completely relaxes us.

Look at this picture. We spent a fortune on different backdrops to fit our every mood. This one is a wooded lake. Another one is a deserted tropical beach. And another is...well it's just too personal to talk about.

Now we spend all of our time together, in our new spa.

Its wonderful... except he stopped going to work and lost his job.

If I can get him out of the spa, can you give him a job?

involved presenting my birth certificate.

They shrug and say, "Whatever."

Next, you should know that my last name is almost universally mispronounced. The name Rattiner looks like it should be pronounced RAT-in-er. But my dad always pronounced it Ra-TEEN-er and I think if it was good enough for him it is good enough for me. (Then I met up with a whole other branch of my family in Los Angeles that pronounces it the other way.)

Finally, there is my address. I bought a house at 26 Three Mile Harbor Road some years ago. The seller's lawyer sent me the deed, but the post office returned it saying there was no such address. It needed to be sent to 26 Three Mile Harbor HOG CREEK Road. Then, five years ago, I got word from the Town that my street number was being changed. My new number would be 28, with my neighbor next door getting the coveted 26. Somebody important must have moved in down the street to shove everybody over two. I don't know.

And then, this morning, the telephone rang. It was nine thirty.

"HELLO," a mechanical voice said. WE HAVE IMPORTANT PERSONAL BUSINESS FOR DANIEL S. RA-HEEN-ER. IS THIS MR. RA-HEEN-ER?

I thought about it. "Nope," I said. And then I hung up.

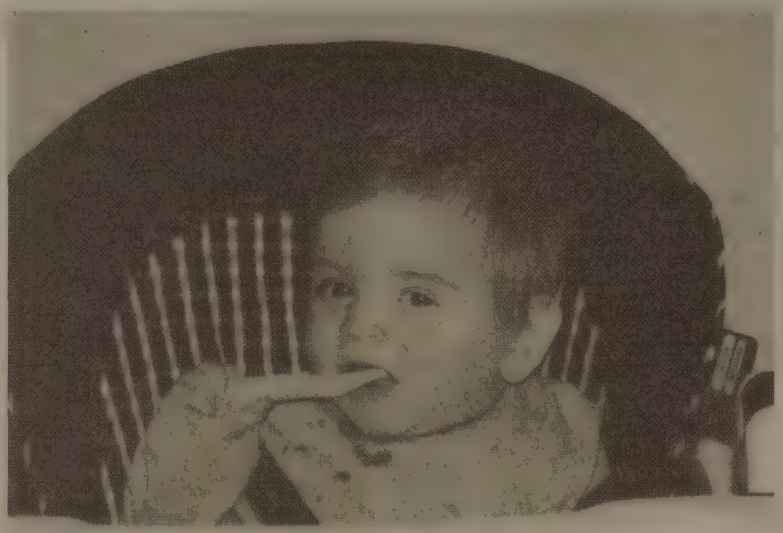
GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE



Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S. and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is geniunely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling -- and their parents, too!

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion Rattiner

Life Is a Musical

One of my secret obsessions is musicals. Okay, I guess it is not really a secret now that I just told you that it was a secret, but still, I like to think of it as a secret. The reason is because I am a guy, and guys, at least my age anyway, are not supposed to admit that they like to watch musicals, let alone sing them out loud for no reason.

Yesterday I was at home watching the famous movie Grease, which just happened to be playing on HBO. All right, fine, it wasn't playing on HBO. I voluntarily put my secret copy of Grease into my DVD player and watched it straight through and I sang every song the whole time. I loved every note of every song in the movie. I was inspired to watch a musical because the day before yesterday I was at the Dan's Papers office in Bridgehampton working on our Tuesday night deadline when I started to hear the theme to Newsies playing in the background. For those of you that don't know, Newsies is a Disney movie/musical about the hard life of newspaper boys in New York City. I believe it was Christian Bale's first movie. He is about fourteen in the film. Anyway, I started hearing the music and instantly recognized it for what it was. Then, I went back into the production department where the music was coming from and started hooting and hollering and singing along.

"Oh, my God, I can't believe you are playing this!" I yelled out to my friend Lauren, who does layout for Dan's.

"You know this? I love this movie. Musicals are the best."

"Me too."

After chatter boxing a little bit about how crazy it is that Christian Bale is now Batman I went back into the editorial department and got back to work. As I stared at my computer screen, I couldn't get out of my head wishing that real life was like a musical. I sat down at my desk and stared into the abyss that is my computer and thought how insanely awesome this would be. If real life were a musical right now, I would burst into song, singing about the struggles of laying out this newspaper so late on Tuesday night. The music would be from the Les Miserables song "Do You Hear The People Sing?" and it would go a little something like this,

Chorus: Do you hear the desk phone ring? Ringing to bother us again. It is the music of an office staff that got a call transferred back again! When the tapping of keyboards, echoes the chewing of the TUMS, this newspaper better be done when tomorrow comes.

My solo: Will you join in our crusade? Who will be strong and stand with me? Beyond the computer haze is there a world you long to see? Then join in the editing that will give you the right to be free!

Chorus

Another Office Members solo: Will you give all you can give so we can leave tonight at last? Computers will freeze and others will live, will you bet that yours will never crash? The blood of the writers will water the meadows of Dan's!!!!

Then the whole office would go bananas and we would all seamlessly start dancing in perfect unison. Giant flickering lights would come out of the ceiling from trap doors as cannon shots and e-mailing sound effects crashed throughout the whole office. The editorial department would start doing somersaults and flips as the production department marched around, throwing blank CDs at one another and the salespeople would all come out of the sales department dressed in business attire as they launched business cards out to the audience. Then everyone would get together for the final chorus which would include everyone singing in one loud and heroic finish.

Man, I wish this were the case. Oh well, I guess it's back to work.

Real life is so boring.

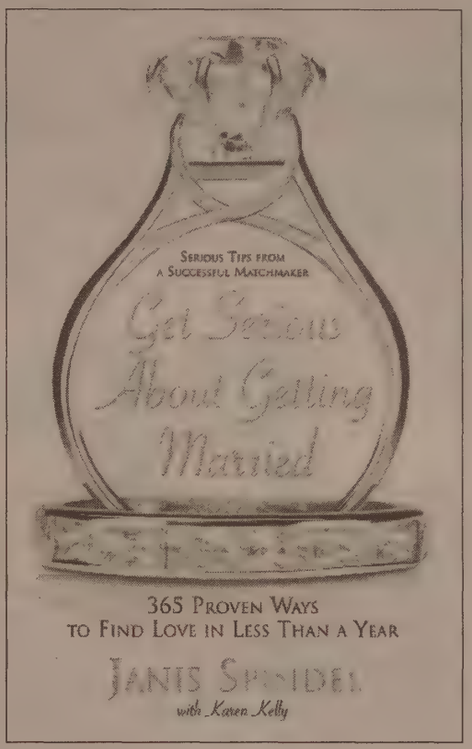
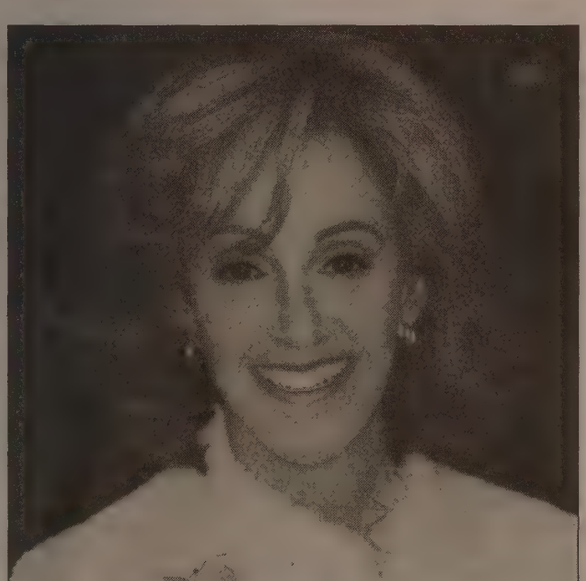
Janis Spindel

president and founder of Janis Spindel Serious Matchmaking, Inc. and author of Get Serious About Getting Married: 365 Proven Ways to Find Love in Less Than a Year (HarperCollins/ReganBooks) has been New York's #1 matchmaker for the past 12 years. With the release of "Get Serious" Janis has been contacted by the lovelorn all over the world - not just for her matchmaking services but for her no nonsense advice and colorful honesty on the subject of male-female relations. New York Magazine has called her the "Matchmaker Extraordinaire," The New York Times has let everyone know who is "Running Cupid's Wall Street Office," and Janis was heralded by The New York Times Magazine as "The Modern Day Matchmaker." Janis Spindel's entrepreneurial spirit combined with her passion for connecting people has put her at the top of the world's second oldest profession - matchmaking. Janis has 700+ marriages and over 800+ monogamous relationships under her belt, and, with her roster of clients expanding across the country and around the world, her reputation truly speaks for itself.



Since 1993 Janis has been helping successful, attractive, well-to-do singles find that lasting love they are looking for. Far from a "dating" agency, Janis Spindel Serious Matchmaking, Inc. provides their clientele with individual attention and marriage-bound matches. As her website reads, "Janis offers a sophisticated boutique style matchmaking service, dealing with upscale professional singles who meet the high JSSM client standards." Potential clients and database members must go through a pre-screening process and all clients must endure a thorough background check.

Ask Janis herself. "I usually have my clients in a committed relationship by the third date. This is no place for a kid in a candy store with a sweet tooth. I get people married." What is the key to romantic success? "Knowing what you want and more importantly, what you don't. What are your non-negotiables? Stop wasting your time with inappropriate partners. Look your best, exude energy - let people know that you are available and fabulous! Games are for children and everyone sees right through them - lose the rules. They are a turn off!"



It's time to GET SERIOUS!

"I think marriage is one of the greatest things on earth. Having someone to love, cry with, talk to, share life, and grow old with: That's sexy. That's hip and cool and stylish. That's a wonderful, honorable goal." - Janis Spindel

What are single people looking for?

Top Three qualities Men are looking for:
1. LOOKS
2. Great body
3. Intelligence

Top Three qualities Women are looking for:
1. Intelligence
2. Sense of humor
3. Character/Integrity

The summer is quickly winding down and just like much of her clientele Janis has spent her summer out east meeting a ton of fabulous singles! As everyone knows, if you are single and live in New York City it is almost a REQUIREMENT to spend your weekends in the Hamptons! We know how many summer romances are forged on the beaches of Long Island, but what do you do after Labor Day has come and gone? How do you keep your summer flame alive, long enough to keep warm this winter? Was this not your lucky summer? Are you ready to "Get Serious" this fall? Check out Janis on the web at www.janisspindelmatchmaker.com.

FLASH FICTION

Confounding Next Door Neighbors

By Joan Zandell

A year ago, two women of a certain age rented the house next door. Now, in the fall, they arrive from New York each Friday night between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock. As I hear their car pull into the driveway, I brace myself for the lengthy hand-clapping-name-calling serenade that will follow. The ladies are accompanied by two dogs; a vociferous dachshund called Lilly, and an overly friendly terrier named Mimi. The quartet proceeds as follows:

Woman one: Lilly!

Lilly: Ruf, ruf!!!

Woman one: Lilly! Come over here!

Woman two: Mimi!

Silence.

Woman two: Mimi! Where are you, Mimi!

Lilly: Ruf, ruf, ruf!!!

Mimi: Ruf, ruf, ruf!

The ritual which goes on for half an hour never varies. It is dark. Between the barks, the sounds of paws racing through leaves can be heard, accompanied by the mellifluous and dulcet tones of their owners screaming voices. The owners, in an effort to corral their charges, traverse my yard several times, calling their dogs' names at the tops of their lungs and terrifying my cats. Lights go on all over the neighborhood. Eventually, they all tire one another out, and proceed to bed. I breathe a sigh of relief, knowing that I will have a brief respite before their morning exercises ensue.

At precisely eight o'clock the dogs, having been confined to the 1920s farmhouse in which they reside since their arrival the preceding evening, come tearing out of their humble abode joyously barking, and head in my direction. They proceed across my property where they go straight to the feeding bowls I have put out for the colony of stray cats that live in the woods behind my house. Moments later the two ladies, at times in their dressing gowns, at other times in full regalia, run behind their pets calling their names like rounds of machine gun fire,

"Lilly!!! Mimi!!! Lilly!!! Mimi!!! Lilly!!! Mimi!!! You naughty dogs, come back here!!!"

But of course, it is too late. The dogs have taken off, as have my cats; terrorized by both the screaming of the women and the barking of the dogs. I now understand why people shoot their neighbors.

I have on various occasions opened my kitchen door and poked my head out attempting to make friendly conversation. Eventually I broach the fact that my neighbor has lost her dog yet again, and perhaps in her haste did not notice that she was standing in my yard in her robe? She looks up at me as if I am a dreadful inconvenience and yells her dog's name.

I suggest that her dogs are eating my cat's food, to which she says,

"Oh, yes? That's why they're getting fat!"

One afternoon, after the women of a certain age have lost both their dogs yet again, they are joined by other neighbors who are out walking their dogs. They all convene on my lawn to have a mutual doggie chat. Would they mind remov-

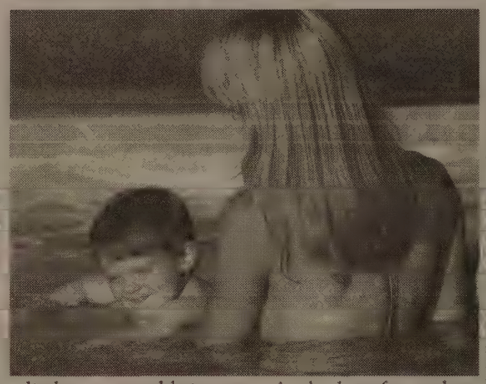
GEORGE'S UNBIASED HOW TO UNWIND TIP #1.



You moved out to the Hamptons to unwind.
To escape the pressure, the noise, the pace, the traffic.
Now, if you could only convince the kids to relax a little more and bring out the grandchildren more often... Everything would be perfect.
You want them to relax? Get a pool. A Kazdin Pool, of course.

We've been designing, building and maintaining pools here for over 30 years.
That's a long time and a lot of pools.
And a lot of awards.
And a lot of happy, relaxed people.
We can't help you get the kids out here more often, but we sure can help make their stay more relaxing.

ANNUAL ALMOST TIME TO CLOSE YOUR POOL/SPA SALE.

ing their dogs from my lawn, I ask, since they are scaring my cats?

"Oh, my dog would never scare your cats."

"My cats are afraid of dogs, do you mind getting off my lawn?"

They throw me a look that says I am a cruel and heartless creature, completely unsympathetic to their plight. When suddenly there is a crisis. Has anyone seen Mimi or Lilly?

"Oh yes," says the man arranged on my lawn, Lilly was headed out towards the highway..... "Oh my God! The highway! Lilly! Lilly! Lilly! Come back here you naughty dog!" And off she goes across my property again, rather than utilize the road that leads to the highway yelling in that rat-a-tat way of hers. At the highway, Lilly appears. "Bad dog! Get over here!" she yells. Lilly wags her tail and walks briskly back to the house.

Now, I consider myself not only an animal lover, but a temperate individual who is not given to great bursts of anger. However, my patience is at its end. This past Saturday evening, as I sat at dinner with friends, my neighbors, apparently on their way to a dinner party, lost control of their dogs in the three feet between the car and the front door. A mad name calling fest began. The one woman of a certain age who shall remain nameless, and her three coiffed and dressed for partying girlfriends wearing high heels and carrying pocketbooks and impressive name brand shopping bags filled with goodies, walked across my back yard in single file all yelling, "Mimi! Mimi! Mimi!" They seemed unable to call out the dog's name in any way other than in groups of three and at the top of their lungs.

My guests looked at me. I excused myself and went to the back door. One of the women had her back to me. I opened the door and stepped out.

"Lose your dog again?" I queried.

The coiffed matron, a complete stranger, stood two feet from my door. She turned around and looking right through me she said, "Can you imagine? The little devil got away!" and turned around with her back to me.

Well, I was flummoxed. There was no, "I beg your pardon," or "I'm terribly sorry to intrude," nothing even remotely apologetic, just four loud New York/Brooklynese accents screaming, "Mimi! Mimi! Mimi! Lilly! Get over here! Lilly, you naughty dogs, get over here!"

After fifteen minutes the two four-legged creatures were finally caught; followed by the sound of women's voices, the slamming of car doors, and a blissful if undoubtedly short-lived silence.

Horrified, my guests asked me if this was my neighbors' usual behavior. I had to admit it had become quite run of the mill. There was general high-toned disapproval. For the remainder of the dinner I was advised to formulate a plan.

We decided that each morning from this day forward, I will deliver my cats to my neighbor's door to be fed. Then, at precisely seven-thirty I will appear in their garden stark naked screaming my cats' names.

"Max! Sophie! Max! Sophie! Come here, you sweet adorable kitties!"

Then next as a training ritual, I will pour cold water on both the dogs and their owners each time they cross my property. Perhaps after several months, my neighbors of a certain age will feel gratitude for the relatively harmless discipline I have imposed upon them and will be encouraged to take things further by making an appointment with one of the Hampton's many reputable dog trainers. Or as the harsh winter approaches, perhaps they will return to New York for longer stretches and next season choose to rent somewhere more remote, like Canada for instance. Or perhaps some kindly real estate agent will recommend a house that has acres of land and few neighbors, at a fraction of what they pay now? One can only hope that Divine intervention will deliver the ideal solution.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #364
Time to Get Out of Dodge...

Hurricane Katrina has certainly been a wake-up call for everyone! I thought it might be a good time to review signs that a storm has gotten out of hand and it might be a good idea to leave the island...

You'll know the water is dangerously high when the North Ferry is docking at the tennis courts...

When Jack Keiffer has detached the dory from the roof of The Dory and is selling seats...

When you hear Pat and Steve yelling, "Close the restaurant and save the shrimp!"

When you see that Jack's Marina has unhooked itself from the sidewalk and the store is now a houseboat with a big sign that reads "Special Today: Paddles, Life vests, Blowup rafts that seat six!"

When you drive past Mashomack Preserve and you notice they are building a large boat and it is 80 cubits by 20 cubits by 16 cubits....

When you see tents being erected on the roof of the school....

When the South Ferry, being full, attaches pontoons to the sides of your car and tows you for half price...

When the Ram Island residents, now completely cut off from Shelter Island due to high water, decide to saw off Ram Island from underneath and everybody hangs sheets in their yards to catch the wind and sail north to attach themselves to Martha's Vineyard...

The yacht club boaters who are sober are battening down every hatch they can find and dripping wax on the seams in an attempt to make their boat more watertight than a frog's ass. The yachters who are too inexperienced or too in the bag to appreciate a hurricane, are figuring that they can handle this wind and are working out how much canvas and beer they need to get to Newport in record time...

You'll know the water is high when you see Osprey floating by in their nests....

You'll know the water is high when you see caddies rowing golfers to the next hole. And you should pause to admire the talent it takes to stand in a boat, lean over the side and hit a moving ball...

You'll know the water is high when the post office workers loan you a snorkel and mask to get your mail because they still can't give it to you over the counter...

The bed and breakfast places are closing right and left because the beds are floating away with tourists still asleep in them. When they awaken, they will be crossing Long Island Sound with their bills taped to their foreheads...

You'll know the water is high when Bug Light has bugged out and is now acting as a buoy...

You'll know the wind is high and the current is strong when the South Ferry leaves Shelter Island and docks in Riverhead...

When you see Dan's Papers being distributed in giant zip lock bags...

When you realize why Bliss's sells key chains that float....

You'll know the water is high when you see all the boats in people's backyards are now afloat

Luxuries

With Maria Tennariello

Naming itself, ETWABFLATI, the sculpture started out as a 400-pound block of stone that was selected by the artist, Christopher Totaro, at a quarry in Colorado after many previous boulders were cut and rejected. The stone is an internationally renowned northern Colorado alabaster that is sought the world over for its strength, purity of color, translucency and vein structure. The finished object took approximately 2,000 hours to complete, is four feet tall and weighs about 45 pounds with the base about 105 pounds. The artist also works in bronze, marble, limestone, sandstone, North American and Italian alabaster for interior or exterior installations as well as canvas. The work is specific to the environment and the individual or family who commissions it. As an artist, Tortaro feels it is imperative that he meet with the individual and visit the space prior to the selection of the stone.

Available at Christopher Totaro Studios, New York City and Southampton. 917-771-1339

25 Years Ago In Dan's Papers August 29, 1980

The Attack of the Joggers
August 29, 1980

By Dan Rattiner

Here's the plot. In the Southeastern corner of Arizona, there is the small town of Midville of about 400 people. This town used to be a mining town, but since the mine closed down about twenty years ago, it's just been a sleepy little place way out in the middle of nowhere. The town is surrounded on all sides by desert.

One morning, Dale Warren, who is the sheriff of Midville, looks out the window of his office and sees a huge cloud of dust on the horizon.

"Looks like a dust storm," he says to his deputy.

"Too big for a dust storm," the deputy says.

Indeed, the cloud extends the entire way across the whole horizon, a distance of maybe thirty miles.

"I wonder what it could be," Dale says.

The morning passes and the cloud of dust grows bigger and bigger. It also seems to be coming closer. Various people in the town stop in to see the sheriff, to report the sighting at first, to ask about it with some concern, and finally to express alarm. The dust cloud now covers half of the sky, and there are tiny specks visible on the horizon along the ground. Apparently, there is a great herd of some kind stampeding in the direction of the little town.

"We'd better call the state police," Dale says.

Dale and the deputy walk briskly over to the wooden telephone building, where Stella sits with the town's only switchboard.

"Try and raise Pecos City," the sheriff says.

At the other end of the line, the 50-year-old Commander of the State Police, Fred Peterson, chews gum as he tries to make out what Dale is telling him over the phone. The connection is poor.

"You're what? They're what?" he says. "Could you repeat that?"

"I said there seems to be something very strange going on out here. There's this entire herd of..... I can't believe it. There's this entire herd of....."

Dale sets the phone down and stares, wide-eyed, as this huge herd of joggers comes charging into the town. There are millions of them, and their arms and legs work like pistons as they run over everything in sight. An outhouse collapses, a farmhouse , the country store, the feed store. They all collapse into timber as this huge wall of joggers races through. Stella gets up from her switchboard, knocking over a chair, and together with Dale and the Deputy, she retreats in horror toward a back room. Moments later, the entire little telephone building is overrun by the joggers, who trample through, breathing rhythmically and staring straight ahead. In moments, all there is left is timber and an impenetrable wall of dust. The joggers have flattened the town.

"Hello? Hello?" At the other end of the line State Trooper Peterson can't understand what's happened. "We've been cut off," he says. "Something must be going on out there."

The following morning Trooper Peterson, together with his twenty-year-old daughter Allison and her boyfriend Bob drive out to the little town to see what happened.

"We must have made a wrong turn," Allison says to her father.

"No, we haven't," Fred says. "I know this road like the back of my hand. Midville should be just around the bend."

But then they round the bend and, there it is, nothing. Fred stops the car and gets out. Bob and Allison get out too, arm in arm.

"I don't believe this," Fred says.

All around them are small bits of wood and glass that used to be the little mining town in the desert. There is nothing else, except for an occasional sneaker or sweatband.

"What do you make of it?" Bob says. Bob is a biologist at the nearby Pecos City College.

"Beats me," Fred says, scratching his head.

Fred goes back to his police car to answer a call that has come in over the police radio.

"Got to get back," he says to the others. "The Governor is coming to Pecos City tomorrow for a three day stay. There's lots to do."

That night, back in Pecos City, Bob and Allison get in Bob's beat up old Chevy and drive back out to the desert. They have a tent folded up on the roof, and it is their intention to stay the night and solve the mystery once and for all.

"I'm sure this is something completely explainable," Bob says. "It's just a matter of spending some time and finding out."

Bob and Allison arrive about midnight and set up their tent just about on the spot where the Midville Telephone Exchange used to be. They have binoculars, a lantern, two sleeping bags, and a flashlight. But they do not have either a radio or a weapon. They go to sleep.

At five a.m., in the early dawn, they young couple is awakened by a strange rumbling sound. They open the tent flap and, there, out on the horizon, is the enormous cloud of dust. The joggers are returning.

Bob picks up the binoculars and looks out.

"My God," he says.

"What is it?" Allison asks, grabbing his arm.

"I don't know. I can't make it out."

But the joggers come closer and closer and, finally, through the binoculars Bob can see just exactly what it is.

"I don't believe this," he says. "It's some kind of, of MARATHON. Here. Look."

Bob hands Allison the binoculars.

"There are so MANY of them," she says. "And they're coming this way. What are we going to do?"

"I don't know!" Bob cries.

The joggers get closer and closer and then, when they are just a few hundred yards from Bob's flimsy tent, they all suddenly collapse in a great heap, gasping for air. They writhe around for a moment or two, one million joggers as far as the eye can see, and then they stop. They're dead.

Bob and Allison stare at each other for a moment. And then it is Bob who finally speaks.

"They must have tried to jog too far," he says. •

Whispers
With Gina Glickman

"Doc Hampton"

John McEnroe's spring training certainly paid off this summer. Last weekend he won his second consecutive title for the LTU Champions Trophy, at the Sportime Tennis Club in Amagansett. Presented by Volvo, the LTU player line-up included McEnroe, Goran Ivanesivec, Guillermo Vilas, Anders Jarryd, Aaron Krickstein, Mansour Bahrami, Peter McNamara and Johan Kriek. In between matches, McEnroe was pumped up for the tournament and shared his secret to success, "I'm in good shape. I've had some good results this year because I'm fitter. When you train harder you lose some weight, so I've lost a little bit but I'm trying to also get strong. I don't want to just be skinny. I mean, some people don't eat and lose weight but I've actually been eating quite a bit and hopefully maintaining strength." Saturday evening, despite the cutting edge competition, all the tennis Pro's smiled pretty at the Players Party at Cain Nightclub at Cabana Hotel, which raised more than fifty thousand dollars benefiting The Retreat Agency for Domestic Violence Services in East Hampton, and The Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research. Aside from Johnny Mac's entertaining tennis tantrums, the major highlight was when the one and only Michael J. Fox and his beautiful wife Tracy Pollan arrived at the players party. Fox shared with me how his foundation got involved with LTU. "It just was a fortunate thing, I got a call from the foundation saying Mac had been in touch and I guess they were bringing someone about doing this event and the rumor that I heard was that Back To The Future was on in the background and they thought of us, so however it happened I'm very grateful." From hit TV shows, Family Ties and Spin City to classic-memorable movies like Back to the Future, Doc Hollywood and Teen Wolf, Michael is a living Hollywood legend. In 1998, when Michael publicly announced he had been diagnosed with young-onset Parkinson's disease, the illness didn't slow him down. He went on a passionate

Dear Dan,

The thrust of your World Affairs column is that American efforts to democratize Iraq either will fail or succeed with the chance that a new dictator will arise. This smacks of defeatism and appeasement. Extending this logic, we should not intervene anywhere for any reason because either the underlying conditions will not change or, if they do change, there is a possibility that they will revert to the conditions that warranted the intervention.

You state "we are committing ourselves to an endless lifetime of putting out forest fires around the world." This may be so, but consider the alternative if this does not happen. In the same issue, you had an article on the anniversary of the Westhampton fire. What would have been the result if the nine non-Westhampton fire companies or the federal C-130s had not responded because the fires did not concern them? The adjoining areas sent resources out of a sense of community and concern that the fire could spread to them.

You say the Bush strategy of combating terrorists in another country rather than in ours "is surely a poorly thought-out tactic," citing explosions in England, Spain, and Indonesia. I believe that this makes the case for the policy. If you do not bring this war to the enemy, these explosions demonstrate that this enemy willing to bring the war to us. This is implicitly recognized in your conclusion, "We would be better served to use all our military and diplomatic resources to defeat the lunatic fringe of Islam where we find it." We found it in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Diplomatic resources did not serve us with the Taliban in Afghanistan and are not serving us and the Europeans with the mullahs in Iran. Since al-Qaeda does not maintain diplomatic offices, where would our diplomats be sent and what would be their mission? What would we be able to offer them to stop their religion-based policies?

Islam divides the world into the world of Islam and the world of the infidels. Once an area is considered Dar al-Islam, it is always to be under Islamic control. If it falls back into the hands of infidels, it is the duty of believers to recover it for Islam. For more on this, see the writings of scholars like Bernard Lewis and Bat Ye'or.

Consider where the explosions you cite occurred. Indonesia is a Muslim country. Was it deviant in the eyes of the Muslim perpetrators? In Spain, the explosion occurred to influence a national election. Southern Spain is Dar al-Islam, known as al-Andalus under Caliphate of Cordoba. You did not cite the on-going guerilla war of the Moros in the Philippines, also Dar al-Islam.

You seem confident that the extremists will get defeated anyway since they are attacking "every secular government in the world." Since you qualify this claim by saying "They can't beat us all," you must believe they will defeat some of us. The question is which ones. This reminds me of Churchill's famous quote about feeding the crocodile to appease it, hoping to be the last to be eaten. We will have to defend ourselves at some time. The only question is where and when.

Respectfully,

mission creating a foundation to help educate the public, fight the disease and eventually find a cure. Fox told me he won't ever give up hope and anyone can help, "Make yourself aware, not only the possibilities for research in Parkinson's but in all kinds of things. We are on the cusp of amazing breakthroughs in all kinds of areas in medical research and it's important that we seize that opportunity and we move forward because it's not just going to fall out of the sky, but it is there for us if we go for it. Fox performed a guitar solo for the crowd alongside Tommy Hilfiger's brother, rocker/entrepreneur Andy Hilfiger who is partners with Jennifer Lopez. Sad but true, Labor Day weekend is here. Star Room will be in full force, so make sure you call ahead and reserve a table. See you at the Grand Prix on Sunday.

Until next week-Life is short, you only live once, so party on!

Director, Writer, Producer, Entertainment & Lifestyle Correspondent, Gina Glickman is currently creating shows for MTV and can be seen Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays starring on News 12 Long Island's "What's Hot in the Hamptons."

and men who haven't had a day in their boats in years are sitting contentedly in the storm drinking beer and fishing...

The old neighborhoods are running gill nets between their houses...

No one has been able to tread clams for three days and three nights...

The liquor stores are threading corks together in an attempt to get into the Guiness Book of World Records with the raft made solely out of wine corks; they are dubbing it the S.S. Ripple."

Men with the Sunday Ticket have attached flotation devices to their lazy boys, TV's and Direct TV dishes and frankly, they don't care where they land until after the game...

You'll know how bad the current is when see the ferries playing bumper cars in the channel.

You'll know how bad the surf is when you see surfer idiots from all over attempting to catch the waves that will send them onto the patio of the Pridwin...

You'll know the storm is bad when the Republicans and the Democrats agree to issue a statement that reads: "After careful consideration, we have agreed the oncoming storm may exceed the ability of the island residents to withstand it. It may be necessary to leave the island for your personal protection. If you are reading this message after opening a bottle, it may be a little late for you. As a last resort you may lash yourself to the flag pole outside of the firehouse. We apologize we cannot issue you a flare to attract rescue as it will violate town fire protection codes."

Riding A Wave At Waters Crest

Newcomer Shows Great Promise On The Long Island Wine Scene

By Lenn Thompson

Waters Crest Winery, co-owned by Jim and Linda Waters, is still a relatively new winery, tucked into a small industrial park in Cutchogue. And while the tasting room and production facilities may be among the smallest around, the wines that come out of them are far from diminutive.

To the Waters', the winery is truly a family affair. Visit on most any day and you're just about guaranteed to meet Jim, Linda or even their daughters. They are a warm, charming family and they'll make you feel right at home as you taste the wines and, if you like, get a quick tour of the barrel room.

In the past I've called Jim's Riesling my favorite local version, so I was looking forward to tasting his 2004 vintage along with five other current releases.

I started, not surprisingly, with the Waters Crest Winery 2004 Riesling ($17). Super-pale straw in the glass, the nose is even more aromatic than the 2003, with peach, candied orange peel and faint mineral notes. Each sip of this light-bodied white offers stone fruit flavors – white peaches and apricots – that morph into citrus before finishing with crisp apple. The acidity is down from the 2003 bottling, but this is still a nice Riesling.

Waters' 2004 Gewurztraminer ($18) is similar in color, but the nose is more austere, with rose petal, honeysuckle and minty-spice notes. Medium bodied and less aggressive than some Gewurztraminers, this is an approachable pour with citrus and faint lychee flavors and just enough acidity to tingle your tongue on the finish.

Jim made two decidedly differently Chardonnays in 2004. The Waters Crest Winery 2004 Chardonnay ($16) is steel-fermented, but does see some oak during aging. The nose is simple and light with pear and vanilla aromas. It's medium-bodied and features a little acidity to go along with pear and apple flavors. The finish is a little disappointing and short and this wine seems to be between styles, searching for an identity.

The Waters Crest Winery 2004 Private Reserve Chardonnay ($25) is a much richer, more complex wine for more serious wine drinkers. Barrel fermented and aged, it's a slightly darker, medium straw color and presents toasty oak, vanilla and smoke on the nose with just the faintest hints of citrus. The palate is filled with toasty oak, green apple, lemon and minerals. The finish is a bit short right now, but this wine has spectacular aging potential. Lay a few bottles down and watch how it develops.

Moving onto the Waters Crest red offerings, the 2003 Merlot ($18) has a nose redolent with blueberry jam, fresh plums and just a little oak char-

Taking Flight With Osprey's Dominion

Long Island Winery Takes Top Honors At New York State Competition

By Lenn Thompson

In early August, Osprey's Dominion Vineyards was named New York's "Winery of the Year" by the New York Grape and Wine Foundation at its annual New York Food and Wine Classic. The winery earned the honor by winning seven medals at the event, including two double golds, one gold, two silvers and two bronzes.

Winemaker Adam Suprenant, a Bronxville, New York, native who joined Osprey's Dominion after graduating from the world-renowned U.C. Davis oenology program, is proud of the winery's showing.

"It's great to be recognized after more than four years of dedicated hard work here at Osprey's Dominion," said Suprenant, ibut it also reflects well on the commitment and philosophy of the owners, Bud Koehler and Bill Tyree, to produce high quality wines. Much credit is also deserved by our vineyard manager, Tom Stevenson (also a U.C. Davis graduate) for giving me great fruit to work with."

Osprey's Dominion Vineyards' 2001 Fume Blanc ($15) was one of the bronze medal winners. Fume Blanc is a name coined by Robert Mondavi years ago that is usually used to describe Sauvignon Blanc that is fermented and aged in oak barrels. You don't see much Fume Blanc on the East Coast and it's quite different from other local Sauvignon Blancs. It's a medium gold in the glass and has a smoky nose accented by spice and fig notes. Full bodied and tongue-coating, this wine shows significant oak character, pear and melon flavors, and just a little acidity. Suprenant recommends serving it with "smoked fish and game. Maybe pork. Seafood with a rich sauce like beurre blanc."

"It's great to be recognized after more than four years of dedicated hard work here," said winemaker Suprenant, "but it also reflects well on the commitment and philosophy of the owners, Bud Koehler and Bill Tyree"

The Osprey's Dominion Vineyards 2001 Reserve Chardonnay ($18) is rich and buttery on the nose with a tropical background of pineapple. Pineapple flavors abound in this wine, with oak barrel components like vanilla, butter and cream adding complexity. There is also some citrus in the mid-palate before a long, lingering finish. This wine probably really stood out in competition because of its intense tropical aromas. It won a silver medal.

There are quite a few excellent rosĒs being made locally, but Osprey Dominion's 2004 Vin Gris ($12) is a real standout. Made with Cabernet Sauvignon grapes, this wine not only won a gold medal, but was named the best vinifera rosé in the state. It could

LETTER FROM DAN'S WINE GUIDE EDITOR

What I Did Over Summer Vacation

David and I decided to renovate our Orient cottage. No strangers to this process, having renovated four houses now, I can tell you with certainty that this becomes no easier with experience. What it left us with, aside from spackle dust in our hair and resolve not to renovate anything for a while, was little time to taste current releases at our favorite wineries.

Our solution to this dilemma came in the form of a private, completely blind tasting of meritage or Bordeaux-style reds from around the globe. Friends in the local wine and food trade, including winemakers Eric Fry (Lenz) and Stan Shumacher (Borghese), gathered at our temporary residence on Shelter Island and we all tasted 19 reds, 9 of which came from local vineyards. The results, which I will write about in the October Dan's Wine Guide, yielded a few surprises. Interesting note: neither winemaker picked out his wine – something that is "extremely difficult to do," according to Eric – but the locals stood up well to such luminaries as the 2001 Opus One, 2000 Chateau Canon (St. Emilion), and a lovely 1997 Chateau Latour (Pauillac). Stay tuned for the exciting and fascinating results.

Thanks to the dedication of our intrepid wine writer, Lenn Thompson, this issue of Dan's Wine Guide is packed with reviews of many local wines in addition to a book review of guru Robert M. Parker's biography by Elin McCoy.

A visit to Osprey's Dominion, which won the Winery of the Year award at the annual New York Wine & Grape Foundation's annual Wine Classic, yielded a new favorite rosé, Vin Gris, which makes Lenn's OTB awards list, as well as an impressive Cab Franc.

Water's Crest, touted from the start as one of Lenn's favorite local wineries, scores high marks for its 2004 Riesling, which I have not yet tried. David and I plan a Riesling tasting next, which we'll hold in Orient as soon as the renovation is over.

Many of Lenn's favorite wineries lie on the North Road (Route 48) Sound Avenue corridor. Read about them in this issue along with a special edition of Over the Barrel: the 2005 OTB awards.

See you in the fall. Cheers.

Dan's THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

almost be mistaken for a light Pinot Noir in the glass, and offers fresh strawberries and cherries on the nose with an almost buttery accent. Comfortingly medium-bodied, this pink wine is still refreshing. It's reminiscent of strawberry ice cream in a homemade waffle cone. It captures summer's essence and bounty wonderfully.

Osprey's Dominion's other silver medal was awarded for its 2001 Merlot ($18). Cherry flavors, firm, but smooth, tannins, and a slightly earthy nose characterize this wine. While well made, tasty and elegant, I don't think it stands out as a top-tier Merlot.

A wine that does stand out, however, is the Osprey's Dominion Vineyard 2001 Cabernet Franc ($20). Aged for 14 months in both French and American, this blend of 77-percent Cabernet Franc, 17-percent merlot and 6-percent Cabernet Sauvignon has a tremendously complex nose of cherries, blackberries, chocolate and both Italian and Thai basil. That complexity carries over upon tasting, without heavy tannins getting in the way. The extended finish is delicious with soft cherry and hints of spice. It's no wonder that it won double gold (meaning it was unanimous among all judges) and was named best Cabernet Franc in the state.

Suprenant shows excellent blending abilities again with his Osprey's Dominion Vineyard 2001 Flight ($30), a merlot-heavy blend of Bordeaux varieties. It's full bodied and features significant tannins (from 35-percent new French Oak). The flavors run the gamut from blueberries and blackberries to garden herbs, tomato leaves and wet soil. The tannins and hints of acidity make this a wine with superior aging potential.

Osprey's Dominion also makes Riesling, Cabernet Sauvignon, an un-oaked Sauvignon Blanc, Pinot Noir, and affordable table wines under its Richmond Creek label. Visit www.ospreysdominion.com or call 765-6188

Dan's THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

Book Review:

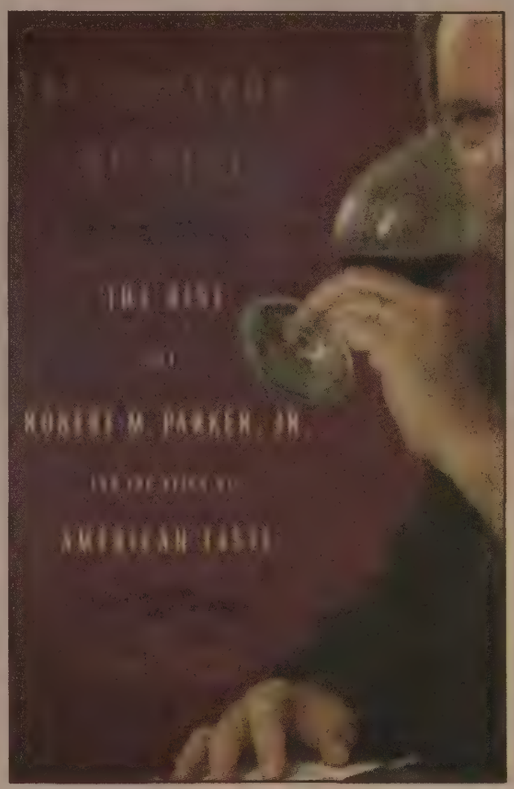
The Emperor Of Wine: The Rise of Robert M. Parker

Whether you like him, hate him, or have no opinion about the man at all, Robert M. Parker is the single most influential critic in the world today – in any industry. No other critic, be it a New York Times theater critic or movie critic Roger Ebert, has such a profound and far-reaching effect on the things he or she reviews. Parker truly is the "Emperor of Wine."

In her biography, The Emperor of Wine: The Rise of Robert M. Parker and the Reign of American Taste, Elin McCoy, a contributing editor at Food & Wine, describes Parker's ordinary childhood in Monkton, MD, his first trip to France, how his rise to prominence coincided with the changing wine landscape in America and his intense drive to change the way wine is purchased and made.

McCoy is a gifted writer and storyteller, so the book is an easy and interesting read. As someone extremely familiar with the wine industry (she's been writing about wine for over 30 years), McCoy has a thorough understanding of the impact Parker has had on the world wide wine industry.

Among wine lovers, Parker is a polarizing figure, and McCoy contends that no matter how talented a nose and palate Parker has, it's not healthy for one critic to wield so much power over an industry. Parker championed the 100-point (really a 50-point scale because a wine gets 50 points for merely existing) which, while easily understood, reduces what many consider a subjective work of art. In his defense, Parker says that he never meant his scores as more than a part of his overall reviews, which include concise descriptions.



McCoy offers a fairly well-balanced account of Parker. She clearly admires his ascent to the throne and considers him a charming, well-intentioned individual, though she also notes his arrogance, which is obvious in her discussion of a sake tasting:

"Parker had no previous experience with sake and knew little about it, but that didn't stop him from extending his methods and ratings system to a comprehensive tasting of 225 of the best, in Tokyo, though he later described it as one of the most difficult he'd undertaken. The alcohol level in sake is 18 percent, higher than the average 13 or 14 percent for table wines, and about a third of the way through, sweat pouring off his brow, Parker thought, What have I got myself into? He felt as though he would drop dead right there. From then on, if a sample didn't smell appealing, he passed. When he wrote up the tasting in his newsletter, fifty-two sakes merited scores between 87 and 92..."

Parker is an undeniably interesting man and this book is an engaging, informative read, even for someone who follows the wine industry closely. At times it gets bogged down in the history of wine in America, but bits of that tale help frame Parker's influence on and reaction to the industry. I've read a lot about Parker over the years, and there wasn't a ton of new information here, but McCoy's prose makes this an enjoyable read. And the first-person accounts of seeing the "Emperor" at work shed new light on his process – as well as his ability to bully.

Five Reasons Why Route 48, AKA "North Road" Is So Great

Route 48 on the North Fork, also known locally as the North Road, is sometimes our region's most forgotten wine trail. While Route 25 runs right through towns like Jamesport and Mattituck, and right by some of Long Island's most revered, not to mention well-marketed, producers, Route 48 offers fewer wineries, but it may just be my favorite way to enjoy local wines.

Here's five different, but in some cases related, reasons.

It's easy. Route 25 has more wineries, more villages, more farm stands and more traffic lights. That means more people and more traffic. Traveling east on 25 can be frustratingly difficult on busy weekends. I avoid it whenever possible. In fact, even if I have an appointment at Paumanok or Pellegrini Vineyards, I take Route 48 out and cut down one of the cross streets. It saves fifteen or so minutes of driving time.

It's quiet. This one is related to the traffic and the people. On some days when Route 25 is jammed and its tasting rooms are overflowing, you can sneak just north and enjoy a much quieter wine tasting experience. Sometimes you just don't want to have to elbow your way up to the tasting bar. Route 48 has a more country feel

2005 OTB Wine Awards

Harvest season is almost upon us and I thought this a good time to reflect on the wines I've tasted in the past year or so. Quite a few wines make their way into my tasting lineup each week – some great, some not so great – but this year I've decided to highlight my favorites in the 2005 OTB Wine Awards (named for this column that you hopefully read every weekend).

As you read through the award recipients, please note that I refer to each as my favorites (with runners up where appropriate) instead of deeming them the "best" or "top" wines. I think it a bit ridiculous to single out one wine as the absolute best when we have so many talented winemakers making so many delicious wines.

By naming these my favorites for the year, I'm telling you exactly what they are – the Long Island favorites of one lone wine writer, me. You might love them as wellÖor you may think I'm crazy. That's what's so great about wine. No one has the same exact palate, not even the "experts." Remember my motto: "Drink what you like. Don't listen to critics." Except for me, of course!

My Favorite Riesling: Waters Crest Winery 2003 Riesling ($17). I tell anyone that will listen about Jim's Riesling. The 2004 isn't quite as amazing, but it's still quite good. Runner Up: Peconic Bay Winery 2004 Riesling ($15)

My Favorite Gewurztraminer: Lenz Winery 2003 Gewurztraminer ($20). Winemaker Eric Fry does great things with this grape. It's classic with lychee, rose petals and faint mineral notes. Runner Up: Corey Creek 2003 Gewurztraminer ($25)

My Favorite Sauvignon Blanc: Macari Vineyards 2004 Sauvignon Blanc ($16). Citrusy, fresh, clean and absolutely thirst-quenching. I could drink this all summer. Runner Up: Channing Daughters Winery "Sauvignon" ($24).

My Favorite Chardonnay: Sherwood House Vineyards 2001 Chardonnay ($20).).In a category overflowing with options and styles, this classy, uber-elegant bottling is still my favorite. Runners Up: Wolffer Estate Vineyards 2001 Estate Selection Chardonnay ($27) and Macari Vineyards 2004 Early Wine ($13).

My Favorite "Other" White: Channing Daughters Winery 2004 Sylvanus ($24). This field blend of Muscat Ottanel, Pinot Grigio and Pinot Bianco reminds me of the ripest honeydew melon I've ever eaten. If only it didn't sell out so quickly every year! Runner Up: Wolffer Estate Vineyards 2004 Pinot Gris ($22)

My Favorite RosÈ: Osprey's Dominion's Vin Gris ($12). Let's just say I'm glad I tasted it before writing this column. Runner Up: Macari Vineyards 2004 Rosé ($12)

My Favorite Pinot Noir: Castello di Borghese 2002 Reserve Pinot Noir ($35). Smooth, refined and complex, I think Miles from Sideways would like this one. Runners Up: Wolffer Estate Vineyards 2002 Pinot Noir ($50) and Laurel Lake Vineyards 2003 Reserve Pinot Noir ($30).

My Favorite Cabernet Sauvignon: Lenz Winery 2000 Cabernet Sauvignon ($30). Make sure you get the 2000 (not the 1999) and you'll be rewarded. Runner Up: Jason's Vineyard 2001 Cabernet Sauvignon ($18)

My Favorite Merlot: Roanoke Vineyards 2000 Merlot ($38). Full berry flavors joined by spice, toasty oak and an amazing finish make this wine my favorite among the boatloads of Merlot made here. Runner Up: Bedell Cellars 2001 Reserve Merlot ($30)

My Favorite Cabernet Franc: Raphael 2001 Cabernet Franc ($42). This first varietal release of Cabernet Franc shows what can be done with it in the best growing years. Runners Up: Broadfields Wine Cellars 2002 Cabernet Franc ($18) and Pellegrini Vineyards 2001 Cabernet Franc ($18)

My Favorite Red Blend: Paumanok Vineyards 2001 Assemblage ($36). Winemaker Charles Massoud's blend of Bordeaux varieties leads an impressive group. Runners Up: Martha Clara 2002 6024 ($40) and Bedell 2000 Cupola ($40).

My Favorite Sparkling Wine: Lieb Family Cellars Blanc de Blanc ($35). It's the wine my wife and I toasted with at our wedding this summer. Runner Up: The Old Field Sparkling Wine ($35) My Favorite Dessert Wine: Macari Block E 2003 ($36). It's the perfect way to end any meal. I've even used it to make friends realize they like dessert wine. Runners Up: Paumanok 2004 Late Harvest Sauvignon Blanc ($39) and Martha Clara Vineyards 2003 Himmel ($31)

As always, I welcome any comments or questions. Just email me at lenn@lenndevours.com and maybe your question will be featured in an upcoming edition of Dan's Papers.

acter. It's soft and delicious in the mouth, showing black fruit, well-integrated tannins and hints of tobacco with just a little background acidity. This is a great food wine, and I don't mean that as a bad thing.

If you're sick of drinking Long Island Merlot (even the good ones), splurge on a bottle of Waters Crest Winery 2003 Cabernet Franc ($30), a double gold medal winning wine at the 2005 New York Food and Wine Festival in Canandaigua in the Finger Lakes region. Some local Cab Franc can be a bit lean and lifeless, but this one is different from the second it hits the bottom of your glass. Extended maceration gives this wine a deep, rich garnet color and beautiful extraction. Aromas of cocoa, exotic spice and wet topsoil reach right up out of the glass. This red is full bodied and mouth-filling, with lush chocolate flavors. Jim made only 130 cases, with long-term aging in mind.

Visit www.waterscrestwinery.com or call 734-5065 for more information or to order wines. But, to get the full Waters Crest experience, you really need to join Jim and his family in the tasting room this fall.

much of the time. More romantic, even.

It's personal. Every time I visit Route 48's wineries, I'm impressed with how many tasting rooms are staffed by either the winery owner or his or her family. If you go to Roanoke Vineyards, owners Rich and Soraya Pisacano are there, pouring wines, talking to customers and sharing their passion and knowledge. Go to Shinn Estate Vineyards (which is technically north of 48 on Oregon Road) and you can get a tour from owners David Page and Barbara Shinn and learn about their focus on organic and biodynamic farming. A wine always tastes best when paired with passionate, knowledgeable people who were directly involved in the wine's making. You just don't get that everywhere. And, with fewer people usually in the tasting room, you'll get personal attention – always fun and educational.

It's beautiful. Again, fewer cars, less congestion and fewer villages makes you feel like you're really in farm country. Many of the most beautiful vineyard-scapes can be found on Route 48 and the views from Palmer Vineyards and Macari Vineyards' decks are hard to beat. Plus, you can visit the region's oldest commercial vineyard at Castello di Borghese, with its mature, gnarled vines.

It's delicious. Those old, seasoned vines give the wines of Castello di Borghese their character, but old isn't always best. Route 48 also features up-and-coming wineries like Vineyard 48 (formerly Bidwell Vineyards), Waters Crest Winery and Roanoke Vineyards. As you can read elsewhere in this wine guide, many of my favorite wines come from this northern-most trail on Long Island, including Roanoke's Merlot, Lieb Family Cellars' sparkling Pinot Blanc and Water Crests' Riesling.

If you haven't checked out the vineyards on Route 48, give them a try. You might just become a regular.

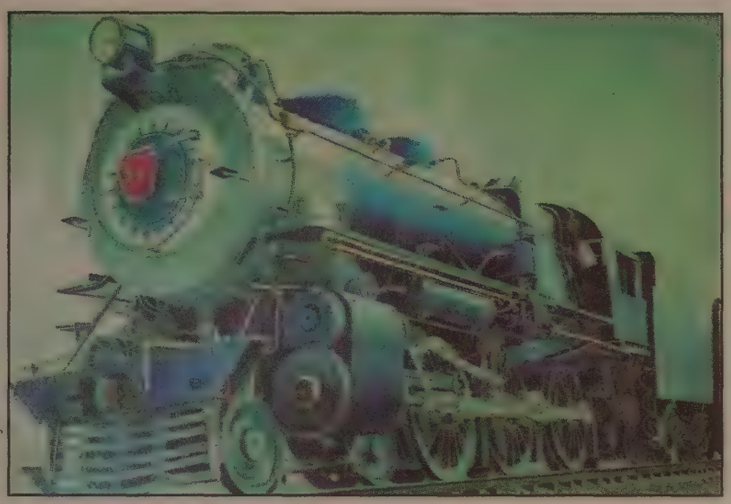
The Riverhead Rail Road Festival Reminds Us Of The Importance Of The Locomotive

By R.B. Stuart

Saturday marked the 6th annual Riverhead Rail Road Festival at the Rail Road Museum in Riverhead. Each year the festival celebrates a different R.R. theme, this year the theme was the 50th anniversary of the end of steam. In 1955 there was a change of lifestyle and technology, which the Boy Scouts acknowledged and wanted to celebrate.

The Long Island Rail Road officially commemorated the end of steam locomotives on Long Island by holding a public ceremony on October 8, 1955 at Hicksville Station.

Steam locomotive #39, built in 1929, carried a one passenger car of Boy Scouts from Jamaica to Hicksville and Steam Locomotive #35 similarly brought Boy Scouts in from Riverhead. Upon arriving at Hicksville, both trains pulled in facing each other. Two new RS-3 diesel locomotives were brought in from the Morris Park Shops. Upon arriving at Hicksville the steam locomotives were uncoupled, and the diesel locomotives were coupled to the passenger cars and brought the Boy Scouts back to Jamaica and Riverhead. Thus ended the Age of Steam Locomotives on the Long Island R.R. The 1909 Hicksville Station building was demolished on November 30, 1962.



Photos by R.B. Stuart

The rail road was important to all of LI for it had a positive economical influence; the farmers were able to take their produce from the farms on the East End into the fresh food markets in Jamaica by freight train. Eventually they added passengers to the rails, transporting them and freight to NYC.

"This festival has changed significantly because of the scale model trains now on display. Five clubs throughout LI are coming together to display them," said Liz Irwin, executive director of the Riverhead Rail Road Museum. "Two local artists have also joined us this year. One specializes in cabooses, the other on railroading in general. They're beautiful. It's stunning work," Irwin exclaimed. The East End Brass band opened the afternoon ceremony with a rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Also at the festival was a 1964 miniature electric train from The World's Fair. It was still chugging along, carting parents and their tykes around the grounds. It was donated to the museum by Northrop Grumman Aerospace Company who also donated the carousel to Greenport. There were tents with arts and crafts, toys, food, not-for-profit organizations trying to keep the R.R. alive and three actors portraying legends in railroading. The legends were Car 2924, George Pullman the porter, from the 1900s. Engine #39, Rosie the Riveter, the first female master electrician to join the union in the 1940s and Engine #1556, Diesel Dan, the engineer from the 1970s. All of the actors gave tours of the cars. Banjo picking country music echoed through the grounds as everyone went from tent to hall to track taking in the history and festivities of the choo-choo event.

The Caboose Art painted by artist George L. Wybenga that hung throughout the festival depicted the caboose in its colorful glory from all across the U.S. and Canada, from Oregon, Alaska, NJ, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Washington State. Wybenga, born in Holland only paints cabooses. His inspiration came from a time of desperation marking September 11th, "Because I wanted to get away from the horrors of 9/11, it reminded me of the German invasion of 1940 in Holland; I wanted something to distract me," Wybenga recalled. "My wife and I traveled all over the country by car and I started eliminating things already done by artists. I wanted to paint something totally different. I found that no other artists were strictly painting cabooses, maybe one or two in their collection, but that's it. I've painted 142 watercolors of cabooses and have become so involved, it's a part of history now because railroads no longer use cabooses."

Wybenga finds his locomotive subjects through a book, Captive Cabeese in America. It references over 5,000 caboose locations. Europe doesn't really use cabooses, so he focuses mainly on the U.S. All the prints are limited editions and when asked which was his favorite, "I love each one of them. But, the one I'm working on now is my favorite. It is of the NY Ontario & Western Caboose in Arkville, NY," he concluded.

When it comes to artist Peter Tassone, his reasons for painting trains are somewhat different. "I've always loved trains since I was a kid, starting at two years old when I got my first train set," Tassone recalled. "My father took me to see Penn Station as a child, so I saw it in its original grandeur. I always wanted to be an artist, but if I had a day job I'd want to be an engineer. That would be my dream blue collar job," Tassone said.

He hopes with his commercial driving experience and a new job with Metro North Railroad, he'll be able to advance into the locomotive training program, and maybe drive them instead of painting them.

Also at the festival was a 1964 miniature electric train from The World's Fair.

At the end of the day a raffle prize of a Greenport "Scoot O Gage" train set went home with some little conductor. And for those "Lionel's" who can't get enough of the massive locomotives, on October 8th the Hicksville and Oyster Bay Historical Societies will sponsor a ceremony at the Hicksville R. R. Station to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the End of Steam Locomotives on LI. And if you missed the yearly museum event don't flip your caboose.....you can always chug down to the Railroad Museum on 416 Griffing Ave. in Riverhead. They'd love to show you around.

Writers on The Vine at Palmer Vineyards

Season Ends With Author, Sir Harold Evans

Writers on the Vine, in its 5th season, ended on Sunday with talks with well known author, Sir Harold Evans of They Made America: Two Centuries of Innovators From the Steam Engine to the Search Engine. Palmer Vineyards in Aquebogue, owned by Robert Palmer since 1983, has been hosting the successful series on their back deck over looking the 110 acre vineyard with Larry Davidson, radio WGBB AM talk show host and television personality of local station LI Channel 20. Davidson has been interviewing writers and authors on his show, "Davidson and Company" for the last 11 years.

"I chose an authors series since I already have access to them and find writers and authors to have interesting thoughts and minds. I like how their minds work," Larry Davidson said.

"With novelists, their personal stories are sometimes more interesting than the books they write. When people relax is when interesting things come out," he added.

"The Art and Craft of Storytelling is the overall theme to the series, and there is usually something every week for everyone to find interest in," Davidson said.

Palmer Vineyards Jeanne Drozd says, "Each year it gets more and more popular. It begins in July every Sunday morning until August. There were nine this year with 20 different authors, from first time novelists to well known. Borders Books brings the authors books and after each talk they have private book signings. Over the last few years it's grown into a really nice cultural event," said Drozd.

With each admission, the patrons receive a glass of wine (10 varieties to choose from) in which they sit on the deck for an hour and a half with the featured author, and a bird's eye view of the vineyards.

Author Sir Harold Evans, an English gentleman, sat before the crowd of 35, wearing a crisp, striped, sky-blue button down shirt. He effortlessly held the attention of the attendees with his wealth of publishing experience as the founding editor of Conde Nast Traveler, president and publisher at Random House, editorial director of US News and World Report and editor of the London Sunday Times. His vast knowledge of American and European history and biographical information gave him the backbone to the 67 innovators he writes about in They Made America.

Sir Harold Evans and Larry Davidson

The Queen of England, for his journalistic efforts referring back over 20 years, knighted Evans in 2003. Apart from keeping integrity in the newspapers, he used his influence and passion to start a campaign in 1962 for the early detection of cervical cancer and investigated Thalidomide children for their loss of arms and legs at birth, caused by the sleeping pill of the same name that their mothers were taking while pregnant.

His book of inventors came about because, "You can't get through a single day without using an American Inventor," Evans said. "You use alarm clocks, radios, cell phones, MRIs, rubber tires on cars...all these things are by American Inventors And you can't get through the day without them."

In a society moving so fast technologically, Henry Adams said, 'The country will break its neck it's moving so fast.' The speed at which society changes, is changed. It's matched by the chronological aged by the increased speed of the biological aged," Evans stated.

"We would have been able to exist without electricity, automobiles and telephones, but as Thomas Hobbes said we'd be, 'short, brutish and nasty.' Which is the lot of much of the world," remarked Evans.

When it comes to the inventor and corporate America, "It's tough. The corporations do a lot of good work, but the lone inventor has to guard himself against them taking it for themselves."

The only thing Evans wished they'd invent hasn't been invented.....yet. "I'd like to see something invented that can transmit a human being through voice mail. Pressing #1 for a human being who can help. That would be the best new invention today," he joked.

Evans is married to Tina Brown, the Brit who caused an uproar when she came over here a decade ago to be editor of the American classics in magazine publishing, Vanity Fair and The New Yorker, forever changing their format through over commercialization. He is also the author of the NY Times bestseller, The American Century.

Scuba Diving The North Fork Is A Splash

By Ian Squires

"The best place to dive on the North Fork would be any place you go to that has water because they're all great," says Jim Hanovic, who has lived on Long Island his whole life and has worked as a diving instructor since 1986. "I've been diving here for over 40 years, and we're blessed with some of the best dive sites in New York State."

Randy Randazzo is the owner and founder of Riverhead's Hampton Dive Center, which certifies many Hamptonites looking to join the ranks of official scuba divers, people licensed by the state of New York to scuba dive. He says "we probably certify about 200 open water divers a year" at Hampton

Dive. Randy himself has been diving for nearly 30 years. Raised on the shores of the Shinnecock Bay, he says he "used to snorkel in the Bay a lot. There was a dive store not too far from here and I got certified."

Randy first worked in a diving store in the 1980s before starting up his own. His first dive shop was "a place attached to a health club on Route 24. We opened Peconic Scuba in 1992 and then in 1997 built the Hampton Dive Center."

Earning his first diving certification over 25 years ago, Randy has been teaching and helping divers gain their certifications since 1983. He proudly points out that once you've gotten your first diving certification you can keep taking more classes at Hampton Dive Center. "There's a lot of continuing education courses you can take here. We train all the way up to the 'instructor' level."

But most of the people who train here are going for their first open water diver certification. Successful completion of the initial classes at Hampton Dive Center will let you legally dive, with a buddy, in waters up to 60 feet deep.

Diving may be a lot of fun, but it isn't cheap. "We have an all-inclusive package which gives you the mask, fins and all the training for $399, and we have all of the equipment available for rent." In addition to all of the training and instruction, in the classroom and pool, divers also need to do a series of four outdoor dives costing another $120. Including equipment rental you will spend a minimum of almost $700 for basic open water scuba-diving certification.

By Labor Day the Dive Center expects to have certified their 130th diver of the summer, and once you're authorized to dive it lasts for the rest of your diving days. "The certification is good forever," Randy said, "it never expires." If you're anything like the people working at Hampton Dive Center, once you start diving you'll be glad it never ends because you'll be having too much fun.

According to Randy, "There are probably about 20 dive sites on the North Fork," This includes his personal favorite, "the Roanoke barges in Riverhead." He's partial to the barges because they show you more than just ocean floor, "you're not just diving around rocks, but wrecks. The barges are wrecks that washed up on the beach." East End sea life is another highlight. "What most people don't realize is that we have a lot of tropical fish here, fish swim up the gulf-stream this time of year into Shinnecock Inlet, around Montauk, into the warm water."

Ask the guys at Hampton Dive Center and they'll tell you it's much more difficult to think of a reason not to be a diver, but "Diver Bob" Elrose, who has been a divemaster since 1997, says simply "the best reason to get certified is the planet's mostly water and diving is a vacation from anything you'll ever do. It's serene, it's quiet. I love night diving because in the dark you can turn the lights out and I imagine it's what it is like before you're born, in the womb." Bob's favorite splashing ground on the North Fork "has to be Shoreham, the jetties. It's hard to get to so you don't have many divers there. There's an abundance of sea life to harvest, like lobsters, and it's a very easy dive, not very deep."

For a little more than a year Anthony Pasquale has been one of the 10 instructors at Hampton Dive Center and he says to get certified for no other reason than just "so you can see what's going on in the water. It's a lot different than you'd expect. There's a lot to see and it's a lot less dangerous than you'd think."

Blackwells Steakhouse at Great Rock Golf Club

Sound Avenue & 25A
Wading River
929-1800

From the time that you drive into this beautifully landscaped golf course and enter the imposing clubhouse you start to feel special. The warmth of the welcome, the elegant luxury of the bar and dining rooms, the views out over the course and the expertise of the waitstaff combine to bring you to the correct state of relaxation where moving on to inspect the menu and choose a drink are the order of the day.

Hugh Esposito, one of the owners and directors of the club, explained that their aim is to offer excellent food and also combinations of golf and food to attract a wide range of customers. One of their current offers is for an incredible gourmet 4-course steak and lobster dinner where the main course features a 2-lb lobster and a 9-oz filet mignon. At $38 (excluding tax and gratuities) this must be the best offer of the summer! Other novel offers include nine holes of golf with a cart and a $40 dinner voucher on Tuesday through Sunday after 3 p.m. They even offer a free first cocktail.

The menu at Blackwells is in line with what you would expect from a top quality steak house. We started with two crab cakes packed with jumbo lump crabmeat and very delicately flavored so that at first you might think of them a little under seasoned but the depth of taste builds and provides the correct degree of kick to make them very authentic and enjoyable. The mussels were local and extremely tender-cooked so that their flavor was kept and enhanced by some very tasty broth made from wine, garlic and basil. The bread selection was one that we thoroughly enjoyed but we had to defer dunking all of the juice in deference to what was still to come.

Blackwells Executive Chef, Robert Larkin offers a delightful array of salads and the one we chose, the chopped salad, was perfect. All of the ingredients balanced, there was a nice degree of astringency from the balsamic vinaigrette offset by some crumbled Gorgonzola cheese and the salad was correctly tossed with each piece being coated but not swamped by the dressing.

Lobster bisque can be good or very bad almost to the point of being glutinous but here we were thrilled to try the best lobster bisque ever. It should be ordered if you love great soups. The menu refers to "a sinful blend of white wine, light cream and tomato" and they are not wrong – so indulge yourselves and repent afterwards!!

Naturally, in a steakhouse, meat is king and Blackwells offers almost every cut of steak you could think of plus a large rack of lamb. Porterhouse is, for most steak lovers, the tops and all I can say is that the 28-oz individual thick cut short loin is out of this world. All of the traditional accompaniments were again all that you would expect.

Those who do not fancy steak or lamb are not left out because there are some wonderful lobsters in the tank waiting to be chosen or some broiled Norwegian salmon. We chose to taste the sushi grade tuna that was drizzled with olive oil, garlic and balsamic vinaigrette and topped with chopped plum tomatoes and fresh basil. Again, an excellent piece of fish very well prepared. On reflection I think it would have been even better just a little rarer but that is a minor point. A vegetarian offering would be a good addition to the menu.

When it came to dessert, frankly it was a matter of just having a taste to report on because there was little room left for anything substantial! The pecan tart had a lovely clean taste and the dulche de leche ice cream was the perfect foil for it. Daniel Bonomini, the charming General Manager, also sent out a piece of their very popular millefeuille filled with a wonderful selection of fresh berries. We only wished that we could have done this justice because it was fabulous. By the way, it is large enough for two very ample portions so be warned!

We finished a wonderful meal in this charming atmosphere where everyone was obviously enjoying their evening. Throughout the evening, Mike, our waiter, made the meal even more enjoyable with his professionalism and upbeat approach in looking after our needs.

Appetizers and soups range from $6 to $15; Main courses from $19 to $39. They have an excellent and sensibly priced wine list. The restaurant is open every day except Monday from midday.

Blackwells is now a steakhouse of the highest quality. The food quality is excellent and the prices are more than reasonable for food of this quality. The surroundings make you feel that you are in your country club but without any attitude! This is a perfect spot for all kinds of celebrations or just when you want a great steak. Certainly there is no need to drive to Nassau County or points further west to fulfill those desires.

Roy Bradbrook.

The HMS Bounty

Greenport Had A Nice Visit From An Amazing Ship

By Tom Sarc

It is quite possibly one of the most beautiful ships in the world and it was docked right in Greenport.

Land-lovers from all parts of Long Island and surrounding areas came to Greenport between August 24 and 27 to pay tribute to a great sailing vessel – the HMS Bounty. The ship docked in Greenport, modeled after the original Bounty of 1787, was built in 1960 for MGM Studios for the film "Mutiny On The Bounty" starring Marlon Brando. Since that time, the Bounty has starred in several feature length films and dozens of TV shows and documentaries.

The original Bounty was a coal carrying ship on the coast of England. In 1787 it was commissioned for a special mission. She was to sail halfway around the world to Tahiti collecting breadfruit trees and transporting them to the West Indies. To lead the mission, the English Admiralty picked 33-year-old Lt. William Bligh who had been the sailing master on the HMS Resolution with Captain Cook.

On the cold blustery afternoon of December 24, 1787, His Majesty's Ship Bounty cleared the breakwater at Spithead, England, sailed southwest into the English Channel and entered the cold, gray foreboding waters of the North Atlantic Ocean.

On April 28, 1789, two weeks out of Tahiti on the return trip to England, first mate Fletcher Christian, incensed by Captain Bligh's inhuman brutality and abuse, led a successful mutiny and took command of the Bounty. Bligh and 18 crewmembers that remained loyal were put adrift in the ship's longboat. Navigating 3600 miles in 41 days, using only a sextant and pocket watch, Bligh and his party reached the island of Timor. This was a feat of navigation that remains unparalleled to this day.

During this period of time, the Bounty appeared to have vanished from the earth and thus began the fantastic series of historic events, which have excited the romantic and adventurous for well over two centuries.

After filming with the modern-day Bounty, the ship was acquired by Ted Turner in 1986. He used it to promote his enterprises and filmed Treasure Island with Charleton Heston in 1989. In 1993, Turner donated the ship to the Fall River Chamber Foundation, which established the Tall Ship Bounty Foundation to operate the ship as and educational venture. In 2001 the HMS Bounty was purchased from the Foundation by the Tall Ship Bounty Organization LLC.

The Bounty is a working ship, 420 tons and 180 feet long. It travels most of the time, its arrival often scheduled to kick off weekend nautical festivals where the vessel is the featured attraction. The ship sometimes carries paying passengers and has a nonprofit education program. Bounty is also rented out for social and business functions, film shoots, school programs and corporate events.

At sea, the ship's crew eagerly anticipates opportunities to raise anchor to sail "off the hook," driven only by the vessel's massive sails – 18 sheets totaling over 10,000 square feet of canvas - unfurled to catch the wind. While inland, Bounty relies on engine power.

Greenport tourism was rampant as many eager tourists, and residents for that matter, got to enjoy a little piece of history. Hopefully this will not be the last time that the HMS Bounty docks in Greenport's waters.

The Bounty will, once again, set sail around the world to its next destination where thousands are waiting to view this massive vessel whose historical portrayal delights the "pirate" in all of us!

Sailing On The Lady Stirling

By: Krystle Howell

In the little and quaint, but busy town of Greenport, there is much to do and see. There are numerous shops along the streets as well as a few dining areas right on the water. Yet, nothing is more amazing than the magnificent sailboats docked at the end of Main Street, one such being the schooner, Lady Stirling.

The Lady Stirling, whose homeport is right in Greenport, is a massive and spectacular sailboat with a length of eighty feet and a mast height of sixty-four feet above waterline. It's an amazing sight to see and I happened to have the pleasure this past Sunday at four o'clock to take a ride on it.

After taking in the Lady Stirling's great presence, I got to meet her most gracious and funny captain, Dan Hallock, as well as its crew, Dennis and Robin. I then stepped aboard this grand sailboat and prepared to set sail with twenty-four other people. Twenty of the people I learned were there from the Eastern Long Island Hospital's 100th Anniversary Gala raffle. He gave them complimentary tickets. This is part of his community service. He has also done things for the Shelter Island Historical Society and has helped Cornell with the SPAT program.

Once everyone was aboard we turned on the engine, which I came to find out was no more than a tractor's engine, and headed out into the water to catch the wind. When we got out, we all let loose and put up the sails. Bob Cassidy even commented that, "It is a perfect day for sailing. I've been sailing all my life. It's gorgeous. I love this part of the world." Ann Dwyer agreed and stated, "It's wonderful. There's lots of wind, beautiful temperature, great crew, and nice companions." They were both so right. It was great to be experiencing this. When Captain Dan was finally done with the getting the sails up I got a great chance to talk to him and I finally found out where we were headed, into Gardiner's Bay.

I learned that Captain Dan's ancestors came here in 1640 and that he was originally driving tractor-trailers out here on his family's farm during the 1960s and 1970s, but realized that there must be a better way to make a living. He stated that sailing, "seemed like a natural step. My family used to clam commercially and fish as well as farm. If you are not going to be on the water, you might as well live in Missouri." Dan has traveled all up and down the east coast from Maine to Florida. Yet, this, Greenport, "Is the best place to be, no place like this. A sailor needs destination, great wind, and deep water. Here you can sail either way and it's just as pretty. I don't know any other place where I can set sail right out of the dock. I always come back here. My soul is here."

One of the first boats that he built was a little schooner that held eighteen passengers. It was called the Delta Lady. This boat went to Montauk and ran until 1977. Then he bought a boat called the Rachel and Ebenezer, which was built in Bathe, Maine, and used it to give day and night trips. He would take passengers to Mystic, Block Island, and Martha's Vineyard as well as to Connecticut. He ran that boat until 1982. From there he built a schooner called the Yankee, which held forty-nine passengers. He ran that from 1983 to 1987. Then he bought a powerboat that had two decks and held twenty passengers called the Ragtime, which he used to take people to Shelter Island. Then he built the stern-wheeler, the Rebecca Lee, which he named after his daughter. This boat held one hundred and fifty passengers and he ran that from 1992-1995. He then took a year off and sailed the boat to North Carolina. When he got back he took even more time off from sailing and was a wine maker. Yet, he came back to building boats and built the Lady Stirling in 2002, because building boats is what he loves to do.

"I enjoy the people more than the sailing. Commerce has been going on like this for thousands of years.....I enjoy giving them that experience. I enjoy having people step outside their box, outside their normal elements. It's very rewarding. There's nothing happier for me than seeing people exchange phone numbers and handshakes after getting off." Dan stated that, "We need more recognition and not just my boat, but all the boats down here. We need people to know other things besides the wineries." From the recognition he's gotten from Channel 12 news he said that he received over one hundred phone calls. "People said that they had no idea there was something like this out here." Dan stated that, "If you don't use this it's not going to last. This is one of the world's last great places. People need to know what's out here. Back in the 70s and 80s people participated more, but people today like to be more of window shoppers. There isn't as much passion. We get a lot of people from Manhattan. Yet, it's hard to draw people form Montauk and the Hamptons." He explained that they have to take two ferries to get here and two ferries to go back.

So for all of you out there enjoy this while you can. It's only $30 for adults and $15 for those sixteen years of age and under. The boat runs every weekend from Memorial Day through September. He even does special tours for parties and anniversaries. Greg Jacobs, a man who went on a sail, said, "It was great. Peaceful. Really pleasant. Beautiful. We did it for grandma's birthday and would absolutely do it again." Another rider, Dan Miller agreed by commenting, "Beautiful sun, beautiful wind, beautiful boat and very knowledgeable captain and crew. It was wonderful and we loved it." If you want to go on a ride with the Lady Stirling call 631-357-2714.

North Fork Artist of The Week

Wood Sculptor, Harry Wicks

Harry Wicks majored in Graphic Illustration, graduating from The Art School at Pratt Institute and was in the army during the Korean War. Born and raised in Floral Park, NY he worked for 10 years as an executive editor at CBS Magazines: Home Mechanics and Woman's Day and with Hearst magazines at Popular Mechanics. He's contributed humor cartoons to Esquire, Saturday Review and Literary Review. From as long as he can remember he was drawing. "My mother said I was hanging pictures on my bedroom wall in the first grade," Harry Wicks recalled. "I wanted to do cartooning, wood working and construction. I received an offer from Popular Science for an associate editor position and was offered a journalism scholarship at Northwestern University, but I passed on it because I wanted to continue in art."

In 1970 Wicks wanted to create original wood pieces for clients in the magazine business. "I was only turning when I needed integral parts for a table or chairs," Wicks informed. Then 14 years ago Wicks created a large wooden Betsy Ross flag for a cover project for Workbench Magazine. He installed it on a small white barn in Laurel and photographed it for the magazine, It remains there and has become the most photographed landmark on the North Fork.

Wicks moved to Cutchogue in 1986, into the house he built two years before, as a magazine project for Home Mechanics. There in his studio, he is surrounded by his lovely wood creations and blocks of raw wood awaiting his lathe. "I just like the idea of creating something that's nice to look at," Wicks explains. "Everything starts in your head with a piece of wood and I usually know when I'm starting where I'm going to end up."

The challenge first is finding good wood. "Life is too short to turn crappy wood," Wicks remarks. Eighty percent of his wood is local, North Fork cherry, maple, walnut and mulberry used to make artwork and utilitarian pieces. "It's a giant leap to selling it," Wicks exclaims, "But everything in between is wonderful."

"It is a vibrant part of my life," Wicks concedes. "It's part of me, it's what I get up to do. Like kids are a part of your life...the lathe is my mistress–it's my other love. I love my wife with every fiber of my body, and then I love my lathe."

I don't think your dreams are ever fully realized. "That goes for all artists. We're always looking for the Holy Grail. I tell students, 'if you think it's good enough—it's probably not,' " Wicks says. "I think it's thrilling when your peers admire your work and try to duplicate it.....that's as good as it gets. As long as I'm on this mortal coil, I want to be challenged with my art–not feel as if I've arrived."

"I'm passionate about quality, in whatever you're pursuing. I hate mediocrity," admits Wicks. "I also have great feelings about my children, grandchildren and wife–that's a true passion. My wife has been very supportive and she has made it all possible. We're good for each other."

His only regret is when he came out of high school he was offered a good job at a Manhattan ad agency that was less than half the salary he was making at a construction company. He turned it down. "I should have taken the job," admits Wicks.

Wicks does work on commission. "People come to me with a tree that they are sentimental about whether they've knocked it down or a storm has, they want to save a part of it, so I make something for them out of it," Wicks says. "The wood tells me which way to go. It's a great influence, it guides me. It's important you let the wood guide you.....it has limitations," he concluded.

Harry Wick's work can be seen and purchased at the following galleries: Blue Door Gallery, 40 E. Main St. Riverhead – Castello di Borghese Vineyard, Rt. 48 North Rd. Cutchogue – Gallery North, 90 North Country Rd. Setauket – Village Silversmith Gallery, 149 Main St. Bellport. He also gives lathe instructions at his studio in Cutchogue at 631-734-5738 or visit his website at www.harrywicks.com

Dan's North Fork

North Fork Dining: Dan's Papers Critics' Choices

Bayview Inn & Restaurant– Culinary fireworks from a North Fork sparkler, in view of Peconic Bay. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell provide a warm welcome and the interior is comfortably elegant. But mostly they come from miles around for chef Tom Lopez' inspired creations. His restless imagination is big on subtle tastes and Asian themes. With new specials emerging constantly, keeping up with his menu requires frequent visits, but it's an invitation his fans gladly welcome. A quick sampler: Lobster and brie quesadillas; duck dumplings with ponzu dipping sauce; sea scallops over squid ink fettuccine. Try the flan dessert. 10 Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrées, $21-$28. (Bradbrook 6/10/05).

The Clubhouse– At the gateway to the North Fork, this quiet gem features an extensive menu that won't dent your wallet. The restaurant's relaxed ambience trades on its location alongside the Peconic River at Indian Island C.C. and chef/owner Russ Moran's pleasant staff. The expansive menu offers many savory dishes, including a broiled seafood platter and a spectacularly satiating Mexican salad — an incredible value at $9.95. Delectable seafood starters include New England clam chowder, bacon-wrapped citrus shrimp and their justifiably famous raw or pan-fried oysters. Bailey's Irish cream cheese cake is a wonderful finale. Entrés $12.95-18.95. Riverside Dr. and Rt. 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. (David Rattiner, 7/1/05).

Cooperage Inn– With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame-crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Off-premises catering a specialty. Entreés $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave., Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03).

Funcho's Fajita Grille– A delectable assortment of Tex-Mex favorites guaranteed to leave taste buds hopping and appetites satisfied. Taco, quesadilla and fajita platters pair up with chunky homemade guacamole. But to experience Janice and Alfonso Zavala's wonderful eatery's range of possibilities, the Funcha-Dilla is a must. Tightly packed with steak, chicken, guacamole, sour cream, beans, corn, onions, peppers and cheese, it costs just $7.99. Tacos have an international flair and the burritos are creative, flavorful and enormous. Low carb tortillas are available for the dieter. Beers include Corona and Dos Equis XX. 1156 W. Main St. Riverhead, 369-7277 and 127 Main St., Westhampton Beach. (Stuart, 6/7/05).

La Plage– A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef/proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime/sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crème brulée.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrées $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04).

Modern Snack Bar– Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. The Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crabcakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrées, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02).

Pepi's– Highly popular Northern Italian with dazzling views of Peconic Bay from inside tables and those on its patio. Tantalizing appetizers include calamari sautéed in a pungent marinara sauce and an inspired combo of roasted red peppers and anchovies. Entrées like cod marechiare, with fish and shellfish in a rich tomato cream broth served with pasta, ensure no one goes home hungry. Pepi's is at the forefront of the organic food movement and recently has incorporated international organic wines, vodka and beer to the dining experience. Tiramisu tops the dessert list. Good selection of local wines. Entrées, $16-$20.

Old Main Rd., Southold, 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 5/27/05).

Red Door– A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brulée and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrééés – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

The Shady Lady Inn– One of the North Fork's architectural curiosities reopens as an upscale steakhouse. The fare has changed, the top-line kitchen personnel hasn't. Chef Ross Esner knows his oysters and brings in exceptionally fresh kumumoto. Simplicity also wins the day with the "Wedge," an iceberg of iceberg lettuce topped with crisp bacon and bleu cheese. Virtually every cut of highest-quality steak can be enjoyed. Accompaniments are what you'd expect — and all expertly done. Extensive wine list tops out at an $1800 Caymus. Two dining rooms, jackets suggested in the more formal Scarlet dining room. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrées ($21 and up). (Bradbrook 7/8/05).

Soundview Inn– Picture windows overlook the Sound from every table. On the elevated outdoor deck, however, the tables actually over hang the Sound! Rachel Levin Murphy's restaurant takes in some of the best sunsets on the East Coast and also serves tasty fare in a relaxing environment. Plump and succulent steamers make a great starter as does chicken liver crostini for more adventurous tastes. Chef Kevin Rushkoski's leg of lamb in a rosemary reduction came up tender and flavorful, without a trace of gaminess accompanied by expertly-wilted spinach. Desserts are collectively incredible. The somewhat abbreviated wine list is well-selected and agreeably priced. Entrées $19.50-$27.50. North Road, Greenport. 477-0666. (Bradbrook 5/20/05).

Stonewall's– Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrées, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck a l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrées $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).

The Fifth Season– The latest entry in the Greenport haute cuisine sweepstakes rates among the very best. With a city-like Front Street entrance, solicitous service, crisply laid tables and art-lined walls, Erik and Jennifer Orlowski's restaurant glistens with a sophisticated ambience. Appetizers — especially the garlic and lemon-thyme crusted prawns over sweet corn and bean relish — augur well for the short list of impeccably-prepared entrées. Duck breast in a tart cherry demi-glace reflects the chef's admirably clean cooking style, with the sauce complementing, not masking, the bird's flavor. Chocoholics will clean up come dessert time. 45 Front St., Greenport. 477-8500. Entrées, $19-$29. (Bradbrook, 6/24/05)

Touch of Venice– Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with Gorgonzola; and black Angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood brushetta is another special to watch for. Entrées $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02).

Tweed's– Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London. Entrées $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03).

Take Five 2005 with Jan Silver

Labor Day Weekend – the finale of a hot, dry summer (although we finally had a little rain this past week). Westhampton Beach has three good shows this weekend: the Cab Calloway Orchestra (Fri.) and Barbara Cook (Sat.) at the Performing Arts Center, and the Folksbiene Yiddish Theater late Saturday evening at The Hampton Synagogue. The John Drew Theater, East Hampton, is all theater this week: Orson Welles' stage adaptation Moby Dick Rehearsed runs Wednesday through Saturday, and Sunday is a tribute evening to playwright Arthur Miller with Broadway actors.

The musical Pippin has its final performances this weekend in Sag Harbor. The Shinnecock Indian Nation Powwow opens today and runs through Monday on the Southampton reservation. The Hampton Classic Horse Show has its final events this weekend including the $100,000 Grand Prix on Sunday.

There is good music at local restaurants and clubs, and several informative talks this weekend including the president of Brandeis University speaking about "Israel on the American campus" on Saturday in Westhampton Beach; publisher Mort Zuckerman and international corporate attorney Kenneth Bialkin join a panel discussion in East Hampton late Sunday afternoon on "Israel and Middle East Realities." For details on all, read on.

Barbara Cook

THEATER

Peter Boyle heads the cast of Moby Dick Rehearsed at the John Drew Theater, East Hampton. The show, directed by Tony Walton, plays Wednesday through Saturday evenings, 8 p.m. (tickets $35 adults, $30 Guild Hall members, $20 students). This Sunday, September 4, at 8 p.m., the John Drew and Playwrights Theater of East Hampton present "A Tribute to Arthur Miller." Paul Hecht and Tamara Flanagan star in Miller's one-act Elegy for a Lady and Joan Copeland and Hal Robinson perform the one-acter I Can't Remember Anything. There is a brief discussion with the audience following the performance and then a dessert reception. Tickets are $23-$25 at the Guild Hall box office (631-324-4050) or online at www.guildhall.org.

The Steven Schwartz/Roger O. Hirson musical Pippin has its final performances at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, this weekend. B.D. Wong heads the Broadway cast of singing dancers in this medieval coming-of-age tale about Charlemagne's son (with contemporary overtones). Performances are Fri. and Sat., 8 p.m., Sat. matinee at 4 p.m., and Sun. at 7 p.m. Call the box office for tickets ($55, $65) at 631-725-9500 or go online to www.baystreet.org.

Mike Burstyn, Eleanor Reissa and emcee Zalman Mlotak, stars of the oldest Yiddish theater troupe in the U.S., the Folksbiene Yiddish Theater, will bring film clips and performance excerpts to The Hampton Synagogue, Westhampton Beach, on Saturday at 9 p.m. There is no admission charge to the show and everyone is welcome.

MUSIC

The Cab Calloway Orchestra, now led by grandson C. Calloway Brooks, plays at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center tonight, 8:30 p.m. The band uses Calloway's original orchestrations for jump, blues, and boogie, and Brooks likes to sport his grandfather's style in a zoot suit. theatre review: dedication...by gordin & christiano

Terrence McNally's new play Dedication or The Stuff of Dreams opens in darkness on the stage of an abandoned rundown theatre. A classic showplace in its heyday, the theatre has fallen into disrepair, but is still a place of treasured memories. To Lou Nuncle (Nathan Lane) and Jessie (Alison Fraser), his partner in life, the theatre represents a last chance to fulfill a lifelong dream.

A note from the playwright in the program reminds us that his play was written at the request of the Manhattan Theatre Club to open their new home, the former Biltmore Theatre on West 47th Street. The Biltmore, which had been derelict for 16 years and barely escaped demolition, was the impetus for his new work; "drama and laughter is pretty potent inspiration." His play never opened the new Biltmore Theatre, but was first performed in Williamstown, where it closed the Nikos Psacharopoluos Theatre, which ironically was torn down shortly after the last performance. Mr. McNally clearly holds the theatre in highest regard and Dedication is an ode to its power.

Lou and Jessie operate a children's theatre company and covet the old place for their company's home. The wealthy Annabelle Willard (Marian Seldes), an eccentric grand dame who is dying from cancer of the larynx, owns the theatre and is unwilling to sell it for any amount. We learn that Jessie has gained access to the theatre as a surprise to Lou on his birthday, by deceiving Annabelle into thinking Lou is dying from the same terminal illness.

We meet Jessie's estranged daughter Ida Head (Miriam Shor), a famous rock diva who is passing through town after a stint in rehab. She is on her way to perform at a sold-out concert, but hopes to make amends to Jessie for past transgressions and has her new boyfriend Toby Cassidy (Darren Pettie) in tow for moral support. She tries to buy the theatre for three million dollars, but Annabelle Willard is unrelenting.

As the story unfolds, we learn Jessie has been having an affair with Arnold Chalk (Michael Countryman), Lou and Jessie's technical director, and unbeknownst to Jessie, Lou has known for sometime. When Annabelle Willard and Lou are left alone at Annabelle's request, we discover she will indeed relinquish the theatre, but she has some shocking conditions to her terms.

The play possesses some intriguing premises dealing with contemporary situations, but lacks focus. The relationship between Lane and Seldes, in particular, comes off as a device instead of from fully developed characters. The effect is awkward and at times feels forced. The actors do well in spite of the shortcomings. Mr. Lane brings a funny, bemused quality to his role, as well as a nice sincerity, allowing for several touching moments. Marian Seldes is always magnificent. She is one of our lasting theatrical treasures and is a treat to witness. She has some of the play's finest dialogue and absolutely shines as the rich bitch. She, unfortunately, is much too alive for the role of a dying woman. A stronger director might have remedied that, but I never felt for a moment she was at death's door. Still, her memorable performance remains the evening's highlight.

Michael Countryman as the technical director is excellent in what may be the play's best developed character. R.E Rodgers as Edward, the chauffeur, is winning as well and creates some very funny moments.

The play is least credible when dealing with the rock music world and Miriam Shor as Ida Head, Jessie's rocker daughter, suffers the most in the difficult role. Darren Pettie as her boyfriend Toby has solid stage presence with a strong machismo quality displaying a hint of warmth just beneath the surface.

The sets by Narelle Sissons are well conceived and reminiscent of a time gone by. Again, though, the grand Marian Seldes is the most convincing reason to see the Primary Stages production.

Dedication or The Stuff of Dreams opened August 18, 2005 at Primary Stages at 59 East 59th Street Theatres, between Madison & Park. For tickets call 212-279-4200.

Life is a Series of Hellos and Goodbyes

"Life is a series of hellos and goodbyes, I'm afraid it's time for goodbye again..." Our own Billy Joel articulated the feelings of many as we travel through this life, which has become a long and winding road. We diverge from the paths of those we love, knowing that someday perhaps we will converge again. For now, though, it's time to throw a goodbye party.

I have become an avid traveler. The first time I left home, my family threw me a huge party, escorted me to the airport, and cried as I disappeared into a crowd. Now they've grown accustomed to goodbyes. But as I prepare to descend south into the dripping wet jungles of Costa Rica, I do not want for goodbye parties. Every night is a new reason to celebrate: Labor Day, my last time in the city for a few months, my last time seeing that old friend or this new love for a few months, my last Tuesday in the United States...So I took off work a couple of weeks early – so I could get in all the goodbyes I needed to fit.

A goodbye party is much like any other party, only with more toasts. So bring extra champagne or wine in preparation. Last night I was graced by one of my friends with a lovely dinner party. She cooked her specialty: salmon with braised greens and roasted potatoes. It was delicious. Another idea for a farewell dinner party is to cook something that is special in the country or area to which they will be traveling. As I prepare for Costa Rica, perhaps a taste of what's to come, like beans and rice, would be appropriate. However, considering the fact that I will probably be living on solely beans and rice for the next few months, I did thoroughly appreciate the salmon.

Another great way to commemorate the friends you will be leaving behind is to have a theme party in the spirit of the place you will be headed. Since I decided to make the move to Costa Rica, I have been studying "Let's Go" and "Costa Rica: The Rough Guide" to learn about the culture, the food, and the music. I will be a lot more qualified to throw this party when I return, but I have grazed the surface of Costa Rican culture through research. Therefore, I am ready to break out the ceviche (raw fish in lime juice with coriander and peppers) and the refrescos (cool drinks made with milk, fresh fruit and ice whipped together in a blender). Also, in preparation for the dance floors of Central America, I might have to pump up the salsa music and practice on a few Americans before I head out.

Parting gifts are absolutely unnecessary, but if you wish to give a little something "to remember you by," make it thoughtful. One of my friends gave me compact bottles of body oil and lotion. The Thai herbal body lotion and the French lavender body oil come in easy-to-pack containers and will certainly be a luxurious addition to my oversized backpack. These products are available at Naturopathica.

Another wonderful parting gift is a journal. I received a beautiful leather bound notebook from one of my friends, which I plan to fill with the stories of my adventures. Last year I traveled to Thailand, and my parents gave me a blank book. Inside the book, they each wrote their wishes for me. They also requested that I fill the book with stories, poems, and drawings that I want to share with them. When I returned from my six-month journey, it was wonderful to sit around the living room with bagels (oh, how I missed bagels!) and read to them from my now-filled pages.

Goodbyes are never easy. You never know what will change in the time you're away, or how you'll change. And as much as I'll miss bagels, it's the people I'm leaving on this side of the world that are hardest to part with. Giving friends and family a taste of what your life will be like, as well as making time to spend a few hours with those who define your life here, is important. And remember: it's not goodbye, it's only farewell. Keep an eye out for my article on homecoming parties, which will be hitting the press in a few short months.

Don't be put off by the title of this play. It is not a rehearsal but a masterful stage adaptation of Herman Melville's adventurous tale of the whaling Captain Ahab and his fanatical pursuit of the great white man-killing whale, Moby Dick. The brilliant actor/playwright/director Orson Welles adapted Melville's novel for the stage and starred as Ahab in the original 1955 London production.

Tony Walton, another theatrical mastermind, was captivated by the Welles production as an art student in London. His director's note for this John Drew Theater production states he wanted to "give present-day audiences some sense of Welles' highly imaginative stagecraft and, at the same time, invoke the spirit of those dangerous and exciting whaling days."

He has succeeded in recreating the theatrical magic of Moby Dick Rehearsed with one major exception – Captain Ahab. For this play to capture its audience, the lead actor must show Ahab's mono-maniacal obsession with Moby Dick. At last Sunday's performance, Peter Boyle was such a tentative Ahab, he almost sank the entire show.

This is a great pity, because Mr. Walton, his supporting actors and technical crew have created a wondrously imaginative production. The play is set in late 19th century America, where a troupe of Victorian actors in an old regional theater put aside their current King Lear production to rehearse their next play, a dramatization of Moby Dick. We see the efficient stage manager (Kathryn Mueth) marshaling the actors and crew to re-set the stage for a run-through.

Cast of Moby Dick led by Michael Nathanson

As the audience watches, the stage is magically transformed, with atmospheric mist, lighting, ladders, furled sails, a few cargo barrels, and the mournful sounds of seagulls and lapping waves into a Nantucket dock with the moored whaling ship Pequod. Ishmael (Michael Nathanson) appears and begins the tale of the Pequod's fateful voyage.

Nathanson, seen earlier this season at the John Drew as a mesmerizing Hamlet, is winning and engaging as Ishmael. He invites the audience to share his adventure to "see the world" and, as a neophyte whaler, is not afraid of the bloody job of harpooning. Hired by the Pequod's owner Peleg (Jack Ryland), Ishmael is forewarned by a crazy, old, sea-wrecked salt (Josh Gladstone, in a delectable, but uncredited character role) about the mad Captain Ahab.

Director Walton and producer Gladstone have assembled a remarkable cast of actors for Moby Dick Rehearsed. There is the Pequod's newly-hired first mate Starbuck, staunchly and intensely portrayed by Ian Bedford, and the second mate Stubb, played with much dignity and forbearance by Gerard Doyle. The cast performs multiple roles, so Jack Ryland is also masterful as the Pequod's carpenter and the voice of the Rachel's whaling captain.

Shashi Balooja, another fine actor, looks perfect as the South Seas islander and harpooner Queequeg, although Welles' script gives him few lines. Richard B. Watson appears to relish his role as the cannibal Tashtego, and Okwui Okpokwasili is splendid as the superstitious African tribesman Daggoo. Georgia Warner is winsome as the Pequod's lonely cabin boy Pip. The motley crew is favorably complete with Jamie Carmichael as a deckhand and Jannah Berkley as the assistant stage manager and masterheader.

Tony Walton is ingenious at stage and screen craft, winning multiple Tonys, Oscars and Emmys for sets and costumes of Broadway shows, films and television. He has also directed productions here and in Manhattan. He has done everything possible to re-create and share the melodramatic sensibility of Moby Dick Rehearsed. Every nook and cranny of the venerable John Drew Theater is used in this production.

Walton is very ably assisted by Tony Melfa's sound design, Sebastian Paczynski's lighting, Ruby Randig's costumes, Larry Grossman's music, Kelly Hanson's scenic design, and Gail Gilbert's choreography. Brian Meister is the stage manager and Joe Marchese the technical director for this inherently theatrical staging.

Moby Dick Rehearsed is worth viewing because of the supporting performances and magical stagecraft, but Starbuck has a telling line toward the end of the first act: "Ahab beware Ahab." It is sad to see all the creative energy poured into this production almost drained by the lifeless portrayal at its center.

Moby Dick Rehearsed plays Wednesday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., August 31 to September 3, and Wednesday through Saturday evenings, September 7 to 10, 8 p.m. The closing performance is Sunday, September 11, 2 p.m. Tickets ($35 adults, $30 Guild Hall members, $20 students) are sold at the Guild Hall box office (631-324-4050) and online at www.guildhall.org. On Sunday evening, September 4, the John Drew Theater and Playwrights Theater of East Hampton present a tribute to playwright Arthur Miller with professionally-staged readings of two one-act plays.

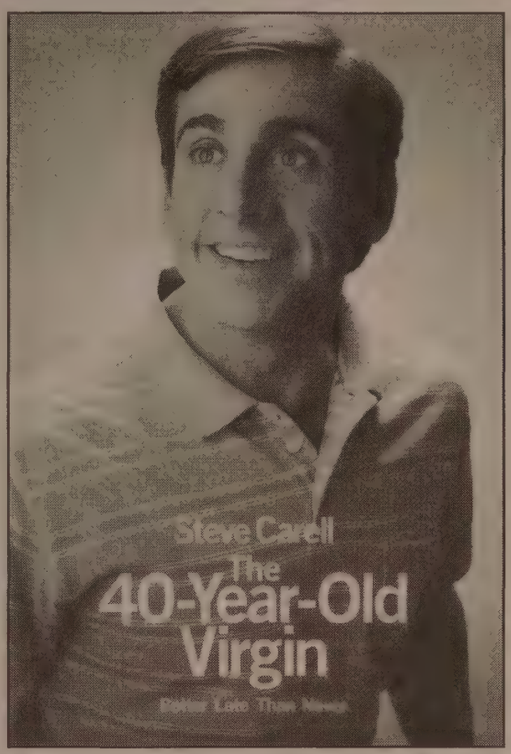
The 40-Year-Old Virgin



Woe betide the weighty burden of heavy-duty television tube watching. Excessive exposure to repetitive commercials of a feature film's best scenes can sandbag your light-headed enjoyment of the entire movie. It is especially dulling if it is a comedy and you are blasted with its funniest moments. Recently, many of you have been flying off your easy chairs by the excruciatingly funny (and, I do mean painful) chest hair removal off the fuzzy body of The 40-Year-Old Virgin as part of an all-out makeover pushed on him by his buddies to remove the word Virgin from his too saintly sobriquet. Despite that big laugh and the others given to sell the movie, the commercials can't hint at the genuine, goofy and tender humanity of the ungrown 40-year-old as created and played by Steve Carell. The beatific-looking waif, Andy Stitzer, can be taken for a martyr as well as a geek-nerd who remains celibate during today's permissive times that make Sodom and Gomorrah seem like Disneyland.

The engaging boy-man, Andy, still gets to his work in the stockroom of an electronics store on a bike. He regrets leaving at home a huge collection of plastic action figure and monster models, comic books and dolls, all carefully maintained in their original packaging. A replica of the rest of the life he lives that is simple and orderly and barricaded in the past – protected from harm. What can be more fun than building a big mound of egg salad? Well, how about the time he wandered out of his playpen to play poker with the guys he works with? They spend more time bragging about their sexual Big League statistics than bidding and dealing. Andy, trying to appear as one of them, gets into it. His attempts at obscene behavior has him describing women's breasts as "bags of sand." (Golly, did he, too, get sandbagged?) Oh gee! The sand has run out of the bag! He's found out. His pals are howling and determined to remedy his problem. With the eager-beaver enthusiasm of bloodhounds straining at the leash to get at their quarries, the cupidic trio are off to make the kill. Filled with Queer Eye determination, they attack Andy's appearance and style – then it's on to the ladies.

The love match work force, misfits all, consists of Paul Rudd as David who's broken hearted and mad as heck over a busted romance. Then there's Romany Malco as Jay. He's a hip-hop fraught ladies' man. Seth Rogen is Cal, as funny as the others but hung up on homophobia. These bumbling whoopee makers crash dive him in and out of misadventures typical of the contemporary scene – stuff like: dating in the speed zone, hornoporno, peeky-freaky and drunken women bar companions. This brings up one of the few emission of bodily contents jokes usually strewn throughout this kind of movie. Gags and laffs are suprisingly inventive and fresh and more surprising, quite low key. Even an episode involving Andy's boss, Jane Lynch, as a lioness in heat who would devour him, is given a gentle nudge into human understanding. Not so gently, Andy lands in the lap of a single mom, Trish, his pals' best push. Catherine Keener performs her usual magic as Trish, the oddball businesswoman who is actually warmly drawn to Andy but, not for sex. She has her reasons and this film's advantage over others in this category is that it gives reasons for what seems screwball behavior. Here we should credit the director and co-writer.

The 40-Year-Old Virgin is a breakthrough film for first time director Judd Apatow, who has been around for some time. TV watchers may recognize his name. He's written and produced many comedy shows. A Long Island boy, he grew up wanting to be a standup comic, and look at him now. He's made a standard, coarse, groinfixated comedy something else again – it smacks of love. Love?

What happens to Andy? Does he find physical love? Ask Trish. Smack-smack!

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Dave Evans' MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

The 40 Year Old Virgin

With his 6-year stint as a correspondent on The Daily Show and recent role in the American version of The Office, Steve Carell has built up a strong background in TV comedy. Here makes a stride towards the big screen, playing the titular character in this Ben Stiller-esque comedy. Nice supporting work from Paul Rudd and the long underrated Catherine Keener help to float this above-average comedy.

The Constant Gardener

Director Fernando Mereilles was the man responsible for the phenomenal City of God and this stylish adaptation of the John Le Carre novel will help to maintain that reputation. The story revolves around the murder of an activist (Rachel Weisz) and her husband's (Ralph Fiennes) attempts to solve the mysteries surrounding her death. That tragically rare thing: a classy and effective thriller.

The Cave

In the wake of the alarming popularity of The Grudge and Boogeyman, this is another unimaginative and utterly un-terrifying horror film. Here a bunch of ex-soap stars and other dramatic miscreants star as nubile divers who find themselves caught in an underwater cavern and, sinisterly, not alone. Director Bruce Hunt cut his teeth as second and third unit director on the Matrix trilogy.

Four Brothers

Mark Wahlberg, Tyrese, Andre 3000 and Garrett Hedlund star in John Singleton's surprise summer hit about four brothers (different fathers) who come together for their mother's funeral and to avenge her death. Surprisingly fun and well put together, the cast clashes and bonds together effectively throughout. A huge step up from the director's 2003 effort, 2 Fast 2 Furious.

The Transporter 2

The pure action film is a surprisingly scarce commodity. Others get bogged down with purpose or ethics, but this sequel to the 2002 French action hit has no such concerns. Though it's an oddly cheap direction for screenwriter Luc Besson (who was responsible for the excellent The Professional in 1994) to take, it is refreshingly unpretentious. Jason Statham returns as the deliveryman plagued by car chases, fight sequences and explosions throughout.

The Underclassman

When the big blockbusters of the summer have been so poor, you can hardly blame the B-movie market for its similarly lackluster offerings. Nick Cannon stars as Tracy Stokes, a fresh-faced cop who has to go undercover in a private school to bust a gang of preppy kids involved in thieving luxury cars. Hilarity and thrills will most likely not ensue in this limp action-comedy.

Broken Flowers

Bill Murray continues his winning-streak as every indie-kid's hero in director Jim Jarmusch's romantic comedy-drama. Murray plays Don Johnston, a former womanizer who receives an anonymous letter informing him that he has a son and sets out on a trip through relationships past. The quirky sensibility and amazing line-up of old flames (Jessica Lange, Sharon Stone, Frances Conroy and the wonderful Tilda Swinton) won't fail to impress.

June Bug

This is another calm, tinkling independent film concerning the coming together of a large cast of characters in a bizarre situation. This one is motivated by a folk-art collector and her partner traveling south to North Carolina to meet his family. North-South-divide humor dominates here but there are some genuinely striking moments in a tired concept. The O.C.'s Ben McKenzie co-stars in case you need more of a reason to attend.

Red-Eye

It's been a while since the Scream trilogy and, last year's werewolf flick Cursed never really worked out, so it's nice to see director Wes Craven back on form in this claustrophobic horror film. Rising starlet Rachel McAdams plays an airline passenger who discovers that the man in the next seat (a very creepy Cillian Murphy, fresh from his sinister role in Batman Begins) is involved in a menacing plot concerning her family.

Grizzly Man

Acclaimed German director Werner Herzog turns his unwavering eye to the tale of Tim Treadwell, a man who abandoned the human world to immerse himself in the life of bears. The return to nature comes to an abrupt end when he and his girlfriend are mauled to death by the bears. Documentary footage shot by the victims themselves is combined with various interviews in this thorough attempt to understand a well-intentioned but extremely flawed venture.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"OBJECTIVE/NONOBJECTIVE" AT ARLENE BUJESE

The terms objective and nonobjective can have diverse meanings, to be sure. Most commonly, the words refer to an aesthetic style, especially in a visual arts context: the more an image mirrors reality, the more objective it is. The more it deviates from reality, the more nonobjective it becomes.

Determining style can be relative, however, except for perhaps something like Photorealism. Thus, reality exists on a continuum, its determination often a matter of subjectivity not objectivity. (Pardon the pun.) What is one person's reality may be another person's fantasy, taking the form of Surrealism. For example, Dali's images are rendered in an objective style, yet his works are labeled surreal. Objects can look like real life but not exist in real life. What does that make the work?

The exhibit at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery is not that ambiguous, although certain pieces can suggest both reality and non-reality existing side by side. The latter observation can be seen in Helen Meyrowitz' drawings, where garlic bulbs seem so true to life that they also appear larger than life, a decidedly nonobjective approach. Is her style, therefore, surreal?

"Garlic Bulbs" by Helen Meyrowitz

Dealing with actual subject matter like Ms. Meyrowitz, Faith-Dorian Wright uses objects like a checker board to embellish their essential qualities, the works becoming nonobjective in the process. Such nonobjectivity doesn't make them surreal, however. Perhaps they seem more expressionistic, a distortion of reality that persists along that continuum devoted to deviations.

Conversely, other works do not create a mixture of objectivity and nonobjectivity. Deborah Black's "Keepers of Secrets" clearly deviates from reality in a more impressionistic way, if we must use stylistic labels. Yet it's also clear that the images are trees, given a mystic quality through the style.

Bruce Lieberman's "Airbase" is particularly interesting because he creates an impressionistic image out of an object we associate with "realism." We can't help but regard an airbase as an otherwise ugly place, yet Mr. Lieberman imbues it with a certain mysterious ambience.

Marianne Weil's sculptures are also nonobjective, but with enough realistic aspects that allow viwers to imagine authentic objects and human figures. Her "Shadow of Gavrinis" is even based on historical fact.

Susan Nash's, Richard Vaux', Judy Bernstock's, Gus Yero's and Sydney Butchkes' works are nonobjective as well, yet their subjects originate from reality. Mr. Yero's still lifes particularly recall the sensuality associated with fruits as do Mr. Butchkes' geometric patterns conjure up a fantasy of luscious colors that belie the objectivity of the shapes.

The current show will be on view until September 15.

Honoring the Artist: Bruce Crane

It's comforting to know that some things never change in this day and age of unpredictability. This week's cover, "Pond at East Hampton," looks as contemporary and fresh as the day it was painted. But that day was not this year, or even several decades ago.

It's hard to imagine it was created in 1879 by Bruce Crane, an important American tonalist. While Crane seems to have captured the special ambience of both East Hampton and its landmark pond, he was not a native Long Islander, his initial subjects being Keene Valley and the Adirondacks. It was his East End landscapes, however, that won him his first recognition, including attention from collectors.

Attention from artists as well became a salient part of Crane's creative process, particularly from Alexander Wyant, a notable Hudson Valley painter, who motivated the young Crane to become a landscape artist. Later, Crane went to Europe, making France his home in 1882. There, he moved into Grez-sur-Loing's art community, forming personal and professional relationships with Americans Alexander and Birge Harrison and French artist Jean Charles Cazin.

Yet such artists did more than mentor Crane. Cazin, particularly, exposed the theory that memory was the best way to capture nature, not plein-air naturalism. When Crane returned to the United States two years later, his new autumn and winter paintings reflected such an approach. This new way of working paid off for Crane, who was elected to associate membership in the Natinal Academy of Design.

In later years, from the mid-1890s to the early 1900s, Crane continued painting landscapes in diverse regions, including Maine and Connecticut. During this period, Crane was again recognized and awarded for his efforts, being given the Inness Gold Medal at the National Academy of Design, a gold medal at the Lewis and Clark Exposition in St. Louis, and a silver medal at the Panama – Pacific Exposition in San Francisco (1915).

During this time and beyond, Crane's style altered once more, his images becoming richer, denser, more expressive and more textured.

Eventually, Crane moved to another artist's community, Old Lyme, Connecticut, with his daughter and wife, a place he had been visiting often for the last several years of his life. He died in 1937 at his longtime home and studio in Bronxville, New York.

Recalling Crane's life does not do full justice to his work, however. Looking at his paintings over the decades gives additional insight into his talents and passions: his use of light evoking the Impressionists; his forms reinforcing the training he had in draftsmanship as a young man, his mythical quality pervading the canvas.

Artists on Film

"ARTISTS ON FILM" SERIES: ARTISTS PICK THEIR FAVORITE FILMS

Back for a fifth season, the Pollock Krasner House's movie series, "Artists on Film," this year will feature well-known artists showing and discussing their favorite motion pictures.

The films selected are not only diverse, but also provocative and were even labeled scandalous at the time of their release. Most importantly, perhaps, the movies present unique world views from the hearts and minds of extraordinary filmmakers.

Which seems reasonable, considering the equally diverse, provocative, controversial and extraordinary artists who have chosen them.

Painting by Eric Fischl

Lynda Benglis, who selected the recent contentious Sin City (co-directed by Quentin Tarantino), is known as one of the most "edgy" sculptors working today, texture and space being her signature qualities.

Sin City is a movie where texture counts as well. It's a genre piece recalling film noir's hard-boiled detectives like Phillip Marlow. The movie's Expressionistic ambience especially evokes texture: its sharp contrasts between blacks and whites; sharp juxtaposition between horizontals and verticals; its inanimate objects becoming characters of their own.

Moreover, the work recalls Tarantino's Pulp Fiction: it even stars Bruce Willis.

Ross Bleckner's paintings dared to convey the tragedy of AIDS long before it was acceptable for discussion. His film choice, Teorema, is considered a challenging, passionate work as well. Directed by poet and philosopher Pier Pasolini, the movie was banned by the Catholic Church when it equated sex with religious experience.

The film, with a very young Terence Stamp, depicts the downfall of a wealthy Italian family, when Stamp succeeds in seducing every member of the family and staff (male and female alike).

The work's aesthetic qualities are outstanding, the setting filled with arresting architectural details. We might even say the buildings are real stars of the movie.

Like Bleckner's works, April Gornik's cloudscapes were ahead of their time as well. Written by Jules Feiffer, her selection, *Carnal Knowledge (*starring a young Jack Nicholson and Candice Bergen) confronts the problems of relationships and sex in a courageous way as only director Mike Nichols can do.

The 1970 movie brings forth the "me generation," following the lives of a group of yuppie college buddies. Materialism and lack of values make us understand their unhappiness, yet we still don't like the characters very much.

Finally, Eric Fischl's paintings also face the perplexities and ambiguities of relationships, framing them in worlds-of -their own. His favorite film, Fellini's City of Women, creates a universe unique to Fellini, yet there are similarities between this movie and Fischl's recent work: unexpected encounters; sexual tension; both expressionistic and surrealistic imagery; the capturing of a moment in time.

Like Nicholson in Carnal Knowledge, Marcello Mastroianni lives for women and sex. Even so, Fellini's narrative puts the hero through a series of misadventures that are both humorous and bigger-than-life. In the end, there's a glimmer of hope for Mastroianni, yet the ending is "open."

While it may seem somewhat unusual to compare Fellini and Fischl, it is also reasonable to suggest that many artists have been influenced by film, consciously or not. And it's just as intriguing to suggest that art and cinema share commonalities which are just beginning to surface.

The series, "Artists on Film," hopes to explore such connections, and in the process, gain better insights into particular artists and their cinematic inspirations.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss, discussion leader for "Artists on Film" series.

Call the Pollock Krasner House at 631-324-4929 for reservations and information. The series is on four consecutive Fridays at 7 p.m. at the Pollock Krasner House during September, starting Sept. 9.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Ribs, a barbecue favorite, team up with cilantro buttered, grilled corn and a refreshingly sweet fresh peach and blueberry compote to make the Labor Day weekend meal a memorable farewell to summer.

When talking ribs, pork ribs are what most people anticipate. Yet meaty beef ribs, for those who avoid pork for whatever reason, can be satisfying and delicious. The allure of ribs, in any guise, brings to mind finger lickin', crusty edged images of a popular dish.

Aficionados claim the best way to cook ribs is long and slow on the grill by indirect heat with charcoal and wood chips. I have the luxury of both a gas grill (in my kitchen) and a dome-top kettle barbecue with built-in thermometer, on the patio. A chimney-type starter for the coals is very efficient. When hot, divide coals on the lower grid of the grill with a space in between for a disposable foil drip pan. If using wood chips, soak a good handful in water for 30 minutes or so before adding to the coals. If using a gas grill, follow the manufacturer's instructions for using wood chips. It's best to have additional coals on hand to temper the heat of the grill as your ribs cook.

The beef ribs call for a deliciously spicy marinade, which may be an option. But do give it a try. Finish the ribs, meaty side up, and spread the glaze over them. When the ribs are about done, continue grilling for an extra ten minutes or so for beautifully crisp edges and an extra burst of flavor. Just remember when cooking true barbecue, patience is a virtue.

BARBECUED BEEF RIBS WITH TOASTY SPICE RUB

A dry rub can consist of almost any seasoning or spice. The following combination brings out the ribs' beefy flavor with delicious crusty edges. Beef ribs are large and meaty, they are cut from the rack (rib roast), and 2 ribs with side dishes can make a sufficient serving.

12 beef ribs

For the dry rub
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 teaspoons ground mustard seed
1 tablespoon coarse (kosher) salt
1 - 1 1/2 teaspoons chili powder
1 1/2 teaspoons paprika
1 1/2 teaspoons ground cumin

For the basting barbecue sauce
1/4 cup Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon dry English mustard
2 tablespoons molasses
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt

1. Place ribs in a large shallow glass (Pyrex) or ceramic dish. Combine the dry rub mix in a small bowl and rub the mixture evenly over the surface of the meat. Cover and refrigerate for up to 6 hours.

2. Meanwhile, combine the ingredients for the basting sauce and set aside.

3. Soak wood chips for 30 minutes while preparing a wood, charcoal or gas grill to medium-high. A chimney-type starter for the coals is most efficient. Arrange hot coals on either side of the grate, placing a drip pan in the center. Some grills have metal containers to separate out the coals. When ready to cook, scatter the wood chips over the coals. (If using a gas grill follow manufacturer's instructions for using wood chips.) When smoke appears, lower the heat to medium. Oil the clean grill grate with a folded paper towel dipped in neutral oil and, with tongs, draw the towel across the bars. Place the ribs on the hot grate, meat side up, over the drip pan and close the grill.

3. Cook the ribs about one hour, turning once half way. If using a charcoal grill, add 6-8 fresh coals per side to maintain the heat at about 325 degrees. Turn the ribs meat side up and baste with the barbecue marinade for 10 minutes longer until meat is tender and edges are crusty. Transfer to a cutting board and slice between the bones for serving.

GRILLED CORN WITH CILANTRO GARLIC BUTTER

Steven Raichlen, award-winning author of the Barbecue Bible (Workman), inspired this adaptation of his husk-handle grilled corn to serve with the barbecued beef ribs above.

Serve 6

6 fresh local corn on the cob
1 tightly packed cup cilantro leaves, washed and spin dried
2 cloves finely chopped garlic
4 tablespoons softened unsalted butter
Coarse (kosher) salt

1. Pull the husks back from each cob, then remove all the silk and discard. Tie each husk with one or two of the outer husk leaves to create a neat handle. Prepare a foil sheet cover to protect the handles while grilling.

2. Combine the cilantro, garlic, softened butter and salt in work bowl of a food processor and purée until smooth. Spread a film of cilantro butter over the kernels.

3. When ready to cook, place the corn directly over the coals, turning as necessary and basting from time to time with the remaining cilantro butter. Grill for 10-15 minutes until kernels are tender. Serve at once.

POACHED PEACH AND BLUEBERRY COMPOTE

This delicious compote can be held in the refrigerator for days to be ready when you are to serve over slices of pound cake.

Yield: 1 1/2 cups

6 ripe yellow freestone peaches, about 2 pounds

For the simple syrup
1 cup water
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/2 point blueberries, rinsed
Pound cake slices, optional

1. Plunge peaches into a large pot of rapidly boiling water and simmer briskly for 2 minutes. Drain and plunge into bowl of ice water. Pat peaches dry with paper towel and peel. I find that yellow freestone peaches peel more easily than white peaches. Slice into quarters and discard pits. Transfer to a bowl.

2.Place water and sugar in a medium saucepan and bring to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Simmer briskly until reduced by one-third. Place peaches, vanilla and lemon juice in syrup mixture and simmer for 3-4 minutes. Add the blueberries, stir to mix and remove from heat. Pour into a serving bowl with the peaches and chill thoroughly. When ready to serve spoon over pound cake slices, if desired.

Southampton Publick House

40 Bowden Square
Southampton, NY

Last Saturday afternoon was one of those late-August days that you recall in the thick of winter to warm you up inside. The sun was high in the sky as my friend Robin and I drove back from an invigorating morning hike, and when we pulled up to the Publick House in Bowden Square in Southampton to grab some lunch, I asked if she thought there would be outdoor seating so we could continue to soak up the day. When we passed through the slate patio to enter the huge restaurant, we smiled.

We requested a table outside, and the hostess seated us at a shaded table overlooking green grass. Since we had just gone for a hike, we needed some sustenance fast, and the waiter responded by bringing us a basket of sweet potato fries while we perused the menu. These fries were light and crispy on the outside and sweet and fluffy on the inside. They were served with a mustard dipping sauce, and the sour flavor accompanied the fries deliciously.

Now it may have been the middle of the day, but once I looked at the selection of beers, brewed right there in the microbrewery, I knew it was going to be one of those long, lazy lunches.

The waiter nodded in approval when we decided to try the beer sampler, which boasted seven different Publick House brews, each served in a small glass (about 4 ounces). Let me just say this: it's a good thing the sweet potato fries came first.

When it comes down to it, there are two kinds of beer in this world: the beer people drink to get drunk and the beer people drink to enjoy. These Publick House brews are not for chugging. These beers are refined, complex, brewed to be savored. In the sampler platter were: Montauk Light, Southampton Golden Lager, Southampton Pale Ale, Southampton Secret Ale, Oyster Stout, Black Raspberry Wheat, and Cuvee des Fleurs.

Neither Robin nor I is a big fan of light beers, but for those who are looking to keep their girlish figures, the Montauk Light certainly blows Coors Light out of the water. The Golden Lager was still light, but had a full flavor. The Southampton Pale Ale is an English-style ale brewed from five hop varieties, and the combination makes for a solid flavor. The Southampton Secret Ale is the signature beer of the Publick House, and the bronze medal winner at the Great American Beer Festival in Denver in 2002! The Oyster Stout was a full-flavored, dark beer that the owner, Donald Sulivan, said is especially great with seafood. My two favorites, I must save for last. The Black Raspberry Wheat is considered a summer brew, but I would drink this one any time of year, its fresh, tart flavor so unique. It is brewed with real black raspberries!

And the last beer of the sampler was truly unlike any beer I've ever tasted. Cuvée des fleurs, a Belgian-style ale brewed with fresh edible flowers, is full-flavored and refreshing. It tasted almost like a strong herbal tea, the balance between the brew and the flowers perfect. To complete the elegant flavor of this beer, it is bottled at a local vineyard in a champagne bottle, and you can take one home with you for about $14. I have one in my refrigerator right now, waiting for the deserving occasion.

As we sampled the selection of beers, our lunch arrived (thank goodness!) We enjoyed the mussels in a beer broth (are you sensing a theme?) They were so good we started dipping the sweet potato fries in the broth so as not to let any go to waste. The crab cake sandwich, with a fresh local tomato and remoulade accompaniment, was lightly fried and tasty, and the portabello, arugula, and goat cheese wrap was light and filling at once.

The Publick House offers a wide range of entrees, from the Crabmeat Stuffed Flounder to the Sirloin Gorgonzola. Since we were there just for lunch, we kept it relatively light, but rumor has it the Baby Back Ribs are dynamite.

Since its inception in 1996, the Publick House has expanded its distribution due to demand. Brewmaster Phil Markowski is well-known for his creative, careful recipes. Now Publick House brews are offered in five states, at specialty stores and in selected taverns and restaurants.

Side Dish

By Aji Jones

The First Annual Hamptons Wine & Food Festival has announced the winner of the Platinum Chef Competition: none other than Colette Connor, the Executive Chef and Owner of The Inn Spot on the Bay. Colette made it to the final round with Michael Rozzi, Executive Chef of Della Femina Restaurant. They were each given secret desert island, themed ingredients that included grouper, pineapple, mango, papaya, kiwi, lemon, lime, banana, shredded coconut and guava juice. In the allotted thirty-five minutes, Colette created a multitude of dishes that wowed the judges. First she sautéed the grouper and topped it with a tropical fruit compote. Then she hollowed out a pineapple and filled it with tropical fruit salad accompanied with a banana and marshmallow dipping sauce. Each chef was judged on taste, preparation and creativity, and though the scores were very close, Colette won by 5 points. Colette opened The Inn Spot on the Bay in April of last year and it has become one of the Hamptons best-kept secrets. The secret is now out with Colette's creativity in the kitchen taking center stage at the festival. The Inn Spot on the Bay is open for dinner seven days a week from 5 – 10 p.m. and brunch Saturday and Sunday, 11 a.m. – 4 p.m. For more information or reservations please call 728-1200.

The beers of the Southampton Publick House have a busy schedule this upcoming fall. The market is open 7 days a week. For hours and further information, call 324-9500.

Simply A-maizing

Not only is corn America's number one field crop, but it is currently in season, and widely available fresh off the Hamptons fields. From local farm stands to the Lobster Inn (162 Inlet Rd., Southampton), corn in a wide range of varieties is a great addition to any meal as the summer winds down. Corn is used in many recipes, such as corn chowder and cornbread, but when it comes to outdoor barbecuing, nothing can come close to the appeal of buttered corn on the cob. First adopted by Indian settlers, roasting corn with the husks removed is still, today, one of the most popular mealtime additions. In Native American usage, the word corn means "our life." In fact, it was the cultivation of corn that turned Native American tribes from nomadic to agrarian communities. Native Americans had spent hundreds of years developing what we now know as corn from seed-bearing grass, and there is evidence that they used corn to brew beer before Europeans arrived in the Americas. However, because most of us spend at least some of our time in the Hamptons and are surrounded by such fresh, healthy options, chances are we are at least somewhat health conscious when it comes to what we eat. With this in mind, there are about 80 calories in the average medium sized ear (about one-half cup of corn kernels). Out of those, 10 calories come from fat. Corn is fairly high in carbs; a medium cob has about 20% of your daily carbohydrate requirement. Nevertheless, corn is very high in potassium and, like most fruits and vegetables, is full of cancer fighting phytochemicals. Corn is also a good source for thiamin, folate, dietary fiber, vitamin C, phosphorous, and manganese. These are all great for lowering cholesterol, reducing the risks of certain cancers, balancing blood sugar levels, and improving your digestive process.

Furthermore, there are various types of corn. The most common are flint, dent, sweet, and popped. Flint corn has a hard outer shell and kernels with a range of colors from white to red. Dent corn is often used as livestock feed. It is also the main kind of corn used when making industrial products and various foods. It can be either white or yellow. Sweet corn is often eaten on the cob or it can be canned or frozen. Popcorn, a type of flint corn, has a soft, starchy center that is covered by a very hard shell. When popcorn is heated, the natural moisture inside the kernel turns to steam that builds up enough pressure for the kernel to pop. When the kernel explodes, the white starchy mass that we know as popcorn forms.

When it comes to cooking, there are a couple of things to keep in mind. Fresh corn should be cooked and served the day it's purchased, because as soon as corn is picked, its sugar begins a gradual conversion to starch, which reduces the corn's natural sweetness. Corn will lose 25% or more of its sugar within 24 hours of harvesting. If for some reason corn is not used immediately, add one teaspoon sugar for each quart of water, to replace the sugar that has been lost. Between purchasing and cooking, keep the corn moist and cool. Pack it in a cooler for the trip home and refrigerate it immediately. Refrigerating helps the corn stay sweet by not letting the sugars turn to starch.

In terms of cooking, when using water, choose a pot large enough so that there is room for water to fully cover the corn. Add husked corn to boiling water and cook on high heat for about four minutes. A great nonfat option is to rub lime wedges and sprinkle salt on your corn, as an alternative to butter. If you're looking to grill, wrap each ear loosely with aluminum foil. Over gas or hot coals, place corn onto a hot grill over medium heat. Cover barbecue with lid, open any vents, and cook fifteen to twenty minutes, turning occasionally. If you prefer baking your corn, preheat oven to 375 degrees. Prepare corn as if you were grilling, but put ears in a single layer directly onto the oven rack. Bake twenty to twenty-five minutes.

While corn is best over the summer, it can be found year-round, and is truly a delicious, healthy and easy to make treat. So eat up!

Hamptons Food and Wine Festival Serves Up Success

By Silvia Lehrer

The first annual Hamptons Wine and Food Festival, conceived by event promoters Stuart Racey, Jerry Romano and Jodi Della Femina, attracted a great crowd to the grounds of the Hayground School in Bridgehampton on August 26 and 27. Distinguished sponsors such as The New York Times, Peerless Importers, Inc. Viking, Fuji, Sharp, Fairway and the Corcoran group, among others, brought together a host of impressive celebrity chefs to give live cooking demonstrations, seminars featuring the rich agricultural heritage of the Hamptons from both the North and South Forks, a showcase of gourmet tastings in the Grand Tasting Hall, wine and spirit seminars, along with jam, jelly, and mustard seminars from local producers. The seminars, held in the school's classrooms, while chef demonstrations were held on the Viking stage in the Grand Hall and in the Expo Culinary Center, were scheduled at conflicting times during each day. So, careful choices were necessary.

Wickham's Fruit Farm in Cutchogue offered an amazing display of their prime produce with individual tastings of a variety of melons, followed by tomatoes, then plums and peaches, nectarines and berries. This informative session was beautifully explored by Prudence Wickham Heston. Frederic Rambeaud of Hampton Honey, our local bee farm, sees honey as a spirit and his goal as a bee-keeper is to establish many bee sanctuaries here on the East End. "Honey," says Frederic, "was the first harvest known to man." A seminar on The Secrets of Premium Chocolate captivated a chocolate loving audience. Art Ludlow of the Mecox Dairy Farm in Bridgehampton, who continually experiments with his artisanal cheeses, shared his knowledge and an ample round of cheese tastings. Steven Jenkins, of Fairway fame, held court with his wine and cheese tasting to a large audience. Roman Roth of Wolffer Estate vineyards in Sagaponack, along with Erik Fry of Lenz Winery and Karen Massoud of Paumanok Vineyards, both on the North Fork, informed their audience on the history and future of Long Island wines.

On to the great chefs at the Viking Stage in the Grand Hall where I was fortunate to observe some of the masters at work. The chefs included Joseph Bastianich, wine aficionado and restaurateur, who grilled a killer rib-eye steak with porcini crust. Alfred Portale of the Gotham Bar and Grill in New York City cooked up an inventive soft shell crab in a rice flake coating, then gave it his signature architectural twist by standing up the crispy crabs over a colorful corn and tomato salad. Stephen Raichlen, award-winning author of his best selling Barbecue Bible (Workman), and host of "Barbecue University" on PBS TV, communicated his scholarly ways at the grill, preparing exotic sugar cane, grilled shrimp with a buttery brown sugar glaze, cilantro garlic butter husked corn and yummy cinnamon grilled peaches. The lucky tasters flooded the stage after each presentation. The talented list of award-winning chefs also included Michael Romano of Union Square Café, David Burke of davidburke and donatella, and Rick Moonen of New York City's rm restaurant. Wish I could have attended them all.

In another section of the Grand Hall, tables were set up with gourmet food products such as our own Tate's crispy chocolate chip cookies in Southampton, a delectable display of olives from Doral International, and savory all natural gourmet cheese crackers made from aged Parmesan with a variety of flavors from The Kitchen Table Bakers in Syosset. Phil Lempert of the "Today Show" singled out these crackers as "wonderful."

Another highlight of the event was the local chef's competition held over two days in the Expo Culinary Center, which was won by Collette Connors of the Inn Spot on the Bay in Hampton Bays. The lucky winner will take a trip for two to Tahiti. Evening events included a caviar cocktail party at an oceanside estate on Friday evening and a cocktail party and VIP barbecue on Saturday. This was indeed a busy two days for the many cheerful participants.

From The Runway By Kelly Krieger

New York Fashion Week, September 9-16

It's time once again to get the first look at next year's spring collections for men and women. The tradition of Fashion Week draws top designers from all corners of the globe to showcase their latest creations to the fashion elite.

With all the glitz and glamour of celebrities and top fashion journalists sitting comfortably in the front rows, the anticipation as each designer unveils his or her new line intensifies moments before show time. Lighting, music, décor, champagne (sometimes) and the "who's who" in the fashion industry help to create a magically artistic atmosphere.

The pressure is on, and all eyes are on the models which include a handful of the top "super models," strutting down the runway in hopes of capturing the undivided attention of the entire room with the latest designs. Each model is usually in 5-6 shows per day, while fashion editors can attend up to 10. This is why it is imperative that each show is well organized and perfectly timed. Timing is everything, and the models must have their hair, makeup and clothing look impeccable. There is little room for error, but like any live show, something will go wrong (let's just hope that it's a "minor something")

If you have yet to attend a fashion show, I recommend adding it to your list of things to do. I've watched many that have been televised, but they are nothing in comparison to being there to absorb the high energy and excitement that fills the air. And to think this all happens in less than 15 minutes (usually). The length of time depends on the number of designs being shown. Remember it's all about quality not quantity, and many designers prefer to only show their strongest designs.

Depending on the location, some show venues can accommodate up to 1,000 attendees. The majority of shows are located in Bryant Park; however, many designers have been using alternative spaces such as art galleries, clubs and restaurants. One of the main concerns when using an alternative space is transportation. Careful planning is needed if designers hope for a good turnout. If Calvin or Oscar de la Renta is scheduled in midtown at noon, it would be a bad idea to plan a show at 1 "somewhere" downtown. Traffic and accessibility are key considerations and it's important that the audience stays in a good mood, especially the fashion editors. And, since fashion editors attend the most shows, if you're the last one on their list for that day, let's hope you can still impress them.

Fashion editors look for new trends, a unique vibe and new talent at Fashion Week and it's their job to convey that information to their readers. A designer knows he or she has arrived if Anna Wintour (Editor and Chief of Vogue), Patrick McCarthy (Chairman and Editorial Director of Fairchild Publications) or Cathy Horyn of the New York Times is in attendance. And, if Anna Wintour is expected, the show will not start until she has arrived.

It can be difficult to get into some of the more popular designer shows, but you can sometimes get lucky. There are some admirers and students of fashion that will wait outside in hopes of scoring a free ticket. In the fashion circle, if someone has an extra ticket, it's common practice to pass it on. I think I'll put on my best outfit and wait for my lucky ticket.

This year's line-up includes Ralph Lauren, Donna Karan, Badgley Mischka, Betsey Johnson, Calvin Klein, Carolina Herrera, Oscar de la Renta, Marc Jacobs and many more. New York Fashion Week (Olympus Fashion Week) kicks off the season on September 9th and runs through September 16th. For more information call 212-253-2692 or visit www.olympusfashionweek.com.

Following New York Fashion Week, for those fashion enthusiasts, the schedule is as follows; LFW-spring/summer 2006 in London, September 18-22 (www.londonfashonweek.com); Milano Moda Donna spring/summer 2006, Milan, Italy, September 24-October 2 and Milan Women (same dates – (www.cameramoda.it); Jakarta Fashion Week in Jakarta, Indonesia, September 28-October 2 (www.jakartafashionweek.com); Paris Women, Paris, France, October 3- October 10 (www.modeparis.com); Singapore Fashion Week, Singapore, October 18-October 21 (www.taff.org.sg); and Los Angeles Fashion Week, Los Angeles, CA, October 23-November 2 (www.mercedesbenzfashion.com). DAN'S FASHION

High Tops for High Society

Today I found a pair of Nike sneakers made of gold on Main St. in East Hampton. They were locked behind glass. Everyone wanted in.

The sneaker was the first mass produced shoe. It was invented during the Industrial Revolution when vulcanized rubber and the first assembly lines made a cheaper, easier method of production. Now, two centuries later, people line up outside of stores worldwide, eager to fork out $500 and up for a pair of rubber-soled shoes. In case anyone missed the cultural memo, the era of all-purpose, good-ol' sneaker is over.

As I perused the neatly arranged cases at Blue & Cream, a trendy East Hampton boutique, I found sneakers in materials that ranged from standard leather to snakeskin and suede, all in an array of flashy "pure pigment colors" and priced anywhere from $150-$850. I asked the salesman, who wore a turquoise-on-black version of the Air Force One, to talk to me about these shoes.

"Well……some reflect retro styles of the early '90s and 80's," he said, pointing to some white models with soles in various neon purples, greens, and yellows. "Most of them are limited-edition or custom made and some of them are special design."

When I stumbled upon a pair of patent leather, fire-engine red lace-ups known as "Fly Reds" (priced at $550), I found myself reaching towards the glass. Hideous as they were, I was tempted. After some research, I realized that there are many people who that share this urge. Ugly to most, these gaudy kicks have become collector's items, with a huge fan base, an entire hip-hop subculture based solely around the possession of too-precious-to-wear shoes.

We call these people Sneaker-heads. Books have been written about them, magazines and on-line forums have been created for them, and, like any good subculture, they have their own vernacular. Shoes are described as "kicks," "joints," and "fly sleds." Adjectives include "buttery" and "fire."

Not only do these fiends pay hundreds, even thousands of dollars a pair, but most don't ever wear them. When questioning a sneaker-head, I was told that "even lacing them up and trying them on makes them less valuable." They are kept "deadstock," another sneaker-head term, meaning, they are never taken out of the box.

Sneakers play an important role in Hip-Hop culture. Basketball and break-dancing, both pillars of hip-hop, rely on footwork and have lent the shoe a position of the utmost importance. Now, the sneaker world has been infused with the modern "Bling" Hip-Hop movement and Jay Z, Nellie and 50 cent, along with so many other rappers, have individualized lines.

When I asked the salesman about the most expensive pair, he led me over to the back of the room where a larger, backlit case stood. I looked into the case, at a $750 pair of custom-made shoes covered in a strange print that looked like mini-snapshots. The salesman explained they were "Ricky Powell, limited edition, Dunk Ray Gun high tops." I looked back with a vacant stare. "He's an artist, those are his photographs," the ultra-hip and very patient salesman told me. It seems visual artists have entered the sneaker arena as well, designing high-end collectors items for a more artsy crowd.

The link between sneakers and celebrities originated when James Dean was photographed wearing Levi jeans and a pair of basic white sneakers. After that the sneaker became part of the teenage uniform, a symbol of independence and rebellion, and marking the emergence of a casual youth culture. In 1985, the Air Jordan was released by Nike, revolutionizing the sneaker industry once again. This shoe began an era of Sport-celebrity footwear. Features such as the pump impressed buyers worldwide, and hundred of models followed, showing off all sorts of bells and whistles.

Through the years celebrities have remained an important part of sneaker culture. Who could forget Madonna's high top All-stars in the 80s, or better even, the shell top Adidas that the Beastie Boys sport?

But it is not these famous names alone that values these shoes at such shocking prices. Nor is the impressive technology, vivacious colors or fancy features. Some of the most expensive Nikes are, in fact, modeled after retro styles with relatively simple looking facades. So what is it about Nike High tops that attract such obsessive fans, such willing spenders?

People have written books about the worldwide sneaker obsession, tracing the sneaker's role in consumer history and tying it to complex cultural and ideological questions. I am in no place to make a definitive statement but it seems there is something very simple about the reason so many are willing to spend this much on a pair of "custom-made" or "limited-edition" sneakers.

"You have what other people want, what they don't have," one footwear enthusiast explained to me.

Last year Nike released a pair of "eBay Dunks" for a charity auction that sold for $30,000. The company ensured just how limited these sneakers were, promising that the prototype would be shredded. They remain on display in the buyer's private home in LA.

When I asked another self-penned "sneaker-head" what he thought about this cultural phenomenon, the aficionado replied: "Of course I would pay that much…… if I could, I would. No doubt."

"Why," I asked.

He paused for a moment, shuffled his own "Fly-Whites" and then said, with an ironic grin: "To be a sneaker hero."

It's almost time to say goodbye to summer. The shops are gearing toward fall and back- to-school fashions and accessories. Let's do some shopping!

Nancy & Co., on Jobs Lane in Southampton and Newtown Lane in East Hampton, is having a huge end-of'-summer-sale, with most items discounted from 30% to 50% with some early fall merchandise included in the sale also. With a sale like this at Nancy & Co., you can get your fall wardrobe together in no time! The big attraction here are the newest arrival of fall colors in the "Dead Sexy" corduroy pants that fit just right. There are lots of great new lines, such as Common Thread and Renee Lezard, which are on their way, as well as the true favorites, Equestrian and Cambio, always available here. Fall clothing is looking fabulous this year with lots of rich jewel-tone colors to mix in with your basics! Stop in and check this one out.

Hey, Chez Touché is doing it again! The Labor Day weekend will bring you a major "Clearance Sale" with all casual summer clothing at 50% off including all the summer dresses and evening gowns as well. There is also a "Fall Trunk Show" this weekend previewing the entire new collection of fur coats, shearlings and accessories. And.....the best part, if you mention this column, you will receive 20% off trunk show merchandise.

When you stop into Hildreth's Department Store on Main Street in Southampton, look for a brand new item in the Nursery Department. New for fall fashion here is the machine washable children's toggle coat in faux suede, available in sizes two to six in tan or brown, selling for $119.

Stubbs & Wootton on Jobs Lane in Southampton is having a 50% off "End of Season Sale" on selected slides, heels and slippers. The sale just started, so get going; they are marching out the door.

The "Summer Sale" at Christopher Fischer Cashmere will save you 50% on select merchandise, and the new fall 2005 collection is now in all stores.

Get in shape for the fall at the Omni Health & Racquet Club on County Road 39 in Southampton with their "Get In Shape" offer of three months for $239, (saving you $100) or one month for $89. The offer runs through Labor Day weekend and membership includes pool privileges as well.

Look for a "Floor Model Sale" at Casual Home on County Road 39 with 20% to 50% off select furniture and accessories. I guess it's time for me to shop for the hutch I need to store my Depression glass in. I'm there!

Hildreth's Southampton

Bridgehampton's Christian K. Andrews at 7 Tradesman's Path (off Butter Lane) is having a "Going Out Of Business Sale" and everything must go at rock bottom prices, saving you from 50% to 75%. Another great source for my hutch shopping! Give a call at 631-537-2877.

For a gigantic "Summer Sale" check out the Down Factory on Montauk Highway, East Hampton. The featherbeds are the way to go with all the hustle and bustle and running around we do, it's wonderful to just fall into a nice soft bed at night. And.....they are on sale here, along with Polish down comforters, and down pillows. The dorm specials are something to take a look at, they include sheets, mattress pads, towels, rugs, bath accessories, terry robes, hangers, blankets, and so much more. You can always save money here, take my word for it!

D.J. Hart is having a half-price sale. Located on Main Street in Sag Harbor you must also check out the brand new fall fashions including wooden necklaces, bracelets, French hair clips, Chinese silk bags, vintage Lucite necklaces, woven Indian shawls, fall sweaters and gauze tiered skirts.

At The Whalebone Store on Noyac Road, Sag Harbor you can stock up on some great bargains for the end of summer and include some of them in your back-to-school fashions with many items reduced 50%. Look for the "End of Season Sale" that include junior size hooded long sleeved shirts with zippers, cute dresses, camp shirts, tank tops in soft rayon and for the ladies, a large assortment of Hawaiian shirts and fashion flip flops. For men there are bathing shorts and for children, snorkels, mask, tubes and swimmies are still available.

On The North Fork: At Pottery Barn Outlet in Riverhead, check out the end of season sale with all the rugs at 30% off from now until September 5.

Barney's New York Outlet at The Tanger Outlet Center is having a "Fall into Fall" Labor Day weekend blast. Get ready for back-to-school with brand new fall fashions.

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, I would love to know about it. E-mail Maria at Shoptil@danspapers.com or by fax at: 631-537-6755.

New Kids On The Block

THE LYNN STOLLER COLLECTION, 2401 Main Street, Bridgehampton. 631-537-9255.

A new boutique called The Lynn Stoller Collection has been added to the space at Out Of The Closet. Owner, vintage connoisseur and collector, Lynn Stoller bops back and forth between the Hamptons and the North Shore, sporting either stilettos or cowboy boots; culling her treasure trove of vintage handbags and jewelry. Her cache is full of surprises, including signature Judith Lieber evening bags, collectible pieces by Schiaparelli, and a much-loved Chanel cuff. The vintage collection is composed of 6,000 quality brooches and more than 100 exquisite handbags dating from the 1930s to the 1970s. "My customers tend to buy fabulous clear rhinestone brooches to place on a suit lapel, to update a pocketbook, or as a hair accent. I am always thrilled when I walk down the street and spot someone with a bag tucked under her arm that I know came from my collection," Ms. Stoller remarked. "It's about having fun!" Select pieces from her collection are also sold at Messina Jewelry (Westhampton Beach), Partners in Time (Southampton), and Beyond the Beaten Path (Eastport). So, indulge this season, and mix fine diamonds with a faux collar of rhinestones for an evening gala.

Brandon Bolin has arrived here from Beverly Hills to help launch Sergio Rossi in East Hampton. For fall/winter 2005-2006, Sergio Rossi delivers a collection imbued with modern sexiness. Bolin is ready to assist you in choosing the perfect pumps and is the guy who will show you Sergio Rossi's vision of modern sexiness: elegant fur-lined riding boots, extravagant ankle boots and sumptuous velvet, python and lace evening sandals. Pony boots are a must for the shoe closet this season. Unexpected materials turn classic shapes into ultra-new – and deeply desirable design objects. The colors are saturated and full of light: green, cherry, caramel, and electric-blue are the season's key shades. This season Sergio Rossi introduces several new signature handbags that include a luxurious version of a "carpet" bag, a chic everyday shoulder bag; the sexy, bohemian 'Diva' bag featuring tassels and handstitched detailing and a beaded black satin version for night. The store has a great little patio-seating area for people to sit and relax, even try on the shoes while the family dog snacks on Milk Bones. They also offer a variety of drinks including champagne, wines, water, soda and coffee.

Home shopping is offered with any of their associates by appointment only.

Scleroderma literally means "hard skin," but often affects internal organs with life-threatening consequences. 80% of victims are women, but men and children are also affected. The disease cuts across all racial and ethnic lines and affects as many individuals as those presently afflicted with Multiple Sclerosis, Muscular Dystrophy and Cystic Fibrosis. Currently, there is no cure, but scientists believe it is a solvable problem.

EAST END KID: PARRISH FAMILY LUAU

BY EMILY HART POST
With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post

Aloha! Late in the afternoon on Thursday, we attended a Hawaiian Luau at the Parrish Art Museum. First there were crafts and face painting. I became a jaguar. Then there was a show of dancers, musicians and fire artists called the Barefoot Hawaiians, which is a good name because they were barefoot and they are Hawaiians, I think. The drums were cool. Then came dinner and hula lessons. I even tried to hula. It was a fun party and I met new friends and saw old friends, all this for a good cause – the Parrish Art Museum. Remember Kids Day at the Hampton Classic. I'll be there!

Lots of Love for Locks of Love in Hampton Bays

"I'm excited, but nervous," said Andrea Abbat from her perch on the salon chair. On the morning of August 25, Andrea was a petite ten-year-old girl with a cute miniskirt and waist-length golden brown hair. She and her mother, Valerie, had trekkedfrom their hometown of Southampton to Salon East in Hampton Bays, where Andrea had an appointment to donate ten inches of her hair to Locks of Love, a charity organization that makes human hair wigs for children who suffer from long-term medical hair loss.

"I've been growing my hair for about three years," Andrea continued. "I learned about Locks of Love when my friend Palmer Calogris did it about four years ago, and then I definitely decided to donate my hair when I read this article about it in Dan's Papers." Her mother then produced the crumpled article, which was dated December 24, 2004; it was clear to see that Andrea had been anticipating this day for quite a while.

Andrea's one concern was that she be able to put her hair in a bun. "I've been in baton twirling competitions since first grade, and we need to put our hair up," she said. Besides baton twirling, Andrea also likes gymnastics, plays piano and violin, and takes Spanish lessons after school. Talk about a full schedule for a soon-to-be fifth grader! "She loves to do so many things, and it was her idea to take Spanish lessons," said her mother Valerie. "She inspires me!" she added, laughing.

Then came the moment we'd all been waiting for. While Valerie and I looked on, and Andrea grinned nervously at her reflection, hairdresser Silvia

Rodriguez snapped a hair-tie around Andrea's wet locks and cut through the hair right above it. The effect was instantaneous; the moment Andrea's newly shoulder-length hair swung forward, she looked older, more mature, and, if possible, even cuter than before. Silvia then gave Andrea an expert blowout and an adorable crooked side part.

Silvia told me that Andrea is the third Locks of Love haircut that she had styled in the past week. "It's getting more and more popular, lots of people are hearing about it and getting into it," she told me. "It's mostly little girls and teenagers who want to donate their hair." This seems to be the case in other salons as well. In the donor picture gallery on the organization's website, nearly every before-and-after is of a girl Andrea's age or younger, although there are a few adorable mother-daughter duos and some group shots involving donors of all ages. The organization's bio page also states "the majority of hair comes from children who want to help other children."

This is absolutely astounding to me, because I can say from experience that losing ten inches of hair in one big chop is no small deal. I would like to take this moment to offer infinite kudos to anyone who has given or is planning to give their hair to Locks of Love, and to say that short hair is adorable and a lot easier to comb.

If you're interested in donating your own hair, LocksofLove.org has a massive list of salons that offer discounted or even free cuts, plus instructions for cutting and donating your own hair. Hair must be clean, unbleached, at least ten inches long, and in a ponytail or braid. And while Locks of Love haircuts are primarily a female thing, boys can get in on the craze as well; several of my guy friends have ditched their shoulder-length hair in favor of a crew cut, and have donated the remnants. When Andrea told me about the Dan's Papers article that had motivated her to grow out her own hair, she mentioned that she wanted her own story to "inspire at least one other kid." So if you've got super-long hair, or even slightly long hair, Andrea and I say, go for it! You'll look great and feel great, and, somewhere in the US or Canada, a sick child will, too.

book review: this dame for hire

By Eunice Miller

Here's the puzzle. Take the following words coppers, tomato, John Q Public, moniker, schnoz, duck soup and mucky-muck, have them uttered by a perky and witty female dick named Faye Quick, place her in New York City in 1943 while World War II is raging and what do you have? In this case you have a fast paced entertaining detective novel, This Dame for Hire by veteran mystery writer and Hampton resident Sandra Scoppettone.

In the past, Scoppettone has written under a pseudonym of Jack Early. Now she is fully out of the closet and embraces her femininity with a female heroine. Faye, a secretary, literally falls into her position as a private eye when her boss has to leave for the army. She sums it up this way. "By January of 42, Woody Mason was in the Army and I was running A Detective Agency. The A didn't stand for anything. He named it that so it would be first in the phone book."

Faye has a knack for falling into things. She early on trips over a murdered woman's body. "It was snowing big wet flakes. .....When it snowed in the city, it was always quiet, and I could almost con myself into thinking that I heard the flakes land. Then in the next second, I tripped over something on the sidewalk and flew through the air, landed on my hands and then fell on my knees..... I inched my way closer to the heap on the sidewalk. My throat felt tight....."

The discovery of the body puts the story at the starting gate to unraveling a mystery and unleashing an engaging stable of characters with names designed to amuse, such as Larry the Loser, Black Shirt Bob and Fat Freddy. They, however, are not from the main stable. The central figures are the Park Avenue family of the murdered woman, Claudette West, a student at NYU. Private Eye Quick and the West family mix like oil and water; however, Quick is determined to help them solve the mystery of their daughter's death.

Scoppettone likes surprises and she delivers them to the reader by surprising herself as she lets the characters and the plot take on a life of their own.

There are as many twists as a licorice stick.

Claudette shockingly was three months pregnant when murdered. Who was the father? What seemed like a simple question to answer becomes confounding, as each chapter reveals another lover. There is quite a string. Each time we are almost sure we have the case solved.

Porter West, Claudette's father, is, "Convinced that greed was the motive, and that Claudette's working-class boyfriend, Richard Cotton, killed her because she threw him off the gravy train."

We experience excitement traveling with Faye through all the neighborhoods of New York, from bohemian Greenwich Village to midtown Manhattan and Park Avenue to interview the likely and unlikely suspects. The author adds authenticity to the period of the novel by the use of lingo and pop cultural references. We can almost hear the music of Harry James and "I had the Craziest Dream" sung by Helen Forrest. We can picture the freak shows at "The Dime Museum."

Quick gets to her destination and solves the mystery. The whodunit is a superb surprise.

This Dame for Hire is perfect for the lovers of the old Nancy Drew series. For the 20-something generation it confirms what they already know that Faye Quick can compete with the writings of a Jack Early. This is a murder mystery for the fast food and speed dating generation. It clips along like the horses at the Belmont races. Hold on to the bridle and you will enjoy the ride.

This Dame for Hire by Sandra Scoppettone published 2005 by Ballantine Books is available at all bookstores.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Early in the fifties and sixties there existed what were called gentlemen race drivers. What separated these race drivers from professional race drivers was the fact that they were not race drivers by profession, but by avocation. Like gentlemen farmers, they had a passion for a hobby that didn't make them an income; that, in fact was an expensive pastime.

When talking about gentlemen drivers, the late Bob Grossman comes to mind. He was a gracious and colorful guy who made his fortune with one of the first Volkswagen dealerships in America. Bob was also a dealer in exotic foreign cars. At one point in time, he had the distinction of being the American driver who had driven at LeMans the most number of times. Bob once told me that he drove his Ferrari short wheelbase California Spyder from his dealership in Nyack to Sebring, Florida for an international race famous as "The Twelve Hours of Sebring." He won the race with the Ferrari and then drove it back home to Nyack. That, my friends, is a "gentleman racer," and the way it was.

Another great Grossman story is the one he told about coming in fourth at Le Mans in his privately owned and entered 1971 Ferrari GTB-4 Daytona coupe. He shipped it home to the United States and tried to sell the thing for about $7,000. He told me he couldn't sell it because nobody wanted a used, beat up race car, especially one that had been thrashed for 24 hours. I can verify this tale because at about the same period I was offered a Ferrari GTO race car for the same money but turned it down because it was in need of paint and a new windshield. Both of these cars today are worth more than a Hamptons home.

Another well-known gentleman race driver was the very talented clothing designer, the late John Weitz. John was much more than a clothing designer; he was also a published novelist and car designer. A little known fact about John is that he was in the British Secret Service when he was young. Because he was strikingly handsome, he was actually considered to be cast as the original James Bond in the film, Dr.No. But John's life-long passion was racing cars. The story goes that he was once in the starting grid of an international race. Sitting several cars ahead of him were Sterling Morse and Graham Hill, probably two of the world's most famous professional race drivers. John told me that he thought at the time, "What the hell am I doing here?"

I was once humbled by a similar experience while running at speed at the track at Lime Rock, Connecticut. Kirk White, one of the great Ferrari purveyors of all time, had lent me his Ferrari GTB-4 cammer for the afternoon. During open practice, I was running this very fast car as hard as I could, and running against me was a Ferrari GTO. We lapped through the turns together, but the GTO always walked away from me. Now, the GTO was certainly faster than the GT-B, but it wasn't that much faster. I found out later that the GTO was driven by a well-known professional, whose name I choose to forget. Point driven home: Gentlemen drivers are good, but professionals are usually better... as they should be.

Another famous gentleman driver was the young actor James Dean. In fact, he was driving his Porsche 550 Spyder to enter a race when he was killed on that California back road.

Both Bob Grossman and John Weitz lived in the Hamptons and raced at what used to be our backyard race track in Bridgehampton. The track was world class, and in its heyday, some of the world's greatest race drivers raced there. Every car enthusiast, not only in the Hamptons, but in the world, was saddened to see its demise.

This leads to another well-known Hamptons gentleman racer named Guy Frost. Guy is a talented architect by trade and an extreme automobile enthusiast. Guy Frost was personally responsible for the Bridgehampton race track staying in business as long as it did. He led a group of enthusiasts, myself included, to fight for years in an attempt to keep the Bridgehampton race track alive. Guy is presently promoting a nonprofit amateur race series that can make everyone a gentleman race driver. It's right here on Long Island. Last year it originated as the Centennial Celebration of the Vanderbilt Cup Races. This year it's simply called the Vanderbilt Cup Races. It's going to be held near the same site as the original Vanderbilt Cup races that ran through the streets in Nassau County near Mitchell Field. Though not yet a wheel-to-wheel race series, there will indeed be racing through the streets in a four-lap time trial, as well as various cars of all vintages running against each other. This year's Vanderbilt Cup Celebration will take place on September 17 and 18.

I don't know how Guy charmed his way into finessing the approval of this event by the Nassau County bigwigs, but he's that kind of guy. This event will not only be historically significant for Nassau County, but for all the car enthusiasts in the area. Janet Guthrie, famous for being the first woman race driver to run NASCAR and Indianapolis, will also be there, and so can you. Spectators are free, but there is a small fee to enter your car in the race. If you want to enter your car, please call or fax Guy Frost at 516-621-2745 . We all look forward to enjoying this Vanderbilt Cup Celebration as a yearly event. With Guy Frost at the helm, mark my words, it will eventually become a major automotive event. Get in on the ground floor. It may be your last chance to be a gentleman racer.

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears regularly on television as an automotive expert. You can email him at bobgelber@aol.com

New Corporate Sponsors Line up to Support 30th Anniversary Hampton Classic

Prudential Douglas Elliman and FENDI lead the list of new corporate names for 2005

The Hampton Classic celebrates its 30th anniversary with more than seventy corporate sponsors drawn from virtually every sector of the business world –aviation, fashion, finance, luxury brands, publishing, real estate, and television. The Classic's impressive sponsorship roster includes such long time supporters as American Express (since 1987), Calvin Klein (1980), Jaguar (1997), Land Rover (1989), Manhattan Mortgage (1996), Prudential Financial (1998), Sotheby's International Realty (1999), Wolffer Estate Vineyards (1991) and David Yurman (1996).

Heading the list of the new sponsors is Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate, the title sponsor of the $100,000 Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate Grand Prix on Sunday afternoon, September 4.

"We are very proud of our loyal family of corporate sponsors. We could not have had a successful thirty-year run without them and we are so grateful when they return year after year," stated Tony Hitchcock, Executive Director of the Show. "But it is especially gratifying when new companies join this already amazing roster." New sponsors are indicated by **

"Last year Barbour by Peter Elliot, Loaves & Fishes Cookshop and Sentient Jet led the list of newcomers and they will all be back. And this year, we welcome FENDI from Italy; Wild Horse Winery from California; Freedom Health from Ohio; Hickey Freeman and Peter Elliott from New York, and from right here on Long Island, two new companies, HorseSense Enterprises with its new PoloRoller product and VOX, a new magazine launching in 2006," Hitchcock concluded.

Both Hickey Freeman and Peter Elliot have entered into licensing agreements with the Hampton Classic. Peter Elliot is creating Hampton Classic neckties and the "Official Hampton Classic Blazer," while Hickey Freeman will be producing its Bobby Jones brand polo shirts and sweatshirts for boys embroidered with the Hampton Classic logo.

FENDI, Italy's renowned designer of women's handbags and shoes, will be the title sponsor of the new FENDI Cup, the $25,000 Open Jumper Competition on Saturday, September 3. FENDI will introduce a new line of equestrian-themed handbags as part of its inaugural sponsorship at the Classic.

Sotheby's International Realty, led by its Bridgehampton office, will be back as a sponsor for its seventh year. The firm will sponsor the $30,000 Sotheby's International Realty World Cup Qualifier, the event that will determine the final thirty equestrians who will ride in the Sunday Grand Prix.

David Yurman continues as the Official Jewelry Designer, Retailer and Timepiece at the Hampton Classic and sponsor of the first major jumping event of the week, the $20,000 David Yurman Time Challenge on Opening Day, that was held on Sunday, August 28. Calvin Klein returns as the sponsor of two major events, the $10,000 Calvin Klein Equitation Championship on September 3 and the Calvin Klein Show Jumping Derby on September 4.

Kerins' Victory in $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix Highlighted 2004 Hampton Classic

Darragh Kerins of Ireland rode Nabucco to victory in the $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix to close last year's 29th annual Hampton Classic Horse Show.

Kerins' victory before an enthusiastic crowd of more than 10,000 was a fitting climax to a highly successful Hampton Classic. Good weather, clear skies, exciting competitions, innovations such as the new Loaves & Fishes Cookshop Demonstration Kitchen, and traditional activities like the World of the Horse made the week one to remember.

"Thanks to the support of our outstanding sponsors, the hard work of officials, management and staff, and the participation of the nation's leading horsemen, the 2004 Hampton Classic has to rank as one of the best ever," said Hampton Classic Executive Director, Anthony F. Hitchcock. "We are so proud of what the Hampton Classic has become – a world class equestrian competition and an exciting event for the entire community."

In the Grand Prix, Kerins was the first of three entries from the starting field of 26 to qualify for the tiebreaking jump-off by riding without penalty over the 14-jump, first-round course designed by Olympic veteran Conrad Homfeld. Kerins then turned in another clean ride, completing the eight-jump tiebreaker course fault-free in 47.29 seconds on his nine-year-old Dutch Warmblood.

Darragh Kerins – winner of last year's Prudential Financial Grand Prix

The day's final entry, two-time champion Jeffery Welles of Pound Ridge, NY, managed to beat Kerins' time, finishing the jump-off in 44.24 seconds. However, his mount, Armani, lowered a rail at the second fence in the jump-off for four faults and a third-place finish.

"This is by far the biggest class I've ever jumped in," Kerins said after his win, "and to win it is a dream come true. When I cleared the water at the end of the first round, I was amazed that I was on the verge of a clean round at the Hampton Classic. Then we hit the last fence and I almost blew it. Fortunately, the rail stayed up and I was in the jump-off. It really hasn't sunk in yet."

The win marked the first Grand Prix win for Kerins, who said he geared his whole summer around the Hampton Classic. "All our showing all summer long was in preparation for competing here," he said. "I really can't believe how well it all worked out."

Kerins had quite an impressive week at the 2004 Hampton Classic. Prior to winning the $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix, he rode to victory in the $20,000 C. Wetherill Motors Five-Year-Old Young Jumper Championships – Eastern Finals aboard Extraordinaire. The luck of the Irish followed Kerins to the $30,000 GGET Six-Year-Old Young Jumper Championship Finals where he finished second riding Costa, a Holsteiner gelding by Coriander.

News Features, Documentaries and Live Broadcasts Celebrate 30th Anniversary of Hampton Classic

WCBS-TV, WVVH-TV, Plum TV and iN Demand Lead the List of Broadcasters Covering the 2005 Hampton Classic

The 30th anniversary Hampton Classic Horse Show will be chronicled by several television productions including a major news feature on WCBS-TV in Manhattan, a national HDTV and national pay-per-view program available on iN Demand, an historical documentary on Plum TV in the Hamptons, and daily coverage on Long Island's WVVH-TV 50.

"On the occasion of our 30th anniversary, we are excited to have entered into new major media partnerships while continuing our long-time association with our friends at WVVH," announced Anthony F. Hitchcock, executive director. "The excitement and color of this year's show will be captured in a variety of news and feature programs. Such diverse media coverage will no doubt introduce our sport and our event to an even wider audience."

Hampton Classic Enters into Agreement for production of HDTV Broadcast of 2005 Grand Prix

Equinal Productions of Princeton, New Jersey, will have exclusive distribution rights for a special High Definition Television broadcast of the Hampton Classic's $100,000 Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate Grand Prix. Carr-Hughes Productions and The Hampton Classic will produce the special HD broadcast of the Grand Prix, which is scheduled to air in early November 2005. It will be promoted as the "Crown Jewel" of "The Elite Equestrian Series" and be distributed by Equinal in HDTV. For those equestrian enthusiasts who do not have access to HD broadcasts, it will be available through local cable stations' iN Demand standard definition programming.

Other competitions to be featured as part of iN Demand's "Elite Series" include the Hermes I Love New York Grand Prix held at the I Love New York Horse Show in Lake Placid and The Rolex/USEF National Show Jumping Championship held at HITS on the Hudson in Saugerties.

Hampton Classic Special on WCBS-TV2 Scheduled for Saturday, September 10

Earlier this summer WCBS-TV2 New York announced a partnership with the Hampton Classic that will include a major broadcast "special" highlighting the action from the frontlines, behind the scenes, and the colorful social events surrounding the 30th Anniversary Classic. The one-hour special will be filmed during the 2005 Hampton Classic and will be broadcast from 7 – 8 p.m. on Saturday, September 10, between the US Open Tennis Men's Semi-Finals and the Women's Finals. The special will be hosted by two of WCBS's most popular broadcasters, Linda Lopez and Chris Wragge.

In addition, WCBS-TV2 will originate select daily programming segments from the 70-acre Bridgehampton show grounds, including its early morning show, weather forecasts and other features.

Plum TV Premiered "Thirty Years of Excellence," An Original Documentary about the Hampton Classic, Friday, August 26

Hamptons Plum TV premiered its original documentary about the Hampton Classic on Friday evening, August 26. Abi Anne Prince, documentary filmmaker and Montauk native, created the historical documentary about the show's first three decades. Ms. Prince traces the event's history from its origins as the Southampton Horse Show before World War II, to its revival in 1976 at Dune Alpin Farm in East Hampton, to its status today as the pinnacle event of the summer sporting and social season in the Hamptons.

The documentary, entitled, "Thirty Years of Excellence," includes historical footage of some of the first shows, in addition to interviews with many of the early participants and founders of the show. A major feature of the special is a series of interviews with the show's dynamic executive directors, Tony Hitchcock and Jean Lindgren, who are retiring this year after thirty years. Ms. Prince also visited with many noted Olympians and World Cup riders who have ridden at the Hampton Classic, as well as board members, sponsors and celebrities. Following its August 26 debut, the documentary will be aired frequently on Plum TV (Cablevision Channel 18) during the eight days of the Classic, through Grand Prix Sunday, September 4.

Plum TV will also rebroadcast "Thirty Years of Excellence" as part of its ongoing programming on Hamptons Plum TV and on its stations in Aspen, Vail, Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard.

WVVH Continues Its Tradition of Daily Coverage plus a Live Broadcast of the $100,000 Prudential Douglas Elliman Grand Prix

WVVH Hamptons TV will celebrate its tenth anniversary at the Hampton Classic this year. The Official East End Television Provider for the Classic will again provide five hours of live television coverage daily, plus nightly replays of that coverage and a live daily morning show from the Classic. WVVH is aired on UHF and cable throughout Eastern Long Island. They have the exclusive airing rights for the live broadcast of the $100,000 Prudential Douglas Elliman Grand Prix, at 2 p.m. on Sunday, September 4. (Channel 78 on Cablevision Long Island.) All WVVH programming is also "streamed" in real time on the Internet on www.WVVH.com. thus offering Hampton Classic events to equestrian enthusiasts around the world.

"In addition to all of this special coverage, there will be many more television reporters and crews from throughout the tri-state region and some from overseas at the 2005 Hampton Classic," added Hitchcock. "WABC TV's popular weatherman Sam Champion is scheduled to do a couple of his weather reports from the show grounds, a crew from Animal Planet will be following several of the riders and their horses throughout the week, and Cablevision's News 12 Long Island will be on site throughout the week. We also enjoy great radio coverage, including "live remote broadcasts" on WLIU (89.2 FM), one of our newest sponsors, as well as on other Long Island stations like WLNG, WEHM and Bloomberg Radio.

"Jean and I are always grateful for the amazing media coverage, year after year. And we extend an invitation to all the media who are interested in covering great equestrian show jumping action, and enjoying a bit of the local color, during that final weekend of the summer season in the Hamptons! Join us, it promises to be a great 30th anniversary celebration," Hitchcock concluded.

Ramiro Quintana Wins $20,000 David Yurman Time Challenge to Kick Off Show Jumping Action at the 30th Annual Hampton Classic

The 30th annual Hampton Classic got underway on Sunday, August 28, with Ramiro Quintana of Argentina claiming the first show jumping title of the week, the $20,000 David Yurman Time Challenge.

A total of 34 starters tackled the 14-jump, one-round course designed by Conrad Homfeld. Quintana, who has a home in Southampton, claimed the win by completing the course without penalty in 64.08 seconds on Carousel, owned by Mary B. Schwab and OEJI Farm.

"This is always such a great class," Quintana said after his win. "Riding in this big ring is a thrill and the course was beautifully put together by Conrad. It was certainly a great way to start the week."

Early in the class, Addison Phillips of New York City, riding tenth in the order, set a tough mark to beat when she finished penalty-free in 64.95 seconds on Flight, the horse on whom she won team Gold and individual Silver medals at last month's CN North American Young Riders' Championships in Lexington, VA.

Eleven rides later, two-time Olympic medalist Leslie Howard of Westport, CT beat Phillips's time, finishing in 63.03 seconds. However, her mount, Youp, had knockdowns at two fences for eight penalty seconds, giving them a final score of 71.03 and an eventual 10th place finish.

Six rides after Howard, Quintana took to the ring and turned in his winning ride, beating Phillips, who held on for second place, by .87 seconds. Third place went to Roberto Teran of Mexico, who rides out of Ontario; Teran finished fault-free in 66.15 seconds on Polyfax.

"I had a good draw going so late in the class," said Quintana. "I had the advantage of being able to watch most of the others go and my horse is naturally fast which is another advantage. It was great the way it worked out."

First added to the Opening Day schedule in 2003, and sponsored by long-time Hampton Classic supporter and renowned jewelry designer David Yurman, the $20,000 David Yurman Time Challenge has become an exciting fixture on the Hampton Classic's Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day.

As with the David Yurman Time Challenge, many classes from the Hampton Classic can be watched live as they happen via webcasts on www.wvvh.tv.

Cablevision's Kids Day/Dia de los Ninos presented by Hickey Freeman

$25,000 Fendi Cup will be Featured Show Jumping Event in Grand Prix Ring

Pony rides, special attractions, lots of give-aways and the excitement of international show jumping will thrill and amuse the youngest spectators at the Hampton Classic's 12th annual Cablevision's Kids Day/Dia de los Ninos, presented by Hickey Freeman, on Saturday, September 3.

Cablevision's Kids Day, presented by Hickey Freeman, will feature the National Circus Project where performers will teach kids the basics of juggling, plate spinning and stilt walking. Magicians and face painters as well as Latin dancers will keep everyone entertained throughout the day. New this year is the "hands on" art area where representatives of the Children's Museum of the East End (CMEE) will be on hand to work with kids on special projects.

In the World of the Horse™ Tent, near the pony rides, kids will find Llamaland, miniature horses, and those big "Teddy Bears of the horse world – Friesians, and even some mares with their foals!

As part of its presenting sponsorship, Hickey Freeman will be bringing a caricaturist to Kids Day to draw cartoon-like line drawings of the young Hampton Classic visitors. Kids will also be able to climb on a special playground installation furnished by Walpole Woodworkers.

The Latin Dancers

Cablevision's Kids Day has become an annual tradition at the Classic attracting area moms, dads and the kids for a day of great equestrian competition and special attractions. This year the entertainment attractions will be presented on The Long Island Parents & Children's Stage in the Exhibition area.

Kids under 12 are admitted to the Hampton Classic free of charge on Cablevision's Kids Day and each child is entitled to a complimentary pony ride. The day will get started at 10 a.m. and continue through the late afternoon.

Highlighting the Saturday show jumping action in the Grand Prix Ring will be the afternoon's competition for the $25,000 FENDI Cup. Other featured equestrian events on Cablevision's Kids Day will include the $10,000 Calvin Klein Equestrian Championship, the $15,000 WGHR Farm Junior/Amateur Jumper Classic, the $20,000 SHF Enterprises 5-Year-Old Young Jumper Championship Finals, and the $30,000 Shamrock Ventures 6-Year-Old Young Jumper Championship Finals. In addition, the $2,500 Children's Jumper Classic and the $2,500 Adult Amateur Jumper Classic are featured in the Jumper Ring and the $2,500 Pony Hunter Classic is featured in the Hunter Ring. These are for junior riders under the age of 18.

Hampton Classic Plans Southampton Hospital "Clear Jump" Challenge

Officials of the Hampton Classic Horse Show have announced that there will be a new fund-raising element at this year's annual equestrian event. The Hampton Classic is building a new Southampton Hospital jump to be used during the $100,000 Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate Grand Prix. Spectators and table patrons will be given the opportunity to pledge any amount they wish to be paid each time a horse and rider clear the new Southampton Hospital Jump during the Grand Prix. Southampton Hospital volunteers will be on hand all day to collect pledge cards in the VIP Tents and the main grandstands. One hundred percent of the proceeds from the "Clear Jump" Challenge will go directly to Southampton Hospital.

The idea of the Southampton Hospital "Clear Jump" Challenge came from Dan Wassong, former Chairman of Del Laboratories (Uniondale, NY). Mr. Wassong, who retired from Del earlier this year, indicated that he wanted to create a new funding opportunity for the hospital in honor of the upcoming retirement of the Hampton Classic's Executive Directors, Tony Hitchcock and Jean Lindgren.

One of the most appealing aspects of the Clear Jump Challenge is that anyone of any age can participate. About 30 horses are expected to compete in Sunday's Grand Prix and it is likely that no more than 10 of the first-round horses will advance to the second (jump-off) round. Thus it is anticipated that a total of 40 or fewer "clear efforts" over the Southampton Hospital jump will be recorded. Thus, if a patron has pledged $100 per clear effort, their maximum total contribution to the Hospital would be about $4,000. On the other hand, if a child wishes to pledge only 25 cents per clear jump, the total contribution would be about $10. "This is a terrific opportunity for our spectators of all ages and financial means to support our only East End hospital," noted Dennis Suskind, President of the Hampton Classic Horse Show Board of Directors. "We thank Dan Wassong for thinking of this exciting new addition to our event," he added.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Fall's Special Care

I am always amazed at how quickly the days shorten at the end of August. The available light will have decreased an hour by Labor Day, signaling plants it is time to set seed. As September proceeds past Labor Day the amount of light will further shorten and nights will show a wider distinction in the change in temperatures.

The gardening season this year got off to a late start, yet plants have prospered since mid-July. Late August and early September are critical times, as this time plants need to gain strength to help them through winter. Drought at this time of year can wreak devastation if plants are not well-rooted. Especially vulnerable are trees and shrubs that were transplanted last spring. Also vulnerable are annuals and recently planted perennials such as hydrangea, delphinium, and echinacea.

To ensure plants survive through winter, and to improve the overall quality and ease of gardening next season, it is the time for observant and vigilant care. While this is the time many gardeners sit back and enjoy the results of their labor, steps taken now to water, remove weeds, prune, and fertilize will pay off next spring and summer.

Late August and September can be killingly dry for plants. At Rock Cottage, we have both moist and dry areas and must watch out for the dry spots. Observe plants beginning to wilt and ensure they get an extra margin of water. Irrigation systems can be adjusted to help these dry spots though some hand-watering may be necessary.

Water is an important gardening requirement to establish strong roots, and is best done in the morning. While late August is humid because of the natural flow of southern air, the northeast rarely gets sufficient rain to sustain plants. If you notice plants wilting, water them deeply. Remember that it takes a while for water to saturate deep into soil (it may take a half-hour of constant watering for moisture to seep to a depth of four inches). You can test the depth of moisture by poking a finger into soil. Water plants deeply to promote root growth. Soaker hoses are a good idea at this time of year, especially around transplants.

You may have noticed that weeds are now setting seeds. We find August is frequently the time that encroaching weeds such as crab grass, which thrive in drier conditions, take over gardens. This is, therefore, a good time to remove and dispose of weeds. As part of the process of weeding, bag any weeds removed to prevent the spread of seeds. Eradicating weeds now is likely to reduce the number of weeds next season. As a precaution, never place weeds on compost heaps because, while the heat of composting will kill some seeds, it may spread weeds when compost is used.

In addition to weeding, take the opportunity to turn soil around plants to aerate spots that may have become compacted over the summer. This approach both lightens and aerates the soil as well as improves water absorption.

While weeding, it makes sense to fertilize lightly around some plants. Do not fertilize plants that are stressed or wilting until they revive. Apply a phosphate-rich fertilizer to stimulate root growth in late August. Since plants will continue to grow while temperatures are above 50 degrees, there are still two months to the growing season this year.

Late August and September are good months to prune annuals and other flowering plants. (It is too late now for hydrangea, trees and shrubs.) Annuals (especially impatiens) that get leggy in late August and September will benefit from pruning to keep them from flopping over. It is also a good idea to deadhead perennials; many will send up additional blooms later in September for a fall display of color.

As fall begins, some of the less desirable animals in the garden are aware of the changes in light and temperature. Voles and moles are particularly active at this time of year, gathering and storing seeds and other food. Take advantage of this instinct and use poison baits now to reduce or control these pests. When using poisoned baits, be sure to cover them to prevent birds, pets, and desirable animals from eating them.

An observant look around the garden and actions to reverse the effects of heat and sun in late summer do much to sustain a garden through winter. A few steps now will help guarantee a flowering fall and an enchanting garden next year.

Labor Day Flowers Without the Work

Can you believe it? I looked at the calendar the other day and was in complete shock. Where the heck did this summer go? I've had summers fly by, but this one reminded me of the space shuttle...roaring past at speeds greater than sound. Last I remember, it was the 4th of July and we were in awe as my son was appreciating fireworks for the first time, and then there were those really hot days (lots of them this summer) and now, now we're coordinating with friends and family about where to hold our Labor Day barbecues.

Ever wonder about the history of Labor Day? Well, The first Labor Day holiday was celebrated on Tuesday, September 5, 1882, in New York City, in accordance with the plans of the Central Labor Union. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, "it is a creation of the labor movement and is dedicated to the social and economic achievements of American workers. It constitutes a yearly national tribute to the contributions workers have made to the strength, prosperity, and well-being of our country." So a celebration is a must! Say goodbye to summer whites and college lifeguards in style by throwing a great party. Be sure to make your table just perfect with a beautiful flower arrangement or centerpiece.

If you're going to a party and looking for something spectacular to bring your host, you can never go wrong with a fresh array of late summer flowers. Chini Whitmore of Whitmore's in Amagansett suggested that you go with what's blooming locally for that "Hampton farm look." She said that "Zinnias, Dahlias, Gladiolas and Hydrangea" are all in season right now and look spectacular when artfully arranged by her talented staff. She also mentioned that you might want to go for the "East End nature look" by combining "rose buds (grown locally) with Queen Anne's Lace." She said that the beautiful red flower, combined with the Queen Anne's Lace give your arrangement a "nature" look, especially when you add bright berries all around. Chini mentioned that the "very organic look" is popular right now. Using local Long Island grasses and wood baskets, with a touch of natural ribbon can make an arrangement have that country flair you want at a backyard party.

Gerbera daisies and Sunflowers are spectacular if you are going for a sunny look. I recently saw a great arrangement that was made entirely of yellow flowers. The daisies and the sunflowers were combined and then whole lemons were added into the wide vase to complete the yellow look. The arrangement just brightened up the table and added that much needed touch of sunshine. This look can also be captured by using all red flowers such as roses and adding fresh cranberries to the water. These displays are sure to capture the interest of your guests and are just incredible to look at.

Lilies are always a favorite. Pink Oriental Lilies are gorgeous. Their bright color, set in a vase, will immediately brighten the table. Arrive at your host's house with the Lilies tied tightly in a pink ribbon and be prepared for the host/hostess to be impressed. Lilies always mean the end of the summer to me.

A very simple way to liven up an arrangement is to hand paint a vase. Go to your favorite garden supply or home store and purchase a glass vase. Using Acrylic paints, paint a simple flower or speckled design on the vase to match whatever color flowers you are planning to purchase. Let dry overnight. Add your arrangement the next day and tie with a matching ribbon. It's a nice way to give your gift a personal touch. The hostess will be able to keep the vase to use for future occasions.

Chini Whitmore recommends that you keep your flowers refrigerated until use, trim the stems everyday and use the provided plant food when you purchase from a florist or purchase your own for those homemade arrangements. It's important to care for your arrangement daily to keep it blooming longer.

So this Labor Day, make it a spectacular and beautiful one by enhancing your table with an exquisite arrangement. Don't hesitate to let your creative juices flow. You can easily describe what you want to an expert or take on the task of making a spectacular gift yourself. Flowers are just the right touch for making a table or a home just that much more beautiful. In this case, a little labor will go a long way in making someone smile!

Go West! Or At Least Western

The other night while sitting up late with my 21-month-old son, who decided it would be fun to play at 3 a.m. instead of sleep, I tiredly flicked the channels around. Infomercial after infomercial popped up, but so did a John Wayne cowboy movie. Connor looked up from the couch and yelled "horse." I, being a proud mother, ignored the fact that it was 3 a.m. and excitedly said "yes, it's a horse." He had never said that word before. So, my little son immediately grabbed his toy cowboy hat off the shelf and jumped onto his Western style rocking horse and pretended to ride his way into the sunset.

Then, when we were at the Hampton Classic, he spotted another of these beautiful animals and yelled "horse." This time, my husband got very excited and we went from vendor to vendor showing him stuffed horses, horse pillows, western style rugs, clocks, mirrors. There is so much out there that has the western influence. We purchased a clock with the picture of a beautiful brown stallion and now have it displayed in our den. That and the wooden rocking horse are just the beginning of our western collection.

If you are thinking of adding a bit of that Ol' Wild West to your home, the first suggestion is to get a cactus. I just polled a roomful of people and asked, "What says Western to you in home decor?" The word "cactus" came from 8 out of 10 of them. If you want a cactus that's hardy and beautiful in that prickly kind of way, you might want to invest in a Saguaro Cactus. They require a warm room and very little maintenance. They bloom with 3-inch wide flowers with a pretty yellow center in May and June.

The other two people said "pottery." A beautiful sand-painted pot would be the perfect home for your Saguaro cactus and provide that essential western flair. There is incredible handmade and western-inspired pottery at www.wonderviewgifts.com. "The Sonora Desert" is a beautiful piece that depicts coyote, saguaro, and a mesa backdrop with "Joshua trees in earth-tone browns." If you want to add a little color to your room, go with the "High Country Tracks." These pots are a beautiful white clay, handpainted with deep blues, greens and browns depicting the silhouettes of coyotes, bear or bison. There are so many styles and colors to choose from; go with what works best for your room and then continue to keep the accents of the colors consistent.

If you are going with the silhouette theme, you might want to consider purchasing the 3-drawer desert chest from Western Furniture and Southwestern finishings (www.cowboyindian.com). This beautiful hand-crafted wood piece features leather handles and carved wooden silhouttes of horses and buffalo on a blue varnished background. It would go along nicely with the "High Country Tracks" pot. The featured Hopi Clock on their site would go beautifully in the room. The bright blue finish would enhance the room, or you could send them your color choices and they could paint the clock to match. The beveled edges of the clock and the painted edging give it a true western look.

To give your floor the western look, you might want to invest in a beautiful Southwestern or lodge-inspired rug. There are some amazing textiles at www.go-southwest.com. You can go for that "throw rug" for around $15. These small area rugs feature a wide variety of designs and patterns. Some are mosaic in design with a variety of western colors – bright reds, turquoise, forest green and browns. The larger whole room rugs are just as beautiful and are more natural in appearance featuring silhouettes of animals, browns, tans and taupes. These rugs would look amazing in a room that has wood furniture. Add a western-inspired table and chairs, magazine rack and clock to finish the look. Put up some wooden shelves painted red, taupe and turquoise and add some miniature cowboy hats, vases and wooden sculptures to the room to complete the look.

Sandpainting is big this time of year. Many local Hampton artists are depicting their work around area craft and fine art fairs. Why not invest in a sand painting to enhance your wall space in that wild west room? A beautiful painting featuring a coyote baying or a horse grazing in a meadow would just add that right touch to the room. So now that you have some ideas... have fun westernizing!

C'mon In, the Water's Fine

I bought a pool heater at the beginning of this summer. Actually, I bought it almost halfway through the summer, because I had a difficult time finding anyone who wanted to take my money. I asked my pool company to sell me one, but they never followed up. I looked online, but couldn't figure out how to choose, or what I would do if there was a problem and I didn't have a service company to take care of it. I asked a friend who works at a pool company to find out if his company would sell me one even though I wasn't a client, but when he had a moment to get back to me, his voicemail assured me that his company would "be happy to sell me a spa right away." I know he was at the height of his busy time, and I wasn't upset with him. It was a miscommunication, that's all.

But still, no heater. I moved in to my house two years ago, and right before closing, the owners told me, whoops, we forgot to mention, the pool heater is broken. But the propane tank in the ground that will actually do the heating is full and you owe us $900 for it. Take the house or leave it. Hmm.

So at this point, it seemed as though it is not meant to be. The water, for the past two summers, has been cold, but, working at this paper, I have been extremely busy during those fun months and couldn't pay too much attention to creature comforts. This summer, though, I was determined at the very least to splash around after work.

Frustrated, I called a gas company, to find out the cost of running the heater that I was fantasizing about. I explained the situation, and considered opening an account. And asked them if they could sell me a heater. No they couldn't, but in confidence, the lovely woman on the phone suggested I call Schenck Fuels in East Hampton.

Success. I reached Rodney Schenck, one of the owners of the company, and I again explained my sad situation. Not only does Schenck carry the top-of-the-line products, but Rodney himself could stop by the next day, check out the equipment in my yard which obviously has been neglected for years, and set up an appointment for installation in a couple of days. I thought it was too good to be true. After all the brick walls I had been hitting, I really thought it would fall through and my new floats would just deflate, unused.

But he came through in every respect. I learned that there are basically three different options to heat your pool: solar heater which uses panels, heat pump heater which uses electricity to warm air that is pushed though, and a natural gas/propane heater. I was only interested in the gas heater, and Rodney confirmed what my research had taught me. There are three widely-used brands of pool heater, RayPak, Tele-Dyne and StaRite. Rodney trusts StaRite and at this point, Rodney was my new best friend and I was going to take his advice. Gas heaters are best for the conditions we find on the East End – a rather short warm season, and weather that won't necessarily maintain pool temperatures, which then need to be supported with a system that heats rather quickly when you need it to fire up at the last minute.

I went with the StaRite because it is super reliable, should last for years, heats 3 degrees an hour and is really easy to operate. It gives an accurate temperature reading on its digital control panel, has a series of automatic safety switch-offs in case of a too-low water level or a too-high temperature, and is just a great pool heater for those of us who don't really want to bother too much with their pool heater.

During the time that I've lived out here year round, I've dealt with some businesses that are happy to provide dependable and high-quality customer service for fair prices, and I've dealt with some who don't really seem to care. I'm sure it's like that everywhere in the world, but out here, in our small, close community, I expect people to really care about their reputations. I

Summer Leaving You Extra Baggage?

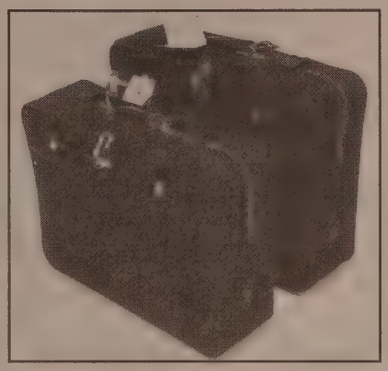
The family who lives in my house is not my own. They sleep in our beds, eat from our plates and scrub in our tubs. We refer to them as "the renters."

This summer, we too are renters. We have left our home in East Hampton and moved out to Amagansett. In June, we packed up "only the essentials," which involved three trips worth of stuff, and headed out to the sticks. Now Labor Day is approaching and we are preparing for re-occupation. All this really involves is packing up our stuff once again and driving west on 27. But this is actually much harder than it sounds.

I am standing before my luggage, the three suitcases I packed up three months ago. Beside the bags is what didn't fit this time around: two piles of clothing, some dirty laundry, art supplies and a bag of books. I'm perplexed. Is it possible that I have acquired so much in just three months?

I realize I am not alone in this when I walk downstairs. It seems we all have collected more than expected and have to shamefully stuff our excess into oversized garbage bags.

It's hard to believe humans were once a nomadic species, hunting only what we could eat, possessing only what we could carry on our backs. As I shove leather suitcases and cardboard boxes into the trunk, I begin to wonder if we have gone too far.



I'm sure renters all over town are confronting similar issues, if not on such an existential level, then they are merely wondering how to deal, what to do with all this stuff?

This year we brought clothes and we bought more clothes. We have tennis racquets, straw hats, bicycles and surf boards, pillows, and family photographs framed in glass. These things create an illusion of home in a strange place perhaps, but do we need all this junk? Did we truly need this snorkel set if we never took it out of the box? Why does my mother need twenty-three pairs of shoes for just two months? There are more practical questions, like what do we do with the perishables, the olive oil and cereal and soap? Do we bring the dog food home or throw it away?

What I know about the people who live in my house I have gathered from casual drive-bys. This means slowing down our car where the hedges are thin enough to allow a decent view of their (our!) lawn. What we see is a clutter of objects: the three piece jungle gym, a trampoline, an overturned tricycle, a pogo stick, a mini-soccer net, a baby pool and, my all-time favorite, a Slip and Slide. Although we know very little about "the renters" I am confident they are worse off than we, at least in terms of the arduous packing endeavor that lies ahead, and I admit that this is comforting.

So why do we stay up all night folding and packing, collecting, stuffing and hoarding like deranged squirrels every time it's time to pick up and go? This time I feel relieved and confident to have found Schenck after all the problems I was having just getting my phone calls returned. Rodney also told me about Schenk propane delivery service that I now use for my pool heater, and his company's reinvigorated commitment to customer care that has come from restructuring and refocusing. The business continues to be family run, as it has been since 1902, and they are determined to fulfill their potential as a full service, one-stop energy provider. They will also be handling my heating oil this winter.

It's been a blissful summer in my backyard, and I'm planning to keep the pool open far into the fall. It could have been a very different story, if my friends and family were still shivering and shaking while they pretended swimming at my house was really fun.

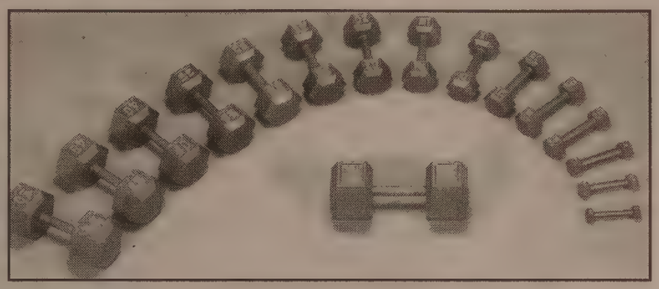
HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

Rejuvenations by Christina Poulos



In just a short while, we'll be saying sayonara to our swimwear and slipping into warm, cozy sweaters. For some summer lovers, the endless quest to maintain that buff beach body will be forgotten, and workouts will begin to fizzle out and become scarce. Some will plunge into the pattern of mindless eating, as they consider the months of autumn and winter a justifiable excuse to stay home and slow down. The result of this seasonal slump is inevitably a sluggish metabolism, which can leave you feeling fatigued and often results in weight gain. So after you revel in the final weekend of summer, stop yourself from falling into this disappointing pattern. Take action right now, to rejuvenate your metabolism.

Move it or lose it? Scrap that statement in this case. By becoming sedentary and reluctant to expend energy, your metabolism slams on the brakes big time. The more you move, the more calories your body will burn off. The best time of the day to work out is whenever you have the most energy, so try training at different times of the day to see which time best fits your energy level and schedule.

Aerobic exercise burns calories for about an hour after your workout has ended. Strive for 30-60 minutes a day, 5- 6 days a week, of heart healthy cardio sessions. Ideal for your shorter cardio workouts, interval training is an amazing way to break up a dull cardio session, and burns maximum calories. Every few minutes, add bursts of 30-60 second sprints to your runs, or add 30-60 seconds of intense inclines to your walks. High intensity intervals burn more glycogen, which extends your post-workout recovery time. The result is a higher metabolic rate, which burns calories for several hours.

Strength training at least 2-3 times a week is part 2 in the movement process to boost your metabolism. Muscles are fat-burning furnaces. For every pound of muscle, your body will burn 10 calories when at rest, while for every pound of fat on your body, you'll burn only 2 calories. By strength training, your muscles will have to work 24 hours a day to repair themselves after your workouts.

Make sure you train and build your muscles with the right amount of resistance. Start out by doing 2-3 sets of 8-12 reps a few days a week, moving quickly from one muscle group to the next, in a circuit. Circuit training allows you to burn more calories by working more muscles in less time, as you rest for no more than 30 seconds between each exercise.

When you become more experienced in the weight room, mix up your workouts to include light, moderate, and heavy days. On a light day, you should lift enough where you feel fatigued after 12-15 reps, and during moderate days, aim for 8-10 reps. On a heavy day, increase the weight so that you tire your muscles after only 5-8 reps. Increase all weights by 2-10 percent every 6 weeks to continuously challenge yourself and to keep your metabolism at its peak.

You must have heard countless times that breakfast is the most important meal of the day, but guess what? That's because it's true. Foregoing your a.m. fuel is the biggest cause of sluggish metabolism, after inactivity. When you wake up, your body is just coming out of a hibernation state, so by skipping out on your morning meal, your body will instinctively hold onto fat. A quick cup of coffee and a lone piece of fruit don't qualify as breakfast. Neither do any foods that are white-flour based or sugary. Good-for-you breakfasts include a combination of lean proteins, (egg white omelets, turkey and yogurt), whole grains (breads and cereals), and you should even learn ways to incorporate fruits and vegetables into your main meal.

If you skip meals, or take in less than 1,000 calories a day, your metabolism will slow its roll. Keep it moving with a minimum of 5 small portion-controlled meals that consist of 300-400 calories each. Eat dinner no less than 3 hours before bedtime, and make it the lightest meal of your day. Water makes the energy burning process of the metabolism work more effectively, so fill up with a minimum of 64 oz a day, and even more with intense exercise.

Find your balance of quality exercise, fuel, and sleep, and you'll maintain optimal energy and keep your metabolism on track throughout the off-season. Motivate yourself by lining up your swim attire for summer 2006!

Safe Hands in a Dangerous World

There was a time when Handy Wipes ruled the cleaning universe in the purse, the pocket, and the mighty glove compartment. Somehow, back then, we managed. The little abrasive sheets in their almost condom-like packets were all we had. The stupid things should all have lobsters printed on them. Visions of bibs and butter and amputated feelers and blush-red claws are enough to keep any of us away. Balls of paper and foil would litter the car floor. Wipes revealed themselves to be bone-dry before the first use. It was a sad time, but it was the beginning of a thought process that has carried into this infant millennium. Yes, it's early, but it might be late enough, almost six years in, to exclaim to all those who will listen – Instant Hand Sanitizer just could be one of the greatest trends of the new century.

Even better, the invention of teeny, tiny bottles of the addictive stuff makes OCD sufferers and the anal-retentive germ free while on the run. Fleeing from a large dust bunny would be much more stressful if we couldn't wash our hands, without water, during the panicked jog. The most popular brands of the alcohol-based personal hand-cleaners claim to eradicate 99.99% of germs that "may" make you or your family sick. It says nothing of Anthrax, toxic waste, vegetable pesticides, chlorine in our ground water, the long-lost Alar-tainted apples, or depression, but the flu is pretty annoying on its own. Just squirt a blob onto your fear stricken and shaking hands after exposure to non-motion-sensor-operated flushing mechanisms, and rub. Rub like you mean it. Coat every inch of those digits, of your palms, and BOOM – the liquid that smells remarkably like Grey Goose will magically disappear along with millions of invisible bacteria intent on keeping you from the final weeks of summer.

Some argue that keeping bacteria and viral loads outside the velvet rope to the microscopic party on your body depletes resistance to their nefarious deeds. With overuse, this is probably true, but Instant Hand Sanitizer doesn't need to be compulsively applied. A wash on the road before wrapping your hands around a greasy, drive-through burger or before digging pork rinds from between your teeth with a well-traveled fingernail is probably appropriate. Popcorn at Yankee Stadium – also a good idea – no matter how nice the weather is in the Bronx that day. Moderation is the key to life and its pleasures.

For some, water-free washing is convenience more than obsession. Ever spill coffee on the way to work? If you're a wimp and add milk and sugar, it can be a sticky situation. Tissues or that McDonald's napkin on the floor from lunch two weeks ago will only serve to dry the sugary mess, assuring a terribly uncomfortable morning. But what's this? A little of the old Sanitizer and you're good to go, shaking hands and signing contracts like a man without a brown, Montana-sized stain on his new shirt. This is where the true beauty of waterless cleaner lies.

Purell is probably the most common brand, but there are options out there. Purell actually makes a second formula, complete with aloe, for keeping hands soft. Also look for Kimberly Clark, 3M Nexcare, Avant, and AQtiv alcohol-free Sanitizer with a Povidone Iodine base. Be warned – AQtiv does not have the comforting vodka smell desirable to those of us who, sadly, feel safe enjoying such a bouquet. Recently, it came to this writer's attention that Target and other monstrous super-chains have devised their own semi-generic versions of the basic Purell formula for a slightly reduced price. They work just fine.

The world is a scary place – or so they tell me. Like quitting smoking and putting inflatable pads on your bath faucets or plastic locks on your cabinets to protect your children from the "modern dangers" of bumping their head or dropping a frying pan on their toes, Instant Hand Sanitizer keeps us one more foot from the grave. Be safe. Be safe. You are clearly in danger. Avian Flu, SARS, E. Coli, West Nile, Mad Cow and maybe Smallpox are at every turn. It's possible that they're not. It's possible that you may not live in the third world after all, but when over-consuming the pounds and pounds of dripping, meaty goodness at every roadside stop, you may not want the last guy to flush touching your food.

Face the Facts About Aging

With age, faces show the effects of gravity, sun exposure, and movement. Underlying tissues break down, wrinkles appear, and drooping occurs. But advances in skin care offer an array of one-hour "lunchtime fixes" to correct "worry lines," "crow's feet," and loose skin with little or no need for anesthesia. These procedures may be all you need to feel better about your appearance. After these procedures, you can usually return to work the same day, without scars, raw surfaces, or noticeable swelling. You won't see the full effect that first day, but the benefits appear quickly, with zero downtime.

I recommend a skin care program to all my patients for use before and after these procedures. (www.mcskin.com). Topical skin care products like my Rewind Age-Defying Cream help reduce fine lines and wrinkles and enhance the improvement when used in combination with the lunchtime treatments. The most effective solution is often a combination of various resurfacing treatments combined with a daily skin care program.

Microdermabrasion minimizes fine lines, and is ideal for the neck. A narrow instrument sprays fine crystals at the skin and a tiny vacuum then removes the debris and skin particles. The procedure isn't painful, but it doesn't tickle either – it's been compared to a salt scrub, but it must be repeated before results are evident. I developed a special formula (Dr Michelle Copeland Microdermabrasion Formula) that makes these benefits available right at home.

Laser skin resurfacing, hair removal, vein "zapping," and eliminating age spots vary depending on the wavelength of laser light, pulse duration, and body location. Ablative lasers can smooth deep wrinkles and mottled or pockmarked skin by removing the top layer of damaged skin and encouraging growth of healthy cells. Ablative laser treatment can leave the face raw and red for weeks (and sometimes for months) and carries the risk of scarring. If you don't have time to go into hiding, non-ablative, light-touch lasers may be right for you. These remove only the topmost layer of skin by a thermal effect that stimulates the deep elastic tissue, tightening the skin. Apart from temporary redness, these non-ablative lasers have few side effects, and patients usually return to work immediately. Over the course of several treatments, collagen cells beneath the surface reorganize, imparting to the skin a tighter, youthful texture. This is ideal for people with mild wrinkling or sagging – and it won't leave you walking around for months looking like you have the worst sunburn of your life!

Another method, Intense Pulsed Light (IPL), is one of the most effective wrinkle reducers. While technically not a laser, IPL uses light to trigger collagen growth, and helps correct pigmentation problems like rosacea and age spots.

The greatest effect sometimes comes from combining the three techniques: Microdermabrasion to smooth the skin surface, light-touch laser to tighten underlying connective tissue, and IPL to trigger collagen growth and erase pigmentation.

Radiofrequency remodeling (such as Thermage) passes through the skin more deeply than lasers, resulting in a lifting effect (sometimes referred to as a "scarless face-lift"). This is ideal when combined with non-ablative laser treatments.

For people too busy for a traditional facelift, the Threadlift lifts, tightens and recontours the face using threads inserted beneath the skin. The procedure is performed with local anesthesia and takes about an hour; recovery is quick and surgical scars are avoided.

Soft tissue fillers for facial lines and creases provide, temporarily, a more youthful appearance. Injected beneath the skin, these fillers plump up wrinkled or sunken areas and add fullness to the cheeks and lips. One such filler is hyaluronic acid, derived from plants or produced in a laboratory (including Restylane, Perlane, Juviderm, and Hylaform). Scientists are using tissue-engineering techniques, to cultivate stem cells to produce improved injectable fillers. With so many products on the market, it's important to be sure that the filler you choose is FDA-approved for your needs, and that the doctor is licensed to use it. Botox injections, the most popular procedure, paralyze the muscles of the face to relax wrinkles, rather than plumping like fillers.

While the effects of these methods are only temporary and refresher injections are needed every few months, the results can be so dramatic that people sometimes enjoy these regular cosmetic tune-ups. Ironing-out wrinkles using topical skin creams, lasers, fillers, and resurfacing techniques are just some of the ways to improve your appearance quickly, predictably and economically.

If you've abused your skin (as most of us have, to some extent) then cleansing, exfoliating, moisturizing, and sun protection are good ways to start undoing the damage.

Soccer: The Rightful World Series

Growing up in the United States, I took for granted that baseball was the most popular sport in the world. After all, it was my dad's favorite sport, and he was the smartest man in the world. Besides, every year there was a World Series to prove, time and again, that the Yankees were the best. When I thought about why the rest of the world was never involved in the World Series, and that only Canada made the occasional appearance, I just assumed that no one else was as good at baseball as we were. It took a long time before I thought, "Hmm… maybe the rest of the world is busy playing something else. Maybe somewhere, there is a place where the World Series actually involves the whole world." But what one activity could this tumultuous planet ever agree on?

The answer, of course, is futbol. Not FOOTball. Not tackle-him-to-the-ground, who-has-the-best-commercials-on-Super-Bowl-Sunday-football. Futbol, or what we here in the States call soccer, might just be the solution to the world's woes. Although from what I hear from my friend in Rome, soccer may also be the cause of World War III. There, the visiting fans are segregated into a separate section, with about eight rows of empty seats on either side, and tall glass walls to protect them from the home team's abuse. Still, though, plenty of injuries occur in the stands when the game gets heated.

I spent some time in Costa Rica, another country where the only channel ever blaring on the television is shouting "Gol… Gol!!" While I was there, there was a qualifying game for the World Cup. And this time, by world, I mean World. Costa Rica would be playing Mexico to see who would advance. The buzz around the capitol city, San Jose, was tangible.

My friend Melissa and I were going to immerse ourselves in the Central American culture in the best way available: attend the game. We bought tickets way in advance and secured our room in a hostel in San Jose. The road took us all over the map, but the date – March 31 – was emblazoned on our minds. We would be in San Jose for the Big Game.

About a week before the game, a dirty rumor reached my ears. No fans would be allowed into the stadium for the big game. Supposedly, in the most recent game, fans started throwing bottles onto the field, endangering the players, and some fans were hurt. So San Jose was cracking the whip. The players would play to an empty stadium. I couldn't believe it. I didn't believe it. Would it ever happen in the United States that one of the most anticipated events of the year would be closed to the public? All that lost revenue in ticket sales? I have to say, as disappointed as I was, I was impressed. We had been grounded.

Another instance that awakened me to the significance of soccer occurred when I was in Barcelona. I wanted to rent a car and drive around Spain. The first question the rental agent asked was, "Are you planning to go to Madrid?"

Of course I was. How could I drive around an entire country and not make a stop in the capital? The man behind the counter shook his head. He basically told me that he would never rent a car with Barcelona license plates to someone bound for Madrid. The risk is just too high: the tires may get slashed, the windows broken, or worse. Why, you ask? Futbol.

The point is that there is nothing as unpredictable or passionate as a die-hard soccer (futbol) fan. It is at once a unifying and a dividing force. But every country with a soccer team understands that passion.

In 1998, the World Cup was attentively observed by 1.7 billion people. That is roughly one-third of the world's population. That same year, the Super Bowl drew 800 million spectators. The World Cup consists of 32 teams who have qualified, after regional elimination tournaments, to see who's really the best in the world. Brazil has more titles than any other country, with four World Cup Championships.

In a recent book by Franklin Foer called How Soccer Explains the World: An Unlikely Theory of Globalization, the impact of this sport, by far the most popular on earth, is explored in greater detail. To bring this global phenomenon closer to home, all you need is a ball and some space. The Maidstone Park in Springs, Agawam Park in Sag Harbor, or any local beach offer fabulous venues to set up a couple of goals and kick around the world's favorite toy: the soccer ball.

Nice 'do

Before there were clothes, before there was ever a concept known as "style," and back when an ideal meal was a few scavenged berries and a dead woolly mammoth, there was only one way in which our ancestors could best distinguish themselves and establish their individuality: their hairstyle.

Since the earliest records of ancient civilizations, one's hairstyle has, for the most part, exemplified or dictated their social status in society. For instance, during the Pharaoh days of Egypt it was customary for noblemen and women to clip their hair as close to the head as possible. Only they were given the privilege of having the free time as well as resources to have their hair tended to and adjusted.

In classical Greece, short and simple hairstyles remained popular for the powerful men who had more important things to ponder than their coiffure, while women embraced the beauty of longer hairstyles.

By the time the mighty Roman empire came into power, artificial styling methods became more prevalent as wealthy women used dyes to make their hair blonde like the goddesses and men used wire frames to keep longer hair out of their eyes and creatively styled or braided on top. It was during this era that barbershops came into fruition. Ever since, numerous hairstyles have emerged and have represented personal flair and creativity more than social status.

With so many options and "looks" out there these days, it is difficult to pick a hairdo and stick with it. My earliest attempt at having such a "look" was in the early 90s – a straight-up mimicking of popular pretty-boy Brandon Walsh from television's "Beverly Hills 90210." With the hair long enough to have bangs, the trend was to gel it up and part it nicely down one side while the front was a wave of hair above the brow. As popularity of Seattle grunge-rockers made its way to the East Coast later that same decade, the shorter, tailored hair became longer and rattier with the intent of a bad-boy, rock star rebel appearance. By the time high school was half-way over, however, I had no hair but a buzz cut. The busy life of a high-school student-athlete-socialite had little time for hair care, so I managed to cut my shower and prep time by at least 15 minutes. Today I keep it short enough to avoid extra maintenance while adding some lemon juice in the summer to bring out the blond in dirty-blond, and add a touch of palmade only for a special occasion or when having delusions that I may actually get "discovered" on the streets of the Hamptons.

Today's cuts for women tend to have a medium length in which the tips come down to just above or below the shoulder line. It's a nice compromise amidst what is considered very short (cut at or above the ear line), short (between the ear and jaw line) and long (below the shoulder). Both extremes have their advantages, though. Shorter hair as you age can help maintain an adorable and youthful look. Meanwhile, longer hair is great because you can enjoy the surface area of your flowing hair, as long as you don't mind the extra time it takes to dry and manage it.

Short or long, medium or whatever, length is never as important as how you wear the hair. Straight and sleek emits a sense of chic professionalism while frizzy and/or curly screams playfulness. Finding a woman who does not highlight, dye or streak her hair is rare these days. As exotic as that may help you look, keep in mind that there is a growing trend towards the more natural look. Celebrate who you are and stand out because of how great your hair looks, not for how obvious it is that you are not confident in its color.

As coloring trends enter the men's department, with commercials showing girls hanging on guys only after they change their hair color, most guys appear to be sticking to their guns in terms of hair care, and that's a good thing. The semi-spiky and subtly bed-head looks are popular as they emit both a hip eye and casual approach. Taking the time to grow your hair out can still be beneficial these days as many women, believe it or not, fawn over the Fabio look. If you are not into the pretty-boy or hunky surfer dude look with your long hair, by all means try out my personal favorite hairdo, the mullet. In the 80s, mullets were considered a style only worn by NASCAR fans and southern rockers – not anymore. When coun-

In Sagaponack, the site of the Sagg General Store may soon be transformed into the new town center if the upcoming vote is passed to make Sagaponack an Incorporated Village. The store is a landmark country store and well-known gathering place on Sagg Main, just before the beach.

Sagaponack has become one of the most popular areas in the Hamptons and interest in properties there has significantly increased over the past few years. It has been popularized in films such as Something's Gotta Give, where it features a very typical Hamptons shingle-style home on the ocean. Once strictly farmland, the area still has that appeal, although it has filled in with its fair share of mansions, out in the former fields and running along the ocean.

At $25 million, on its own private 1.5 acre pond in Sagaponack is a newly constructed 6500sq ft farmhouse on 14 acres. The home has a private dock that juts out over the pond, an outdoor entertaining area that includes a huge outdoor stone fireplace and a guest cottage. The heated pool sits out on the pond as well. This traditional style estate home has 6 bedrooms and 8 baths. It is listed with Allan M. Schneider Associates in Bridgehampton.

Another Sagaponack home for sale in that price range is a 10,500 sq ft contemporary on 3.2 acres of oceanfront that also borders Fairfield Pond. This sprawling contemporary home has 7 bedrooms and 8 1/2 baths, a den, gym, a third floor ocean viewing area as well as 9000 sq ft of decking. There are staff's quarters and an indoor pool pavilion and spa. There is an oceanside Jacuzzi and views from all three levels.

To be built: If it's land you want you can pick up a prime piece on beautiful Sagg Pond with a dock already in place, complete with permits for a substantial 10, 000 sq ft estate home and legal guesthouse. The home, guesthouse and land will go for $17 million.

And on Parsonage Lane in Sagaponack, there is an 8500 sq ft traditional style custom estate already under construction on four acres. This one also has 8 bedrooms and 9 full baths as well as two half-baths. It has a gym, over-sized pool and spa, media room, gaming pavilion, wine cellar, sauna, billiards and all-weather tennis. It is listed with Sotheby's International at $15,900,000. The home will be completed next spring.

With all the amenities listed above, when it comes to price, it is all relative. You trade one amenity for another or $$ can go up or down depending on what body of water you may prefer or your proximity to it. In the $15 to $25 million range, you are really looking at the cream of the crop, which includes just about everything one could want or need. Homes at that price should come equipped with amenities to serve your every need, even here in the Hamptons.

promise myself to simplify, to minimize, to pack less next time, to buy less, to give to charity, to need less. Maybe my father was right. Maybe we should bring only what we can carry on our backs.

Maybe all I needed was my toothbrush.

So, my advice to all movers, renters and packers is most simple: Take less. But let's be realistic, we can't reverse centuries of acquired behavior with one little article. However, there are a few steps to take to make the moving process less grueling. Buy plastic crates in advance. Make sure to have duct tape. Make a list. Also for you serious hoarders, don't be timid, Call a moving service! But be careful who you trust with your valuables (or invaluables or not valuables at all).

Man with a Truck Moving Service is known for being very punctual. Goodfriend Storage has climate controlled storage facilities and Twin Forks Moving and Storage call themselves "piano experts." Try Mark Press Moving and Storage, MJ Movers or Ihaul Moving too. And remember, less is more.

try star Billy Ray Cyrus broke out in the music scene in the early 90s, this style, with long hair draped only down the back and not on the sides, immediately became mainstream. Today, the mullet coiffure emits a bold appearance with a casual attitude, and it is a popular way to go.

Of course, how hairstyles are worn depends on the individual's physical traits and personal preferences. Do not let anyone tell you how to wear your hair, but always listen to suggestions and new ideas. Consult your stylist or barber for the best advice and don't be afraid to give yourself a solid stare in the mirror. With summer on its way out, it's time to consider your look for autumn.

UNLEASH YOUR POTENTIAL!

Everyone dreams of buying the perfect home. And why not? You'll never find what you want if you don't first know what you want! You'll also never find your dream home if you insist on living in a dream world. In other words, don't be unrealistic or unwilling to compromise.

All homes – even newly built ones – require some work to make them perfect for you. There are several ways to update that make a dramatic difference when you've found a home in the right location at the right price. An open mind helps you make your decision by allowing more possibilities.

You may not find all the right criteria – price, condition and location – in one single home. Compromising on any of these factors can result in a very satisfying purchase. Negotiation is a normal part of any real estate transaction, especially if you've found a great home a little further out than you planned, or a home in need of improvements that happens to be located in your perfect neighborhood.

Real estate agents will understand that communities rely on revitalization. Buyers willing to improve their property keep towns and cities thriving. Pride of ownership helps homes in these communities gain in value, and helps the owners gain in equity. That is the true potential behind creativity and compromise, so don't be afraid to explore it!

If you are thinking about purchasing a property in Palm Beach, use the best! With over 20 years of real estate experience, my personalized service and attention to detail guarantees that you will find the property that precisely fits your needs. My passion is Palm Beach, let me make it yours. Call me today: 561.371.0002.

WHAT A PARTY!
Dear Dan,

From the minute one entered Hampton Hall under the appropriately sapphire blue and white arch and was warmly greeted, it was apparent that this was going to be one old-fashioned fun, family reunion. Although we can't recall a family reunion that laid out such a lavish spread – filet mignon, sesame crusted tuna, the raw bar and our favorite, the pasta station (the Carbonara was the hands down winner). Well, oh maybe our favorite was the ZYR Vodka stand.

Kudos to you, your staff and Hamptons Resort Hospitality for pulling off one of the best parties of the summer. Special congrats (and thanks for adding to our already expanding waistline) to kitchen wizards, our old friends chefs Frank Tramontano and Mary Spellman. They both have been much missed in these parts. It's good to have them back home.

Thanks also for 45 years of provocative, engaging and entertaining reading. Your regular chronicling of the rich, famous, infamous and local heroes and villains continues to make Dan's Papers the "must read" – even though we have been occasionally gulled by your fantastic fables!

YOU'RE WELCOME
Dear Dan,

Thank you for the wonderful story you wrote about my family. Everybody that read it has cried. This story was different than everybody else. My mother and I thank you again; it will be framed in the tasting room.

ART IN EAST HAMPTON
Dear Dan,

I was sorry to bother you while you were buying a new car at Apple Honda today.

To update you on information since the East Hampton Star front page article on Grandeland Sculptural Park." At the East Hampton board meeting August 18, I and Phyllis Hamond, an East Hampton sculptor and Vice President of the Artist Alliance of East Hampton convinced the board to postpone the resolution vote to Friday, September 2, at 10:30 a.m.

Mrs. Soffer also spoke; saying her eighty-year old husband will not receive the million plus purchase price, but it will go to the Soffer Foundation. Supervisor McGintee said that the town would gladly receive donations of properties, houses and artist studio (but no mention of million dollar payments). Mention was made about possible historic preservation.

My questions concerning these matters are:

-Is the Town Board just buying the land or is it also paying for six large sculptures?

-Should other East Hampton sculptors of large works be included in the garden?

-Will this president lead artists to be advised by their estate lawyers to make similar donations?

-Who will choose which artist?

-Will Mr. Soffer's artistic reputation be enhanced monetarily by this park memorializing his art by the Town Board's purchase in this world famous artist community?

Thank you.

LEARN SOMETHING NEW EVERY DAY
Dear Dan,

I read your article about America on Bush. I love solving cryptograms, and just after reading this article, the next solving was: "What are the triumphs of war, planned by ambition, executed by violence, and consummated by devastation? The means are the sacrifice of many, the end the bloated aggrandizement of the few." by Charles Caleb Colton. Not knowing who he was, I looked him up on the Internet, and voila! See how educational your paper is?

WHOSE VOTE COUNTS?
Dear Dan,

In the last year or so I changed my voting registration to Sagaponack just so I could vote on issues such as the one scheduled for Sept. 2nd. However, I will not be in Sagaponack that day and thus will not be able to vote because there are no absentee ballots according to the Southampton town clerk and the board of elections.

I cannot believe I am being disenfranchised. My vote could make a difference; this is ridiculous.

GET IT WRITE
Dear Dan,

Ninth year playing. This year I hit the Writer's only home run. Drove in runs. Got a HIT off the 80-mph softball pitcher – not a soft fly to short for an out. That hit also scored a run.

Just an FYI.

Police Blotter

Tumultuous Tent Tenants

Two homeless men eager to enjoy their summer in the Hamptons but lacking the financial means to do so, decided to camp out in tents in the Hampton Bays area. Apparently, the view from their railroad-front property lost its aesthetic value and things went awry. Whether the men were fighting over alcohol, drugs, spoils from that day's garbage retrieval, or were just agitated at missing Mort Zuckerman play in the Artists-Writers Baseball game this year has yet to be determined. However, everything went downhill after one of the tent tenants took a grand slam swing at his friend's face with a wooden baseball bat. The victim will probably be hard-pressed to return to the scenic Hampton Bays retreat eight weeks from now, when the wire inside his jaw is removed. As for the assailant, the state of New York might be providing him food and shelter if the second degree assault charges stick.

Sketchy Slumber Party

Summer in the Hamptons often brings houseguests that stay too long, and even some that were never invited. After a quiet Blockbuster night by herself, an Amagansett woman was shocked when she walked downstairs the following morning and found a straggler asleep on a cot in the living room. Not one for confrontations with heavily intoxicated men, the lady called police, who arrived shortly after and escorted the man off the property. Before leaving, the unwelcome sleepover guest apologized and claimed to have been so drunk the night before that he had no recollection of even entering the house.

Have Car: Will trade for crack/cocaine!

A 39-year-old Hampton Bays resident sang a sad tune to police officers after his car was reportedly carjacked in Flanders. However, detectives discovered the self-proclaimed victim was merely blowing smoke to cover up a far more heinous situation. After "loaning" his automobile to a local drug dealer in order to receive an unspecified amount of crack/cocaine, the absent-minded addict ended up strung out, sad and without a set of wheels to go home in. The crackhead who cried car thief was charged with falsely reporting an incident in the third degree and making false statements, both misdemeanors.

A Maid's Worst Nightmare

Having to take care of an estate in Sagaponack is hard enough work without vandals ransacking the property. A maid in charge of a home on Sagg Pond Court reported to authorities that someone had broken into her employer's garage and damaged their car. The windshield was shattered by a large piece of wood, the body and hood had dents in them, all the tires were slashed and the backseat upholstery had been sliced. Trashing a person's car must be more dangerous than it sounds, because the maid also found drops of blood around the car. Police haven't found any substantial leads and no arrests have been made.

Upstream with a Different Paddle

A Montauk woman living on Fort Pond thought she was seeing things after walking out to her dock. Her light blue kayak had been replaced by a grey one that was older and more worn down. After thinking she was seeing things, the woman told her husband, who checked the shoreline by their house and found a suspicious man paddling away in the missing kayak. The thief hopped out at the Stone Lion Inn on Edgemere Road and fled on foot. The kayak switching scoundrel has yet to be apprehended.

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpecting motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble an ellipitical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.

HAMPTON BAYS BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Built in the early 1900s, this Victorian style home, known as The Springville House, is one of the last standing boarding houses in the area. Family-owned and operated for over 60 years, it is situated on 1.4 acres, south of Montauk Highway, and approximately 2 miles from ocean and bay beaches.

This 3,400-square-foot apartment house consists of four one-bedroom and one three-bedroom apartment. At the rear of the premises stands a one-bedroom cottage and two separate one-car garages. As a pre-existing business located in a residential (R-20) zoning area, there are expansion possibilities.

BRIDGEHAMPTON HORSE COUNTRY

Your weekend begins with a relaxing drive along country lanes and farm fields to a long private road leading to a hand-hewn shingled Traditional sited on five and a half acres of rolling lawns with sweeping views across agricultural reserve. This recently completed gambrel combines the elegance of an old country manor with every modern comfort of new construction. The gracious paneled grand entry foyer invites you into this 6 bedroom and 6 bath Hampton country residence. The finely appointed master suite with fireplace enjoys a second floor deck that spans the rear of the house and overlooks the gunite pool and tranquil pond. Custom moldings, French doors and expansive windows, adorn the living room with fireplace, media room and library. The spacious kitchen which features state-of-the-art equipment, granite counters and fine custom cabinetry enjoys an adjoining sunlit dining area or dining out on the covered porch. A three car garage with bonus room above, full 10 foot ceiling basement with generator and room for tennis complete the picture. This desirable property features a Prime location just minutes from Atlantic Golf Course, Bridgehampton town and ocean beaches. Offered at $6,995,000.

The Ultimate Hamptons
Destination In Quogue

Quogue waterways have always been held in high esteem as some of the most beautiful and pristine areas of the Hamptons. Through the fine efforts of the Peconic Land Trust, over sixty acres have been preserved to remain pristine forever. In the middle of all this beauty lies the Rosner Estate, created by the distinguished architect Jay Lockett Sears, with designer finished interiors, gourmet kitchen, and an open floor plan that ushers in all the natural beauty that surrounds it. Four bedrooms, three baths, heated pool, wraparound decks to enjoy the views that are spectacular in every direction- the ocean, the bay, the parade of yachts on the inland waterway. Fabulous upstairs master suite with fireplace, private mahogany deck, and vistas that reach from Southampton to Quogue and everything in between. This landmark home is a privileged, one-of-a-kind setting that cannot be duplicated.

Clarke Island

THE ULTIMATE REALITY EXPERIENCE - YOUR OWN PRIVATE ISLAND

100 acres of private tranquil untouched beauty lie less then 20 miles from the cosmopolitan city of Halifax. Clarke Island is truly one of the last jewels of Nova Scotia's desirable South Shore. A short drive along the scenic Lighthouse Route leads you to this beautiful island nestled just 100 yards off shore in the protected cove of Blind Bay. Clarke is a natural paradise; whales, seals and bald eagles are just some of the wildlife that can be seen from the island. This region is famous for its world class lobsters, mussels and giant bluefin tuna fishing. Sailing and Boating is nothing short of spectacular with safe harbor and deep water surrounding the island. Clarke Island is ideal for anyone seeking the solitude of their own private paradise or wanting to develop a small community in a safe haven. Private right of way access from the mainland and a 30 foot fishing boat complete this once in a lifetime opportunity. There are hundreds of islands in Nova Scotia but there are none left like Clarke. This rare island is still in one pristine piece.

Tired of the Hamptons?

You thought you'd give it one more try in 2005, but...

- Traffic on the LIE was worse than ever
- Somehow, those A-list parties forgot you
- Your beach house has appreciated 300%

Why not try Bucks County?

Less than 90 minutes from Manhattan, Bucks County, PA offers wide open countryside, vast parks and recreation on the Delaware River, and plenty of great dining, shopping and cultural events. You may even want to talk to your tax advisor about the benefits of making PA your primary home.

Gold Coast Mansion Set on 24 Majestic Acres

Set in historic Cold Spring Harbor, this property consists of 24 majestic acres and abuts large tracts of state and county protected lands. The large maintained lawns and hedgerows are planted and mature with numerous unique and varied specimen trees and shrubs. There are also a myriad of perennial gardens and plantings, which gives one the sense of being at an arboretum. The property is impeccably maintained in every aspect. The stately main house is a 1934 Georgian 20-room mansion designed by renowned architect Mott B. Schmidt, and has lovely views of the harbor it sits above and across Long Island Sound. The 61-foot flagpole overlooks the view, as does the pool. Some of the amenity outbuildings include a handsome pool cabana with kitchenette, tennis court, and greenhouse, a two-stall stable and equipment shed. There are also two Georgian style cottages and a 170-year-old completely restored farmhouse, oversized workshop, a children's playhouse, and a two-bedroom caretakers apartment as well as numerous garages. This property is a wonderfully private escape from the busy world, which one needs to see to truly appreciate. $19,500,000

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

TITAN™

The new TITAN™ technology uses a unique light source (Optical Energy) that works on various areas of sagging and drooping skin such as the face, neck, stomach, upper arms, and looseness over cellulite. Now there is a way to achieve a "non-surgical face lift or bodylift" with minimal pain, no down time, and a fraction of the cost of plastic surgery. The TITAN™ is the pain-free alternative to "Thermage."
